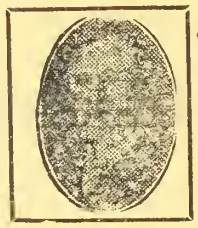
The BULL-DOG STRAIN

Champion Norwich and Yorkshires.

20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- per pair.



The above strain needs no bounce. All I need do is to refer you to the reports of leading shows. My birds have won consistently. For years they have been in the front rank, winning numerous champion trophies of the Specialist Clubs. I have also bred and sold birds that have won for my clients all over the country. Testimonials in proof of this are always open for the inspection of my visitors. There is no better blood in the Fancy. I am now offering a few pairs bred from these noted winners at above prices. Single birds, cocks or hens, at proportionate prices. Every bird is worth double. I have also a number of good birds from other well-known strains as follows: Smart Thick-set Cocks, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Good Cobby Hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, in perf ct feather and condition, and on full song, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Erect racy Hens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6. Matched Breeding Pairs, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. EXHIBITION YORKSHIRES, bred from my own winners, and ready for immediate benching, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each upwards.

MARCH, 1915. UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. MARCH, 1915.

The following testimonials, in addition to scores of others (which are always open for the inspection of my visitors) have been received during March, 1915:—"Heming Street, South Vancouver, Canada.—I received the 3 pairs Yorkshires in A1 condition, after a journey of 7,000 odd miles. They give me every satisfaction. I shall not regret having put my order in your hands. You shall have more orders for your honest trading.—S. Watters to Joe Thomas."

"4, Victoria Street, Caerau, Bridgend.—I received birds quite safe. I must say they are beauties and I am more than satisfied.—. Sparks to Joe Thomas."

High Street, Belfast.—Bird arrived safe and I am well pleased with same.—A. Purvis to Joe Thomas."

"Stanhope Street, Leeds.—Birds arrived safely. They are a grand pair and I am well satisfied.—J. Mundell to Joe Thomas."

"32, Morgan Street, Trehafod, nr. Pontypridd.—Received birds safe. Am perfectly satisfied. When I want more I will remember J. Thomas and recommend to my friends.—A. Addis to J. Thomas."

"Polmaise Place, Cowie, Stirling.—I got the birds all safe and am quite satisfied; and how quick you are to send the order when you get it!—J. Forsyth to Joe Thomas."

"Crossford, Dunfermline.—The Pair Norwich arrived safely. I am highly pleased with them. I will always recommend you to intending purchasers as a genuine gentleman to deal with. I have instructed Editor to forward you the cash deposited.—J. Lister to Joe Thomas."

Elson Villa, Ellesmere, Salop.—Birds arrived safely. I am very pleased with them. In dealing with you one gets quality and cheapness combined, and above all, straightforward dealings.—T. E Chetwood to Joe Thomas."

"5, Wemyss Place, Glasgow.—Received birds quite safe. They are a lovely pair. I am quite satisfied.—R. Buchanan to Joe Thomas."

"52, Treharne Street, Cwmpark.—Received Roller safe, singing in the pink. It is a treat to listen to it.—Jack Jones to Joe Thomas."

"49, Park Terrace, Tondu.—I received the Border Fancies quite safe and am very proud to have two such songsters in my house. They are both good; in fact, the best I have ever seen. They are a beautiful colour and sing, I think, better than the Rollers. I must say I can always depend on having a good bird from you each time. I have had dealings with over 20 bird fanciers but you have been the most honest of them all, and that's a big name. You are the only man that has satisfied my wants, and when you can do that you can do a lot. I thank you for your straightforward dealings with me. You can make what use of this letter you like.—Fred L. Prosser to Joe Thomas."

Considerations of space only prevent me from publishing scores similar to above, but please remember this: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to all customers.

Hartz Canaries

Voogt's Strain.

I must apologise for the delay in sending out the last consignment. The 1,260 Hens and 210 Cocks III. only arrived Sunday night, 21st inst. By Monday, 22nd inst., midday, all the above were sold. 1,470 birds sold in three hours. The delay was caused by the difficulty experienced in collecting from the numerous breeders. There will be only a few more birds sent over, and I advise intending purchasers to send in their orders early. The next consignment due to arrive on Monday next, 29th inst., should consist of:

3 Crates—1,260 HENS.

Note Alteration in Prices.

Hens, No. I. class, to match Cocks I. class, 3/- each. Ordinary Cocks, 2 in wicker cage, 3/-; 14 in 7 cages, 18/8. The lowest price per 100 is 1/4 each; next week, 1/6 each.

Cocks No. I., 12/- each; 7 in 7 cages, 80/-. These are birds with surpassing singing powers. They mostly have soft, sweet musical notes, and improve day by day. Universal satisfaction given.

Cocks No. II., 7/6 each; 7 in 7 cages, 42/-. These are the birds usually advertised having the Nightingale and Woodlark note, with sundry other qualifications

Cocks, No. III., 6/- each; 7 in 7 cages, 35/-. There is a great demand for this class of bird, all being good, sound, serviceable Rollers.

Distinctly understand all order accompanied by cash; are guaranteed to be sent out in order received.

TERMS.—Cash with order only. All my customers may rely upon receiving birds answering above descriptions. They are at liberty to lodge any complaint with the Editor of "Cage Birds," by whose decision I shall abide. Telephone: 6341 Avenue.

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatecls is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Twitterings.

The membership cards of the Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby have now been issued, and any one overlooked can have one by applying to me, writes Mr. Robert Lile, sec., 15, Argyll Terrace, Edinburgh.

We are hoping for a good revival during the coming season, writes Mr. J. A. Withers, the new hon. sec. of Bristol C.B.S., and hope that all members will attend the next monthly meeting on April 7 for important business.

The balance sheet of the Harrogate C.B.S. shows a very satisfactory result of the year's work. The balance of £2 15s. 10d. brought forward has been increased to £9 2s. 4d., and tables and trestles are valued at £5, after allowing for depreciation.

Kindly mention in Cage Birds, writes Mr. G. J. Slade, that I am no longer sec. to the Cage-bird Section of the Southampton P.P. and C.B.A. Mr. F. A. Fanstone, "Mosslynn," Lordswood Avenue, Bassett, Southampton, is still the general hon sec., but in the present position of affairs it was not considered necessary to reappoint section secs.

You will be pleased to hear that I find business is quite brisk at present, writes Mr. J. Pitchford, the well-known dealer, of the Fanciers' Stores, London Road, Stoke-on-Trent. I have been very busy dispatching goods, etc., to all parts of the country and, what is most satisfactory, many orders are from old customers. I shall be pleased to send, on receipt of name and address, my illustrated price-list to any fancier requiring aviary and bird-room requisites, bird foods, etc.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

In consequence of the Easter Holidays next week's issue of CAGE BIRDS will be published one day earlier, and be on sale Thursday Morning, April 1st. All "copy" must reach us on Monday, or by Tuesday (Mar. 30) first post at latest.

ADVERTISERS

Remember to send your advertisements NEXT WEEK to reach us TUESDAY FIRST POST CERTAIN.

FURTHER: Kindly send along your advertisements for the following week's issue (date April 10th) at the same time.

We are notified of the following changes of secretaryship: Croydon F.A., Messrs. F. B. Roberts and A. F. Hudd, 21, Queen's Rd., Croydon, in place of Mr. F. W. Capell; Coventry Godiva C.B.S., R. Symonds, 25, Arden St., Earlsdon, Coventry, in place of Mr. H. Saunders; Cambois C.B.S., G. Hutchinson, 27, Mawburn Terrace, Cambois, Blyth, in place of J. E. Elliott; Larkhall C.B.A., T. M'Gregor, Saryville Crescent, Larkhall, in place of A. Thomson; Bristol C.B.S., J. A. Withers, 21, Little Paradise, Bedminster, Bristol, in place of Mrs. Pool.

Some Shows of Next Season.

The following show dates have been fixed. Will secs. please note, in order to avoid clashing: Alfreton C.B.S., Oct. 30; West Bromwich C.B.S., Nov. 19-20; Haltwhistle C.B.S., Nov., 19-20.

Are You Equipped to Succeed?

The present—the early spring—is always an anxious time for enthusiasts; because on their doings just now depends their success or failure at the next shows, and their chances either of producing birds that will win, and so provide a grand recompense for the time and trouble expended upon them or, contrariwise, of being saddled with birds that are inglorious failures. To the cage-bird enthusiast who has "almost won" in other years, we cordially commend the Waverley Book Company's advantageous offer to send their grand book, which covers the whole subject of successful breeding of Canaries and Hybrids of every description, for one week's free use by any reader of this paper. No charge nor obligation goes with the acceptance of this very enterprising offer. The publishers rely on the cage-bird enthusiast finding the book so very helpful while he is using it for the seven days allowed free that he will decide that he simply must have it—"for keeps." If he does decide to keep it, he may pay for it by a few monthly half-crowns while he is using the book and deriving money-making help from its pages. Straightforward dealing can scarcely go farther than this straightforward free offer of the Waverley Book Co., Ltd. (7, 8, and 9, Old Bailey, London, E.C.). A free form, which will bring the book to you, will be found on page 189 of this issue.

In the report of the show of the Crystal Palace and Penge C.B.S. Goldf. 1, 2, 3, 4, Humphries should read 1, and sp. Humphries, 2, 3, 4, Cory.

To Foreign Bird Lovers.

Keepers of foreign birds who delight in exhibiting, or who contemplate exhibiting, their pets, should not overlook the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League, the first and only club solely devoted to forwarding their interests at the shows. The subscription is the small one of 3s. 6d. per annum, and excellent specials are provided for competition amongst members. Fuller particulars will be gladly supplied by the hon. sec., Mr. Allen Silver, 303, High Road, Streatham, London.

The Poultry Boom.

This week's issue of our sister paper, The Poultry World, constitutes its Annual Spring Sales Number. It is full of interesting and practical articles and features and with each number is given a charming Coloured Plate of a pair of fowls. The Spring Sales Number of this Journal is always popular with poultry-keepers the world over, and this year's issue is better than ever. Poultry Culture is booming just now, and "C.B." readers who have a leaning towards fowls should procure a copy of the above-mentioned splendid Double Number. It is on sale to-day, at all newsagents and bookstalls.

Who Will Take Them?

An opportunity presents itself for someone to acquire at a reasonable price a very fine collection of eggs of British Birds. It is the one got together by the recently deceased Mr. J. F. Hills, of Sudbury, so well-known as one of our best judges and keenest bird-lovers. There are, we understand, about 300 different kinds of eggs, contained in an eleven-drawer cabinet. Mr. Hills was offered £10 for the collection some years ago, but declined to sell. The purchaser, we may say, would not only be acquiring a very excellent collection of eggs, but at the same time he would be doing a good turn to the widow. There are also two cases of stuffed British Birds for disposal (42ins wide by 36ins. high). Would-be purchasers are asked to communicate with Mr. C. H. Row, Chapel House, Long Melford, Suffolk.

Spend Easter Profitably.

IT WILL COST YOU ONLY SIXPENCE!

INVEST A "NIMBLE TANNER" IN

and you will be provided with a budget of delightful reading concerning your favourite hobby; you will learn how to save money in many ways on your seed and food bill; how to conduct your operations on a profitable basis; how to regulate your work in the bird-room month by month; how to construct and stock a fascinating aviary; and numberless other things of supreme importance to all bird-keepers.

It will prove the best investment you have ever made.

Read the following opinions of CAGE BIRDS 1915 ANNUAL, selected from scores of appreciative letters that have reached us.

Thanks for Cage Birds 1915 Annual received to-day. It is excellent value, as usual. Any bird fancier who reads the article on "How to reduce the food bill" will be able to save many sixpences.—S.G. Ruby (Cork).

This year's Cage Birds Annual caps all forerunners. You seem to have the knack of catering for the professional, amateur and novice alike, while the war does not seem to have affected the brains of your staff. I am sure a great sale will be your reward, as fanciers will recommend the 1915 Annual to their friends.—J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool).

HEMP SEED AND THE REARING OF YOUNG CANARIES.

Paper read by Mr. J. Bowers before the Stoke-on-Trent C.B.S.

Meeting Mar. 1. A paper was read by Mr. J. Bowers on the use of hemp in rearing young Canaries, and on the completion of the reading, a most interesting discussion ensued. Mr. Ousman said that his experience as a cage-bird fancier was comparatively a short one, so that his opinion on the merits or demerits of hemp seed need not be taken very seriously, but he would just like to mention that he used hemp seed during the breeding season of 1913, and he lost a number of young birds, while last season he did not use any and had no losses; whether hemp seed had anything to do with it or not, he had had better results without it than with it. Mr. Roberts said that he had found hemp seed a most useful and valuable food during the breeding season, especially when weaning young birds off the soft food on to hard seed; he had noticed no ill effects from the use of it, but he took great care to purchase only good quality seed. Mr. N. Leese considered that hemp seed was not essential or desirable; he did not use hemp seed, and had always reared a good number of young birds, but one reason why he objected to it was that he purchased some a few years ago and found it infested with insects, since when he had had none in his room. Mr. Pitchford considered hemp seed was a valuable addition to the bird diet, but care should be taken that only good quality seed be used, and it should be crushed fresh daily for the birds, and all left from the previous day removed; it deteriorated very quickly when crushed. The paper was as follows:—

A Strong Advocate of Hemp Seed.

Being invited to give, in the form of a short paper, my views on the use of hemp in the rearing of young Canaries, I have much pleasure in giving my experience on the subject. It is, I know, a somewhat vexed subject, and in spite of arguments, good, bad, and indifferent, fanciers are wisely reluctant to renounce methods which they have successfully followed in the past. Personally, I am a strong advocate of the use of tightly-cracked, good, sound, and sweet hemp for feeding hens, this method I have followed for some years, and invariably with good results; in fact so strong is my faith in good hemp that I serve it out to my hens on the first day of hatching the young, and continue until the youngsters can do for themselves. But I should like to impress on my hearers that the hemp must be the very best obtainable, as bad hemp for Canaries is like bad stout for human beings, unpalatable, and productive only of trouble. Let us look at the food value of hemp when analysed. Over 16 parts of flesh-forming matter, more than 32 parts of fat and oils, more than 16 parts of starch and sugar, and over 4¼ parts of ash or bone and blood-forming material, and in passing through a bird's system, less than one-tenth of the kernel of a good hemp seed goes to waste. I admit the heavy proportion of oil and fat, but I consider this counterbalanced by the excessive starch (more than one-half) contained in the never-failing supply of Spanish Canary seed.

Summed Up as "Good and Safe."

Some fanciers say that hemp causes birds to feather pluck, but I am not of this opinion, for I had plucking hens before I used hemp, and the use of hemp has not, I believe, been the cause of plucking in my experience. Others say that hemp is responsible for hens going to nest again before finishing off the previous round. This, however, need not of necessity be caused by hemp; I believe any hen which is too high in condition may do so, and any healthy, energetic hen, if favoured with the right weather, will get in high condition on a starvation diet. Still again other fanciers attribute to hemp the "going soft" of youngsters after weaning, but I think that even those who shun hemp as they shun the devil do occasionally get a case of this kind. Therefore, on reviewing my experience of hemp seed, I am induced to decide that it is good and safe. I am satisfied to continue in the use of it, and to recommend its use to others; I think also that in this opinion I have with me the majority of Norwich fanciers, and the minority who condemn the use of hemp will have a lot to do to prove their case. I hope this short statement of my views has merited your interest and approval, and will give rise to some little discussion.

The best thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. Bowers for his excellent paper. Mr. N. Leese will give a paper on Breeding and Rearing Norwich Canaries at next meeting, April 5.

HOW WE BREED OUR WINNING NORWICH.

By C. STUBBS (Of Stubbs Bros., Cheltenham).

This contribution, coming, as it does, from the pen of a member of a firm staging Norwich Plainheads that win in keen competition (vide the Welsh National Show) has an added interest by reason of the controversy on the breed raging in our correspondence columns.

In writing these notes it is not my wish to make other fanciers think mine is the only way to breed the Norwich Canary. Many fanciers have other methods which have proved highly successful; others maybe are not so lucky, therefore it is for them that I pen these lines. I intend to start right at the beginning, which is the bird-room. Let me say here that it is not absolutely necessary to have a bird-room set apart for the breeding of Canaries. Many good birds have been bred in living-rooms. On the other hand birds never breed well in a noisy room, therefore, if it can be managed, a room by itself is best.

I like myself a room facing south-east. My reason for this is, you get the early morning sun, a very important thing, as it brings the birds into splendid breeding condition about the middle of March, besides warming the room up early in the morning. If any fancier intends to put a bird-room up outside, I should advise him to have it double-boarded, with sawdust, or fine wood shaving, packed firmly in between. If you have a single-boarded room, you will find that during the winter months it is damp; drops of moisture will be found hanging from the roof, and on rubbing your hand down the sides you will find them at times wet. For another thing, you get too rapid rises and falls in the temperature. These things are not healthy for the birds; they will stand any amount of cold, but not a damp or draughty room. By having a double-boarded room you will put a stop to all this. Be sure, however, and give your birds as much fresh air as possible.

Where the Double Breeder Scores.

Coming to the cages, I have found the double breeder the best. You can pair your birds up so much better. You have only to put your pair of birds in the cage, with the wire slide in between, and when you see the cock bird feeding his hen, to take the slide away, and the trick is done. Another reason why I favour the D.B. is because the hen will often want to go to nest before her first brood can look after themselves, you can then give her another nest pan at the other end of the cage, and when she starts to sit, put the slide back and the cock will finish off the rearing of the youngsters, otherwise the latter will sure to take up their quarters in the new nest, which will result in broken eggs. Before starting the breeding season you must be sure and give your cages a thorough clean out, or else you will have some trouble with red mite; in fact, I have found that however clean you are you will sure to find some, still, it is best to keep them down as far as possible.

Now we come to the birds themselves, and we must remember that a Norwich must have size, type, quality, and colour. In selecting your birds try and get as much size as possible in your cocks. I think that if you pair a buff cock to a yellow hen you get more size in the youngsters. My reason for this is, many fanciers double buff their birds to improve the size, therefore it goes to prove that size undoubtedly does lie with the buffs, and it is from the cock birds you expect to get your size. Type you will get from the hen, so a medium-sized hen is best, as usually you will find them the most typical.

Points About Pairing.

By pairing a yellow cock to a buff hen you get better quality of feather, and, as a rule, a larger percentage of yellow youngsters. By pairing the young from one pair back to the other, I think you help to keep up your size as well as quality of feather. You will find that if you keep pairing short, typical birds together you will soon lose your size; a cock bird a trifle on the long side, but with plenty of substance, will help to put that right. I have visited several shows this season, and I have found that size counts the most. Without doubt we are losing type, for many of the birds I saw are carrying as much behind the perch as in front (although I must admit I like a good big one myself).

It does not follow that you are bound to have show birds to breed show birds: in fact, winners will often turn up from birds you least expect. If you should breed a bird from medium-sized parents that does well on the show bench be sure to pair it back to birds with plenty of size. And don't put up two birds with the same fault; whatever failing you see in one bird, try to counter-balance it in the other.

I have heard several fanciers say you must not expect good results by pairing two show birds together. Why not, providing they have not had an overdose of the show season? With all due respect to those fanciers, I cannot agree with them. By pairing two show birds together, you are mating birds that have in them all the points, as far as possible that go to the making of the ideal, and you will find that in the majority of cases your best youngsters will come from your best birds. If you visit other fanciers' rooms you will see that in nine cases out of ten they have put the best birds together; therefore my advice is to the beginner—have quality before quantity.

In feeding your birds, give them plain canary seed with just a small portion of rape during the winter months, with a small piece of sweet apple once a week. I have found that my birds do very well on it. I never give them hemp except when they are feeding young. Then I give it to them whole; it takes the hen longer to crack it, which enables the chicks in the nest to get more fresh air. Hemp seed is no favourite of mine, although some fanciers use it very largely.

A Case of Clear Eggs.

If you get your birds in a too forward condition before the weather is fairly settled, you will very likely get a lot of clear eggs the first round. During February I give them a pinch of mixed seed, which consists of gold of pleasure, maw and niga, twice a week. During March increase it to three times a week, also give a small teaspoonful of egg-food. On this diet you will find your birds in splendid breeding condition by the middle of the month.

One thing I forgot to mention is, be sure and have some green blood in your birds, or else you will soon lose colour. It is best to pair a marked bird to a clear. Now to come to the breeding. Having put your birds together in proper breeding condition, the hen will commence to build her nest. She will soon have this completed.

Bird Life at the Front.

Sir,—It may interest you to know that during an exceptionally heavy bombardment out here a Lark was singing continually between the two lines. It was commented on by those around, who thought it strange for it to be singing quite undaunted amidst the thunder of the guns. Generally speaking, bird life seems quite unaltered. The hens are flitting about with bits of straw, etc., quite busy house-building as if nothing was happening.

Another Appreciation of "Cage Birds" Watch.

Sir,—The watch I got through your valuable paper, Cage Birds, is really one of the best I have ever had. It is a splendid time-keeper, and I think I have had it long enough now to know if it be a right one or not. If I should require another, I know I shall send to good old Cage Birds' office, for it is a gem of a little watch, and a bargain at the money. No one should be without a watch nowadays, when you can get such as these at the price. I have had it since early in January, so know by now what they are.

How Working Women Can Serve Their Country.

Sir,—There are many women who are very closely tied to their homes in villages and out-of-the-way towns, and who have not much time, but would be very glad of the opportunity to serve their country. Now is their opportunity. Women are wanted to increase the supply of food. Evening classes should be started everywhere to teach the best methods of jam making, pickling, preserving, poultry rearing, bee keeping, fruit and vegetable growing, dairywork, etc.; also grading and packing for market, if required. One woman can act as secretary in her own village and organise a class. The classes should be formed without delay, and a request sent to the Local Education Authority for a teacher before it closes the year's work. Twelve members will be required before a teacher can be granted. Local secretaries are asked to write to the Secretary of the Joint Food Supply Committee as soon as the class is formed, and to let us know if there are any difficulties. It is now for working women to do their utmost to increase the production of food. By acting at once, we shall secure a good and plentiful supply for those in need.

The Fertilization of Eggs.

Sir,—In reference to "Perplexed's" letter last week, personally I am strongly of opinion that if the male bird of any species remains with the hen until the first egg is laid, you will nearly always find the eggs fertilized by him, raising the question (to me a very interesting one) are the eggs all fertilized at the same time? My experience answers yes. Only last year I had a Goldfinch running with one of my best Norwich hens, and a fellow fancier, who is well-known, visited my room and noticed a soft-shelled egg at the bottom of the cage. So I took the Goldfinch away there and then (Sunday evening). She laid again, in the nest, on Tuesday morning, and two more eggs followed. I never took any notice of her, and never removed the eggs, but let her be quiet, as, of course, I knew she was not up to the mark. I let her sit the time of incubation. I found I had full eggs. Result, two Goldfinch Mules, the remaining youngster being dead-in-shell. I may say they were reared by another hen, as the mother was found dead in the nest on the day of their hatching, much to my regret. They have turned out two of the nicest cock Mules I ever bred, and from a sickly hen, too.

MY ATTEMPT TO BREED LINNETS IN A CAGE.

By C. E. NEWBY (Detroit, U.S.A.)

A very interesting contribution from America, which will be appreciated by fanciers this side of the "herring pond."

I SUPPOSE at some time or other most readers of Cage Birds will have thought seriously of attempting to breed with two British Birds of the same species in an ordinary breeding-cage, and the reason I attempted to get the Linnet to breed in a cage was that I was of opinion that if an extra good cock Linnet were mated to a suitable hen, good results would be sure to come.

Extra good Linnets, as most fanciers are aware, are not at all common, and the getting of one without paying an almost exhorbitant price is a very difficult thing. The breeding season, however, found me with a very fine house-moulted cock Linnet in my possession, which I felt sure would breed with a mate of his opposite sex. I accordingly obtained a suitable house-moulted Linnet of the gentler sex and I caged her up separately near to her intended partner's cage for the time being.

Paying Attention to the Diet.

I was extremely careful to pay strict attention to the food of these birds, giving them as rich a diet as I knew was good for them. They had everything in the way of food that their hearts could desire. I offered the birds a little egg-food occasionally, but strange to say the cock only would touch it at first. After a time I found the hen would eat a little, if it was highly sweetened. In addition to their ordinary seed diet, I gave them as many wild seeds as I could obtain, such as dandelion, thistle, plantain, and wild mustard.

The latter I consider a very valuable seed for the Linnet enthusiast to give to his birds, as I believe that Linnets in freedom feed largely of it. Certainly I have not found a seed to give better colour to Linnets in captivity than mustard seed. My birds were of course kept well supplied with green food; watercress, lettuce, groundsel, chickweed, and tender dandelion leaves I found the most valuable.

A few weeks rolled by, and I saw that both my birds were coming nicely into breeding condition, as soon as could have been expected. I consider that a bird that comes slowly into the condition necessary for breeding stays in the ideal condition longer than a bird that is highly forced by "forcing foods" and patent medicines, etc. Never worry about a bird if he does not seem to be getting into the right condition early enough, as the fancier can be sure that all will come right in due course if proper feeding is resorted to.

It was now the middle of June, and both my Linnets were in absolutely tip-top breeding condition. The cock was constantly calling to the hen, and she by her actions and manners gave me the impression that she would breed all right. The cage was a large one which I specially constructed for the purpose. It was somewhat longer and wider than the average breeding cage, and at one end I placed a fairly large nest-box and carefully shaded it with small sprays of furze, leaving only a small aperture just large enough for the birds to enter and depart at will, without difficulty. At the other end I placed an ordinary nest pan, and shaded it in a similar manner to the nest-box. I always think it advisable for the fancier to give his birds the choice of two nesting receptacles, but generally speaking nearly all British seed-eaters prefer a nest-box rather than a nest pan when in cages. For nesting material, I obtained a few used nests of wild birds and pulled them to pieces. After these had been dried I tied little tufts into small bundles, and placed a couple of them on the front wires of the cage, so that the Linnets would be able to get at them without difficulty.

Introduce Them in the Morning.

My breeding cage now being quite ready, I determined to introduce the Linnets into their new quarters; so one morning I rose earlier than usual and placed the pair into the cage. There was quite a bit of fluttering at first, but they soon began to explore their new home, and were busy gorging themselves at the seed hoppers.

I always think it is best to place birds together in the early morning; if possible before daylight, as then both male and female are very hungry, and the first place they make for at early dawn is the seed hopper; and then they will usually forget to quarrel for a while, if not altogether, as they will have got a good look at each other while feeding. My birds, however, did not "scrap" very much on this particular morning, but I saw a few days later that the hen was the "boss of the show.' She would rush on her husband with open bill, and tear off a bunch of feathers from his breast as easily as picking up a grain of seed!

All these brutal insults the cock patiently bore, and I began to think that he would be of no use as a breeder if he did not resist these impertinent attacks which his wife made on him. A few days later, however, I saw the couple of birds were getting quite friendly. The cock constantly sang to his mate, and when at last I saw him feeding her, my hopes of getting some young cage-bred Linnets were increased a hundred fold. Each morning I used to slip into the bird-room at an early hour and watch how each bird paid attention to the other.

The cock Linnet's next move was to carry some nesting material about in his beak. He would suddenly dart to the bottom of the cage, snatch a few straggling pieces of nesting material, and then fly with it on to a perch, all the time flapping his wings and calling loudly. The hen, however, paid no attention to her husband's actions, but she was soon carrying nesting material in her own beak.

Not Much of a Home.

One day I came home to see a very poorly-constructed nest in the nesting-box; so I was now practically certain that she was going to take to her maternal duties in earnest. I found that the furze surrounding the nest-box entirely prevented the cock Linnet from going into the box and pulling the nesting material out, but the hen entered through the small aperture without fear.

One evening shortly afterwards I had the satisfaction of seeing the hen sitting on the nest, and I fully expected to be the happy possessor of an egg the next morning. However, next morning I found the hen still on nest, so did not disturb her, as she looked quite contented. In the evening she was still sitting on the nest, and was, as far as appearances went, quite in good condition. I however did not know whether she had laid or not, and I was not going to risk disturbing her, so I waited until morning. Next morning, on looking into the nest I found something was wrong, so I pulled out the nest-box, only to find that the hen Linnet was dead. She had evidently died in attempting to pass an egg, but I feel certain she wasn't egg-bound.

Although I failed in my first attempt I hope to make another next season, as I know that fertile eggs can be got from the birds if they are in the right breeding condition.

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve it.

Sir,—I am surprised that Mr. Allsopp, being a business man, should allow his pen to get the upper hand of him. Why, Mr. Allsopp, you are simply asking the Editor to give me a cheap advt. What's more, look at the compliments you have showered upon me in the past. When I met you at the Palace in 1911, for instance, you remarked: "Very pleased to meet you, for there are those that come and go, but the name of Spillman is always with us." On another occasion, when you wrote the Fancy Press praising the present-day winners, you were good enough to include my capped yellow amongst the four which were living examples of the standard of excellence. As regards your knowledge of my introduction of fresh blood, I may say that I have not had any for the past four or five years. When I tried in 1913 to buy a hen from you, the one you sent me (which you were not anxious to part with) went back. Re my winning with current-year birds at Plymouth, all I can say is that I have won the cup two or three times, and when I have not my clients have (with one exception). I may add to this that during the same period I have bred four birds that have taken special for best in show in various parts of the country. Now, instead of bandying words through these columns, don't you think it would be better to spend a week-end with me, have an ocular demonstration and an amicable chat, so that you may return a "wiser and better" man?

A Suggested Fanciers' Social Club for Manchester.

Sir,—Some time ago a discussion took place regarding the amalgamation of the cage-bird societies of Manchester and district. If my memory serves me, I think the idea was favourably received and commented upon in more than one Manchester society. Unfortunately, like some other good ideas, it got no further than discussion. Now I myself and a few more fanciers see what we think is a splendid opportunity of trying a modified scheme. In the central part of Manchester, at 32, Victoria Street, to be exact, is a Fanciers' Social Club. At present it is mostly used by Pigeon fanciers, but recently a few cage-bird fanciers joined and are using the place as a kind of general meeting ground. We find it much more comfortable these cold Saturday evenings than standing about Tib Street; and we now decide to make known to the rest of the Fancy that there is a large club room suitable for discussions or meetings, and which would be available for united table shows, etc. There are also small committee rooms, a billiard room, and a refreshment bar. Subscription one shilling per year. Are there sufficient fanciers in Manchester and district interested enough to meet together and discuss the formation of a Cage Bird Social Club? If so, will they meet at the Northern Homing Society, 32, Victoria Street, on Saturday evening, the 27th March, at 8.30, when I will guarantee a welcome from those who are already members; and when the formation of such a club will be discussed. The committee of the Club have granted full facilities.

When Judges Disagree.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—I notice that the letter of W. Hainsworth is almost identical with that of R. Blake, as he also states that he has never seen the owner of "White Rose," and fails to state if he has ever seen the bird. He simply announces that he is satisfied it is a Canary-Bullfinch, then proceeds to defend the owner against an imaginary attack. I have carefully read the whole of the correspondence, and find that the only personal attacks have been made by the owner himself. When anyone deliberately sets out to seek trouble, they ought not to complain when they find it.

The parentage of the bird has certainly been questioned, and in my opinion justifiably, because the bird itself gives ample proof of its Greenfinch parentage, which is so easily seen in the wings and tail that it makes one wonder how our judges can account for its presence if the bird is a Canary-Bullfinch. Of course, W. Hainsworth is entitled to his own opinion that it is a Canary-Bullfinch, but I beg to take exception to his sublime cheek in accusing others of "meanness" because they hold an opinion opposed to his own! I wonder if W. Hainsworth ever heard of the attempt that was made to foist on to the Fancy a Sulphury Seedeater (a foreign bird) as a Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid; or of Japanese Green finches actually winning prizes as Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrids; and of several other alleged rare Hybrids, some of which got in the prize list at a few small shows, but quickly vanished after failing to satisfy judges who know what's what?

Can W. Hainsworth explain why "White Rose" so systematically steers clear of the light Canary Mule class—the class wherein it ought to go if it is what it is claimed to be? With one exception it has always been shown in the Hybrid class; the only time shown in the Light Mule Class it was wrong-classed for not being a Canary Mule, and not a word of protest was heard against that decision. These are very significant facts which many appear to overlook. Like W. Hainsworth, I hope "White Rose" will get all it deserves, but I am of opinion that it has sometimes got more than it was justly entitled to, consequently others got less. Unlike W. H., I have seen the bird (and its owner), also the letters which were published in Cage Birds describing how "White Rose" was bred, and stating that the present owner, besides buying "White Rose," bought its mother, also a Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid, which was bred from the mother of "White Rose" the same season.

Patrick.

Border Fancies at the Horticultural Hall Show.

Sir,—I am considerably interested in the letter signed "Border," as I exhibited Borders at this show—birds in perfect condition, that had won at the Glasgow, Carlisle, Scottish National, etc., shows. I found them standing cardless (rightly so, if the birds in the money were non-fed) and was standing filled with admiration at the wonderful colour of the birds with the "tickets," when a well-known specialist judge of Borders came along and laughingly remarked: "Well, Mr. Ramsden, fancy you of all the men in the world, having to stand down on account of colour." "Yes," I replied, "it is a bit funny, isn't it; but I was under the impression that colour-feeding was barred with the Border Fancy." He replied: "Well, so it is, as colour-feeding is generally understood, but they all have to be 'helped' a little—they are just shown the colour-food, you known." And after inspecting the classes, I was quite satisfied that he was right, and that many of the birds had been "helped." It was common report at the show that the judge, Mr. D. Jenkins, had made a statement on the subject, but such statement was not made in my hearing. Sequel: I gave my Border cocks away to friends as songsters. The hens were sent to Sclater Street to be sold, and (if I may have a free advt.) the show cages are awaiting a purchaser at half-price.

J. W. Ramsden.

Sir,—It is a pity that "Border" has been unable to bring this matter up before. As he says, the question of colour-feeding or otherwise of Borders is one which interests all Border men, and it is the duty of all interested in the "Wee Gems" to expose anyone guilty of such illegal practices. Personally we are of the opinion that it is non-existent as far as the South is concerned. There can be no doubt that the bird alluded to is our yellow hen which took 1st and three specials at the recent L.C.B.A. show, and which was claimed at catalogue price. We were at the show for some considerable time, and conversed with a number of fanciers, but certainly did not hear any suggestion as to the colour of the bird. We do not think it necessary to say more, but wait Mr. Jenkins' reply with interest and confidence.

Burton Bros.

Sir,—I do not like the idea of replying to noms-de-plume, but under the circumstances will do so for once. I have a good idea who "Border" may be; in my opinion he was a disappointed exhibitor at the Welsh National show. He is quite justified in doing what he has done for his own information. Yes, I did pass an opinion at the L.C.B.A. show that there were several birds there that had been assisted in colour (not mentioning the winners). The bird that won 1st. and two specials was not included in those. Yes; I also left the same bird cardless at the Welsh National show. I may state that Mr. Pratt's yellow cock that won at the L.C.B.A. was also cardless there; he was very soft when I judged him. I judged them on that day's form, and the bird in question had a very bad twist at the throat, and to make it worse she was as wild as a March hare—she covered me all over with sawdust, just as if I had just left the sawmills. I don't know what her behaviour may be at home, but it was very rude on that day; evidently something had upset her.

OLD CALABAR
IN PACKETS EVERYWHERE.
OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Is Mixed Seed as Bad as a Disease?

Sir,—I referred in a previous letter to keeping birds in the best of health for a large number of years on plain seed. I have had birds in my aviary over nine years that have been fed on plain canary seed. I have also the Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, Siskin, Redpoll, Mules and Hybrids living a happy life on plain canary seed. My birds and aviary are open to all to inspect at any time. I note a reader says that he would not give a certain class of canary seed to a German Canary; neither would I the mixed seed. Is it likely that a true fancier would give his stock inferior seed? I have more faith in the readers of Cage Birds. I wrote to enlighten the young fancier upon how to prolong the life of his pets. I spoke of how I treat my own birds; not how I am going to treat them. Experience teaches. When fanciers have tried my treatment it will be time then to speak on this matter. My opinion of niga seed is that I have found it injurious to my birds. It destroys the liver. Maw seed, if used sparingly, is a pick-me-up; but hemp used every day in nine cases out of ten will bring on asthma. I have known Bullfinches fed on all hemp turn black; does this not show its power—if it will turn the outside black, what will it do to the bird inside? As to the gentleman who say he has tried my treatment and lost so many of his birds, I'll just take that with a grain of salt.

T. Balcombe.

The Heavily-marked Norwich at the Welsh National Show.

Sir,—Mr. Allsopp having made an error, no amount of writing will make wrong right. I think no fancier should accept an appointment as a judge who has not sufficient confidence in his ability to carry through his actions without help other than the printed instructions in the schedule. Mr. Allsopp has admitted his error, and that should end the matter. To talk of claiming the prize-money is so much twaddle. The rules say the judge's decision will be final. There is no doubt that exhibiting has become a lottery. Fanciers have two alternatives—keep their birds at home, or accept awards in good spirit.

J. Bastock.

Sir,—Will Mr. Henry J. Davis tell readers upon whose authority he declares it to be an undisputed fact that the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize-birds in Class 29 could have competed in the Lightly-marked Class? Meanwhile, I can assure him that the three birds under review, if not strictly dark enough to compete in Class 29, were, in my opinion, much too dark to accept as lightly-marked, and would have been promptly disqualified if appearing in that class. In doing so, I may add that I should have "damned the consequences," exactly as with my now historic Class 29 action.

E. W. Allsopp.

Sir,—Mr. Allsopp's letter of last week touches the limit of the ridiculous. It is obvious to everyone but himself that he should have judged the "three or four self-greens" (where were they, by the way, for I did not notice them?) according to the wording of the schedule, in the same way as he ought to have done the birds which were more light than dark. What was the schedule drawn up for? The committee could not possibly withhold any prize-money, for they had received entries and fees sufficient to place the class out of the half-money limit; this, too, must be obvious to everyone but Mr. A. As regards his threat to Mr. Davis that the latter may find himself poorer, this is very doubtful, as I think Mr. Davis will be sure to win. Anyway, the principle at issue is such that I for one will willingly subscribe towards Mr. Davis' legal expenses in case of his defeat, and I have no doubt others will come forward to do the same.

D. Williams.

Sir,—I am rather surprised at the bellicose attitude Mr. Allsopp now adopts. He has publicly admitted allowing the three lightly-marked birds to compete, although meriting disqualification, according to schedule, and he now states he allowed three or four self-greens to stand which, had he acted as a judge should, he also would have disqualified, per schedule. According to that, the fancier holding rigidly to schedule is simply taking unnecessary trouble, as the judge may read same in the way most suitable to himself. Mr. Allsopp then adopts a Kaiser-like attitude by practically daring Mr. Davis to put the case before a court of Law, holding as a sword over his head the £ s. d. he is likely to lose in doing so. Mr. Davis may not be in a position to spend much money fighting the case, but whether he is or not, I consider this very mean to try and frighten him from demanding his rights, and so easing the situation for the people who have made the muddle. Now, Mr. Editor, this matter is of great importance to hundreds, nay thousands, of conscientious exhibitors, and needs to be fought out to the end, so as to have a decided ruling one way or the other. The tails of the coat are held down for you, Mr. Davis; step on them firmly. I write this having no personal interest in the matter and, living in Ireland, am not acquainted with the interested parties.

C. Kane.

Sir,—I can only refer Messrs. Greaves and Richards to the reporter's remarks, Mr. Allsopp's admissions, and the correspondence that has taken place in your columns, and if they feel they are entitled to any prize-money in class 29, they have different ideas to me, and, I venture to think, the Fancy generally. They ask me if I received prize-money I did not win. Yes! I had three lots, and returned one that I did not win, namely fourth prize in class 29.

H. J. Davis.

Sir,—As I anticipated, Mr. Davis did not see the birds which he is creating so much controversy about. As to his returning prize-money, etc., I fail to see where it concerns me. I am pleased to see the judge and committee have the courage to act from a purely sporting point of view. Mr. Davis, this was my difficulty: My birds entered in class 28 cannot by any stretch of imagination be called ticked or lightly-marked, consequently the only class I considered they were eligible for was the heavily-marked or variegated class. With all respect to judge and critics generally, I contend the 3rd prize bird would be extremely difficult for anyone to say definitely whether more dark than light. Further, it has always been my rule to enter the birds in the classes I think they should compete in, and the judge's decision is accepted by me as final. I think Mr. Davis is taking a rather strong line in stating I may be afraid of meeting any bird. I show without fear or favour, and Mr. Davis must admit I did not know who I was competing against; I am sure if I did I should make little progress in the Fancy. So far as I am concerned I now finish with this matter.

W. Crawshaw.

Sir,—Mr. Allsopp last week fairly convicts himself, and now trots out the assertion that there were three or four self-greens in the class. I must say that I very much doubt if there was one self-green, let alone three or four, in the class. However, his duty would have been either to disqualify or pass them as he thought best. The exhibits that conformed with the schedule should have been awarded first, second, third, etc., prizes according to merit, and they would be entitled to full prize-money because there were more than eight entries in the class—the fact that even six birds were disqualified would not alter the number of entries and fees received. As regards Mr. A. exercising his prerogative and withholding first, second, and even third prizes, he would have been adding insult to injury.

Henry J. Davis.

Sir,—Mr. E. Patterson Riddle, it seems, would reduce the judging at our shows to the level of the registration of a birth, marriage, or death, with no question of sportsmanship. With the truly formidable record of fifteen years, during which he has made over 3,000 entries at "live stock" shows, he confesses he has seen no generous, sportsmanlike interpretation of circumstances. What a record! However, with only about ten years' experience of shows, and less than 300 entries, allow me to whisper in his ear and tell him I have actually seen some of our present-day leading judges enquire from the secretary if some exhibitor had not mixed up his labels, thus putting a yellow in a buff class, or vice-versa; and when it has been found to be so, he has actually assisted in righting matters; in spite of the rule about birds entered in wrong class being so strict! I have never questioned these actions, because maybe an old fancier in the eventide of his life, bespectacled, and worried with his labels; or maybe a novice, hopeful, but nervous, is involved. If not so, what matters! These thoughts carry no mud, or other extraneous matter. Then, again, what about the birds shown in cages with the labels attached to the right-hand side of the cage, although the rule sometimes says the "left"? Then again, the cages containing anything but the plain canary seed, which the rule often says the cage must contain. Why not select an automatic machine, Mr. Riddle, upon which to spend your soulless criticism?

E. W. Allsopp.

Club Reports.

Y.C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting Mar. 18, to consider which ring the club would adopt. Agreed to adopt same ring as last year; members wishing rings can have same by applying to sec.; 1s. 1d. per dozen post free.—Wm. Priest, Hon. Sec.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY.

General meeting, Mar. 17, headquarters, Mr. Bevan chair, with a good attendance. A washing exhibition was given by Mr. Greaves, which proved very interesting. Mr. Greaves got through his task in a very businesslike way, and a very hearty vote of thanks was given. Also to Mr. Orehard for accepting the position of pres. Members, please attend next meeting, Mar. 31, Porth Hotel, at 7. Bring all unsold admission tickets. Subs. will be due for the first quarter of 1915. Lecture will be given by Mr. A. H. C. Legg.—J. S. Jones, Hon. Sec.

LEITH O.S.

Meeting Liberal Club, Hope-street March 13. Mr. Lumsden presided over a large turn-out. Classification for annual show Nov. 13 was settled, and a few classes were added to last year's schedule. Judges were nominated, and will be duly announced when they accept. Four members were elected, bringing our total up to 47, which is considered very satisfactory. Provost Smith has again become a patron, and has subscribed £1 towards our prize fund. Agreed to engage the same hall as last year for annual show. Fanciers residing within twelve miles' radius can become members at our next meeting, April 10, which is the last for admitting them this season.—G. W. Brown, Sec.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Meeting, Oddfellows' Hall, Mar. 16, Mr. W. French presiding over a large attendance. Mr. H. Craven read a very interesting paper on the extension of classification for our shows. Afterwards a lengthy discussion took place, and plenty of questions were asked, which Mr. Craven suitably answered. Proposed that we have a class each for yellow and buff Cinn. Yorks also classes for yellow Crest and Yellow C.B. Decided that at N.F.S. shows all birds to be in the show room by 7, as it was sometimes difficult to tell yellows from buffs by gaslight. Any birds in the N.F. shows showing colour feed will be disqualified. This will be strictly enforced. Mr. J. Rowe tendered his resignation from the committee. Mr. E. T. Condy was elected a member. Vote of thanks to Mr. Craven brought a pleasant meeting to a close.—W. Luscombe.

CAMBOIS C.B.S.

Annual meeting, Mar. 17, at the house of Mr. T. A. Dixon, owing to the U.M.F.C. being engaged by the Miners' Union, and no other place being available owing to the military authorities. Election of officers for 1915.—Chair, Mr. T. A. Dixon; treas., Mr. S. Hyde; sec., G. Hutchinson (Mr. J. Elliott resigning the position, having served the society well since its formation); committee, Messrs. J. Elliott, C. Dunn, C. Harkus, T. Wheatley, T. Young, J. Henderson, J. Henderson, Blyth. Decided to change the meeting night from the second Wednesday to the second Monday of each month. Date of annual show was fixed for Nov. 20. Decided to have a revision of rules next meeting night. Anyone wishing to join our society can obtain particulars at next meeting, or on applying to the secretary. Will members please note the change of secretary.—G. Hutchinson, 27, Mawburn Terrace, Camhois, Blyth.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

Meeting, Mar. 18, Raglan Hotel, Aldersgate St., E.C., Mr. J. Hodder chair, and a splendid attendance of members and friends. Mr. C. A. House gave a most interesting lecture on "The Yorkshire Canary." He began his discourse with a clear and concise description of the ideal Yorkshire; then he fully described the general management, feeding, correct mating and preparation for showing; in fact, everything that was helpful, both to novices and champions, was touched upon, and Mr House's audience closely followed every word. Afterwards a lengthy discussion took place, question after question was fired at the lecturer, who answered every one in a full and able manner. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. House was proposed and carried with acclamation, and a highly instructive evening was brought to a close. At next meeting, Apr. 15, at 8, Mr. J. Robson is lecturing on the "General Management of the Bird Room." Fanciers and friends will receive a hearty welcome. I shall be pleased to hear from anyone desirous of becoming a member of this progressive society. Full particulars from H. L. Huggins, Hon. Sec., 139, Myddleton Road, Bowes Park, N.

LARKHALL O.S.

Presentation to Mr. J. Lee (President).

A merry gathering of fanciers took place in the Raplock Hotel, Larkhall, on Mar. 13, in response to the invitation of the genial president, Mr. Lee. Just on fifty fanciers sat down to an excellent repast, to which full justice was done. Mr. Lee presided, and Mr. T. H. Brownlie, the president of the Blantyre Society, acted as croupier in the absence of hon. pres., Mr. Simpson. Several well-known fanciers from a distance were present, amongst them being Mr Lilly (Cambuslang), Mr. W. H. Livingstone (sec. of Wishaw show), Mr. James Garrow (Loanhead), etc. Mr. Lee opened the meeting with an excellent and brilliant speech, outlining the work accomplished by the society since he took up the presidential duties. The society was at that time in low waters, and a motion was practically carried that the show should be allowed to lapse, but several enthusiastic spirits took the matter up and sought his co-operation, which he was delighted to give. Since then the sun of success had beamed upon the efforts of the executive, and he was proud indeed to be the president of such an enthusiastic society. He hoped prosperity would long brighten their labours, and that he might long have the honour to be connected with the society, either officially or ex-officio. The usual patriotic toasts having been honoured, "The Larkhall O.S." was proposed by the croupier, and suitably replied to by the president. Messrs. Russell, Tom Hamilton, Welsh, the worthy vice-president, Tom McEwan, Cunningham, Lilly, Campbell, Garrow, McGhee, Munro, and Jas. McEwan all contributed to the vocal part of the programme, which was varied and much appreciated. The event of the evening, however, was the presentation which was carried through in a most able manner by the secretary, Mr. James McEwan, on behalf of the members. Mr. McEwan stated that he had been connected with the society for the past twenty-eight years, and had served as sec. under six presidents. The society had had several excellent presidents in that time, but he had no hesitation in stating that the best of them all was undoubtedly their present one, Mr. Lee, and it gave him great pleasure in conveying to him the present tokens, to give him some idea of the high esteem in which he was held by one and all. Whatever Mr. Lee took in hand, he made it a point to make a success with, and he had succeeded with the Ornithological Society. He came into office when times were troublesome, but his ability and tact enabled him to surmount all obstacles and steer his bark into the calm waters of prosperity. Mr. Lee made a suitable reply on behalf of his wife and himself. The presentation took the form of a handsome leather travelling bag for Mr. Lee, and a beautiful gold-mounted umbrella for Mrs. Lee.

Mr. W. H. Livingstone, the secretary of the Wishaw New Year Show, made an excellent reply to the toast of "Kindred Societies." Mr. Garrow also spoke of the excellence of the management and of the harmony that such social gatherings promoted amongst the members. The gem of vocalisation was Mr. Jimmie McEwan's rendering of "The Auld Rustic Cot." He was enthusiastically encored, and replied with "The Corn Rigs." Mr. McEwan is one of the pillars of this society, and has seen more work on its behalf than any. He is, however, fond of the work, and his back is broad—a very necessary qualification in the secretary of any show. He is one of the jovial, happy-go-lucky, genuine fanciers that it is a pleasure to meet. We understand the next event will be the jubilee show of the society, and we trust to see it beat all former records, and that will take a deal of accomplishing.

WIGAN ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Legs of Man Hotel, March 13, with a very fair attendance; three new members were enrolled. Replies to letters of inquiry were read, regarding rings from the P.R.C.C. and L.R.C.C. secs., and it was decided to recognise both rings in our next contest, whether members' or open. Decided to issue no rings to members who have not paid their full subs.—P. Greenall, Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

At the March meeting, a lecture on the Norwich Canary was given by Mr. C. A. House, Mr. T. Dawn presiding over a large attendance. The lecture was both instructive and interesting. The lecturer went through every detail as to selection of stock and exhibition birds, breeding, moulting, and exhibiting. He compared the Norwich of the past with the present-day exhibition specimen. The names of some old fanciers whom he mentioned brought back by-gone days to the older fanciers present. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Corres.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Annual meeting, Feb. 27, and adjourned to March 13, Mr. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. Officers elected: Pres., Ald. S. Storey, D.L.; vice-pres., Messrs. H. Greenwood, M.P., F. W. Goldstone, M.P., J. Cobb, C. Grimshaw, W. Hall, G. Bell, P. Hunter; chairman, J. Farrer; vice-chair, C. Waters; assist.-sec., F. Riseborough; treas., G. Davidson; sec., J. Peacock, 6, Whitburn Terrace, Fulwell; committee, Messrs. Machin, Reid, Davison, Gray, Smith, Brown, Proctor, Owen and officers (ex-officio). Several alterations were made to the rules, and it is suggested to have same printed as amended in place of the existing rule books. Balance sheet (on auditor's report) was adopted as read. At next meeting a lecture is to be given by Mr. J. Johnston on the Border Fancy Canary, a good muster of members and friends will be expected. The question of closed rings was allowed to stand over.—J. Peacock.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Annual smoker, headquarters, Cyprus Hotel, Chichester Road, Mar. 17, Mr. W. Thompson presiding, when a presentation was made to our worthy and hardworking ideal sec., Mr. W. L. Smith; also one to Mrs. Smith. Mr. Thompson presented them with a few able remarks on the long service of Mr. Smith as sec. of one of the oldest cage bird societies in the North. Mr. Smith ably replied, and said it pleased him very much to be so highly spoken of and esteemed by the members, and more so to be able to look round the room and see faces of old fanciers who were fanciers when he was in his youth; men that were exhibitors in the time of Mr. Blakston. Other members made a few remarks, and then we settled down to harmony, of which we had the best. Messrs. C. McDonald, H. Gallagher, J. Lask, and others assisted, and all were sorry we had not another two hours at our disposal. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close much too soon.—W. J. Howden, vice-chair.

HARROGATE C.B.S.

Annual meeting, Mar. 17, a good number present. Pres., Mr. H. Melling, chair. After some remarks by the chairman upon the hobby of bird keeping, Sec. read report and balance sheet, which was passed. The chairman complimented the society upon its financial position, and hoped the society would still prosper. The Hon. Ed. Wood and Lady Dorothy Wood were again elected patron and patroness; chairman, Mr. H. Melling, again accepted the presidency; and the vice-presidents were re-elected en bloc; treas., Mr. W. Brown, and sec., G. H. Barnwell, were re-elected. The chairman said he felt sure all would agree with him that such secretaries as Mr. Barnwell were not easily found. Mr. Barnwell thanked them for again placing their confidence in him, and trusted that the society and all connected with it would have a very prosperous year. Committee were re-elected with Mr. T. Head as an addition. Sec. then gave an interesting washing exhibition. The president said they were the first Canaries he had seen washed; he was surprised at the masterly way in which the sec. handled and washed the birds, and expressed his delight at the result. A class of Yorkshires were judged by Mr. A. Veitch. Best Bird: 1, Ireland; 2, Cottam; 3, Hamlyn. Prizes were presented to the successful competitors for the past season. Members' Cup, W. H. Hamlyn; runner-up, G. Gib. Unlig. Cup A. Veitch; runner-up, G. Ireland. The meeting was one of the most enjoyable ever held in connection with the society. —G. H. Barnwell, Hon. Sec.

Yorkshiremen Take Home the Spoils.

Presentation of Prizes won in the Yorkshire Union, etc., Competitions.

The presentation of the competition prizes of Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., and N.G.M.Y.C.C., and CAGE BIRDS' prize for amateurs took place on Mar. 20, at the Market Tavern, Bradford. The meeting started in real good Y.C.C. fashion with competition for chairman, Messrs. Towers, Cowgill, and Morrisson all being present. These were put to the vote, and Mr. Morrisson was elected chairman for the evening. The chairman's remarks were few and to the point. He congratulated the Y.U. on making the Y.U. shows sliding scale shows; he did not agree with those who wanted the sliding scale to extend when a class reached over fifteen, and was of the opinion that societies composed chiefly of working-men should not be asked to do the work in connection with holding shows and scarcely ever have one that paid its way. The Union method of sliding scale up to 15 entries, and full prizes above 15, was the best way. As president of one of the specialist clubs he thanked the Y.U. for the help to societies to hold their shows in the hard times we were passing through.

A Good Winner and a Good Loser.

After a song by Mr. Lund, "The Deathless Army," which was very well received, Mr. Morrisson presented the prizes of the C.M.Y.C.C. He expressed the pleasure it gave him to present the first prize to his friend Mr. H. H. Towers; this was the trophy value £10 10s. He had himself won it last year, and he promised Mr. Towers a real good run for it next year. Mr. Towers, in responding, said that although he had won it, it had been no easy matter to beat Mr. Morrisson, who was a real good exhibitor, and took the ups and downs as all exhibitors should, but unfortunately forgot to do upon occasion. Along with the trophy Mr. Towers also won £3 3s. from the club, and Ramsden's colour-food special for open competition. Mr. Towers was then asked to present Mr. Morrisson with the second prize, and Mr. Morrisson said he had great pleasure in being second to Mr. Towers. It was only right, when clubs presented prizes of such a value as the first prize in the leading competition, that there should be a healthy rivalry to win them one year at least. To have one's name engraved on such a prize as this was the next best thing to winning it outright. Messrs. Atkinson and Firth were third, and the chairman said how pleased he was to know that there were some good triers coming on amongst C.M.Y.C.C. members. On receiving the prize Mr. Atkinson said they did not intend stopping at third place, but would try their hardest to be either 1st or 2nd next year. Mr. J. Thomas won 4th, but was now present to receive his prize.

Amateur competition was won by Mr. J. L. Hudson, the only one who had competed for the four specials offered, and he said he was sorry there was no other competitor for first prize. He invited them to come forward another year, as he felt these prizes would be taken away from amateurs and given to others if no competitors came forward.

Encouraging Struggle Between Novices.

Novice competition was won by Messrs. Baker Bros.; this competition had been really good right up to the last turn, and gave good promise and encouragement to the committee to form another competition and ask all Y.U. societies to make class. marked novice classes. Second prize was won by Mr. J. Harney, who promised to give the amateurs something to go with next year. Third prize was won by Mr. Bushby, of Leeds, the sec. pointing out that Leeds members would have had at least three prizes had they shown at the requisite number of shows. The fourth prize was won by Mr. J. T. Sharp, who said he had only kept birds two years; he had been advised to exhibit, and having won at one show he had been led to go on; now he had finished the year by having a prize to draw in each of the specialist clubs. He promised not to stop until he got to the height of all true exhibitors' ambition, the top of some good competition.

I have not the full list of Y.C.C. and G.M.Y.C.C. winners by me, having mislaid them, so the members must look to secretaries for full list. I will give the remarks which struck me most, and hope for reasonable excuse if I forget anyone in this report. Mr. Cowgill, president of the G.M.Y.C.C. was called on to present the prizes to the successful exhibitors. The prizes of this club made a good display; in fact, Mr. Cowgill said he felt like lifting some of them, as he thought one or more would not be missed. He pointed out the position of the leading trophy, which was not yet fully subscribed for, and said they could do with some help towards this. He then presented the first open competition prize to Mr. L. Dykes, whom he complimented on winning the first in two successive years. The prize going with the trophy being a lady's bangle, he said he hoped that it was a real present to the wife and not a sweeting job. In reply, Mr. Dykes said that he was pleased to again win first in G.M.Y.C.C.; he had done his best to show the best and win the best, and had succeeded. He would give £1 1s. towards the trophy fund. Mr. Morrisson was second in this competition, as he had been in C.M.Y.C.C.

The True Sporting Spirit.

The chairman then called on Mr. H. H. Towers to present the Y.C.C. prizes. Mr. L. Dykes, on receiving his prize, 1st open, said he had won this prize, Ramsden's cup, twice, and he would try to win again next year, and if either he or Ogden Bros. won it would be their own property, so he expected a real royal battle. Messrs. Ogden Bros. were second, and Mr. T. Ogden said they had done their best, and the 2nd was their reward; they were quite content to be 2nd, and they would try again next year. They had been leaders before, and he hoped would be again.

After a musical interval, Mr. F. Hammond presented the prizes for CAGE BIRDS. He said how pleased he was to perform this duty for Mr. Carl, and how sorry Mr. Carl was that the whole of the prizes he offered had not been won. He took the amateurs severely to task for their loose manner of showing. To show at three or four shows and then stop was as bad as not showing at all; they must compete at five shows to win. He had, after much thought, come to the conclusion that should he have the honour of again being sec. for the CAGE BIRDS fund, he should see if some other way of giving these prizes could not be found, so that they could be the benefit to the Fancy they really deserved. He had much pleasure in presenting to Mr. J. E. Hudson and Mr. P. Hirst their prizes from this fund.

A "Good Old Sing-Song."

The chairman then declared the meeting open for a regular concert, all and sundry being invited to entertain. Mr. L. Ogden and Mr. H. H. Towers were specially invited, but said the audience was not quite up to their standard, so the chairman, Mr. Morrisson, took everyone by surprise in giving a really good rendering of a patriotic poem. This brought on Mr. Chapman, and afterwards Messrs. Towers and L. Ogden began their Windhill contest over again, Mr. Towers singing "I Seek for Thee in Every Flower," and Mr. Ogden, "The Dear Old Home." Mr. Cowgill was judge, and awarded 1st to Mr. Towers as Luther had broken down.

A vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Morrisson to Messrs. Carl and Ramsden for their continued generosity towards the Yorkshire Fancy. This was seconded by Mr. Garnett, who pointed out how much they were indebted to these gentlemen and to others who in a lesser way contributed toward the special prize fund. A vote of thanks to all those who had helped in a most enjoyable evening was also passed. A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. Towers, who paid some very high compliments to Mr. Morrisson, was seconded by Mr. H. Hill, and carried unanimously. Mr. Morrisson, in reply, said that he lived at Brighouse, rather a long way from Bradford, and he had decided, before coming to that meeting, that he would have to knock attending meetings off his list of engagements, but the meeting had been so enjoyable that he had crossed off that decision. He thanked them for their kind remarks, which he would remember when asked again to attend meetings in connection with the Fancy.—R. Garnett.

SHETTLESTON C.B.C.

Meeting, Good Templars' Hall, Mar. 13, Mr. E. Taylor chair. Syllabus for 1915 was drawn up. Agreed to hold F.F. show July 10, also to accept resignation of Mr. W. Robertson, Troon. New members elected:—Messrs. Bowman, Scott, Stewart, Booth, and Watson. New rule passed that no person can become a member of the club if connected with any other club in Shettleston district. Mr. J. Kirkwood was proposed for membership. Vote of thanks to chair terminated the meeting.—S. F. Wood, Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Meeting Mar. 16, Mr. Gibbins presided over a large attendance. Next meeting falling on Easter holidays, it was decided to postpone same till April 20. Sec. announced winners of rose bowls and medals. The gift class in aid of the Noakes Fund proved a great success, sales realising over £2. Last of table shows was held, Mr. Gibbins judged. Brit. Ck.: 1, 2, 3, Deakin; vhc, hc, Brooks. Hen: 1, Brooks; 2, 3, Deakin. Gift: 1, Laundon and Start; 2, Freestone; 3, Pole; vhc, Roberts; hc, Jolley, c. Judd. A. Freestone.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, Y.M. Halls, Mar. 20, Mr. Rundell presiding. Balance sheet read and passed, showing a good balance of £8 7s. 5d. cash on hand. Officers appointed for year:—Pres., J. Rundell; vice-pres., J. Kennedy; sec., T. McGregor, Saryville Crescent, Larkhall; treas., R. McEwan; auditors, Messrs. Craig and Campbell; committee, Messrs. McLean, Gibb, Melvin, Craig, Cuthbertson, Kerr, Campbell. Next meeting, Apr. 3, Y.M. Halls; discuss open show and other important business.—A. Thomson, Sec.

FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting, Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, Mar. 20, Mr. Robt. T. Campbell chair. 1915 officials appointed:—Pres., R. T. Campbell; vice-p., A. Storrar and M. Smith; sec. and treas., J. Cordery, 21, Dewars Row, Kelty, Fife; auditors, Wm. Grewar, Wm. Foster, F. Baxter; committee, the secs. of each society. Agreed to levy each member 6d., also that we go on with the club show, and delegates were instructed to report to their respective societies the show business for next meeting, Coaltown of Wemyss, Apr. 24. Agreed to pay over the surplus from club show as prize money, and same has now been forwarded to local secs.; anyone overlooked, please apply to above address.—J. Cordery, Sec.

SACRISTON P.P.R. AND C.B.S.

Meeting, Mar. 6, Mr. Wm. Tindal chair. Decided that three cups be got in addition to the two already given for the different sections, and there will now be one for each. Proposed as members: Messrs. M. Carr, J. Stephenson, J. Hindmarsh, T. Metcalf, T. Masterman, and W. Collins. A Junior section was made for members up to sixteen years of age at half entrance fee, namely, 1s. 3d., the section to receive half prize money, etc. Master Percy Wright was proposed as a half-member. Following were nominated for judges:—Messrs. R. Stainthorpe, J. Nutt, B. Walker, H. Eltringham, J. Lurtess, W. Reid, A. E. Ezard, J. Horner, F. W. Nunn, F. Fleetham, T. Dixon. Next meeting Mar. 27, at 7, Mrs. H. Abbot's Tea Rooms, Front St. An egg show will be held; each member is asked to enter three fresh hen eggs; entry fee 3d.; prizes 1s., 6d., 3d., the eggs to be given to the Sacriston Depot for the National Egg Collection for our wounded soldiers and sailors. Members, please bring one or two entries for this worthy cause. Intending members invited.—Dodd and Wilfred, Hon. Secs.

STANLEY EMPIRE F. AND F.S.

Meeting, Mar. 21. Decided to keep our old show date, Nov. 20 and 21. Judges nominated: W. Reid (Sunderland), J. Stanger (Pelton Fell), R. Bewicke (Newfield), W. Rendle (Stanley), T. Dixon (Bedlington), H. Seeley (Chopington). Moved that rules stand. Election of officers: Chair, R. Peart; vice-chair, J. Elliott; treas., J. Smith; sec., R. Hutchinson, 58, Joicey Terrace, Oxhill, West Stanley.

CUMNOCK C.B.S.

Meeting Mar. 20, Lesser Town Hall, Auchinleck, Mr. Hainey, pres., in the chair. For the show of Nov. 27 the Scotch Fancy section came in for a good bit of discussion. Last year we extended our radius to Galston, Newmilns, and Darvel as a means of strengthening the Scots Fancy section, and this year we are extending to Kilmarnock and Ayr for Scotch Fancy alone. The club is in a good financial position, and sec. will be pleased to give any information desired. We have six classes for Scotch Fancies. Non-fed hen class was added to Norwich. There were two nominations for judges, with two others as second choice. Appointments will be published later. Treas., Mr. J. Nutt, intimated that as he had removed from the district he could not continue to act. Mr. D. Smart was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. Vote of thanks to chair closed the meeting.—A. Wyper, Sec.

The Shows.

DARVEL C.B.S.

Table show, Feb. 9, Mr. Dunsmuir judge. Nor. Pairs: 1, 2, Anderson; 3, Morton and Roxburgh. BORD.: 1, 3, Allan; 2, Nisbet. GOLDF.-CAN.: 1, Dykes; 2, Beaton. A.O.V.: 1, Anderson; 2, Beaton. BULLF. HYB.: 1, Anderson; 2, Morton and Roxburgh; 3, Beaton. A.O.V. HYB.: 1, Morton and Roxburgh; 2, Anderson; 3, Beaton. Decided to hold F.F. show second week in July. Our president, being a leader of a Glasgow natural history society up the Glen Water, kindly invited as many as could come to join same.—James Fairful, Sec.

GOLDFINCH SHOW IN DUBLIN.

A very interesting table show of Goldfinches was held on Mar. 15, at 28, Ellis's Quay, Dublin. Classes were provided for house-moulted and F.M. birds. Mr. Patrick Campbell judged, and gave universal satisfaction. Principal winners: Messrs. O'Byrne, Trunk, Holley, Shiels, and Gillespie. Considering that this was an initial venture the promoters have every reason to be pleased with the response made by their friends in the British Bird Fancy, and it is to be hoped that this is only the first of many interesting meetings of its kind to be held in the Irish capital.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Annual members' show, Feb. 23, Mr. J. H. Roe judge. Entries were very poor in Canary section, although quality was very much in evidence. British were the feature of the show, some grand birds being staged. Nor. Buff (4): All Taylor. Mkd.: 1, 2, Taylor; 3, Beck. Hen (4): 1, Beck; 2, 3, 4, Taylor. Unflig. (3): All Taylor. Yorks, Buff (1): 1, Clark. Mkd. (1): 1, Beck. Hen (3): 1 Beck; 2, 3, Clark. Unflig. (1): 1, Clark. Mule or Hyb. (4): 1, 2, 3, Tonks; 4, Amos. Goldf. or Bullf. Bramble or Chaffie (2): Camm. A.O. Brit. (1): 1, Camm, the noted Hawfinch.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Third Annual Pair Show, Mar. 8, St. John's Hall, Richmond. Entries came up splendidly, totalling 89. Nor. Pairs were great, the two classes having 41 entries. Yorks. were also good. There was a splendid attendance, and the sale of catalogues helped to swell the Society's funds. Two new members were made, and we have since received another. Mr. J. Robson judged.

NOR. PAIRS (20): 1, 2, Randall; 3, Huxley; res, vhc, Patterson-Riddle; ex vhc, c, W. Phipps; hc, Birch; ex hc, J. Phipps. YORKS. (12): 1, vhc, Harris; 2, Brown; 3, res, hc, Bamber; c, Harris. MULE OR HYB. (4): 1, Birch; 2, 3, Lear; vhc, Harris. BORD. (2): 1, 2, Lear. BRIT. (7): 1, 2, hc, Birch; 3, Snow; vhc, Foster. MULE OR HYB. (5): 1, 2, Snow; 3, Birch; vhc, Foster. CREST (1): 1, Patterson-Riddle. NOR., NOV. (21): 1, 2, Keary; 3, Martin; res, c, Snow; vhc, Birch; ex vhc, hc, Buck; ex hc, Patterson. YORKS. BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

March table show, headquarters, attracted 47 entries, among which were some good exhibits, the Mule and Hybrid class being much above the average. Mr. W. Swaysland judged. Best bird in show, Dandridge, cl. yell. Yorks. Champ. Yorks. (9): 1, sp., vhc, hc, Dandridge; 2, 3, c, Gibb. Nov.: 1, 3, vhc, Oakshott; 2, hc, c, Firth. Champ. Nor.: 1, 2, 3, Gibb; vhc, Dean. Goldf. or Bullf. (8): 1, 3, James; 2, Morrish; vhc, Smith; hc, Brown; c, Dean. Linnet, etc.: 1, 2, James; 3, Miss Mantell. Greenfinch: 1, 3, James; 2, Morrish. A.O. Brit.: 1 James; 2, 3, Miss Mantell. Mule or Hyb. (8): 1, vhc, hc, Smith; 2, 3, c, James. For.: 1, 2, 3, Miss Mantell. This show commenced competition for the champion and novice cups for points gained at the series of monthly shows throughout the year. Cups have also been provided for breeders of best Canary, best Mule or Hybrid shown at the end of the year, and best Brit. at the special show to be fixed later. Competitors must have exhibited at three monthly shows.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

NOT SINGING (Springburn).—It is not possible to give a satisfactory answer on such meagre details as you give. You should have said how you feed and treat the bird generally, and where it is kept. It is only by having full details on these points that one can hope to give really useful advice. Also you might have seen replies on this subject every week for many weeks past. For instance, see replies to "W. B. B." and "W. J. B. (1)" in last issue. You may try the treatment given in these replies for a month, and if not successful in bringing about the desired effect, please write again, and give full particulars as suggested above, when I shall be pleased to assist you as far as possible.

A QUESTION OF SEX (One in Doubt).—Sorry, but I really cannot undertake the task of sexing your bird from the particulars you give without seeing it. I can only say that considering the lateness of the season when it was hatched, the chances are that it is a hen, and there is nothing in its behaviour that quite nullifies this supposition. It is quite possible for a hen to warble a little, or even sing more or less, either with or without any unusual noise going on, to incite it. At the same time its bold appearance and excitement when placed beside a hen leave just a chance that it is a cock, and if this is so, it will probably come out in song more freely very soon. Judging by what you say about its age, it must have been hatched not earlier than September, and consequently the middle of April will be quite early enough to expect it to be in good breeding condition, and you may try mating it with an undoubted hen about that time, when its real sex will soon be settled beyond doubt, if it is otherwise in a sound and vigorous condition of health. If it is a cock, and in good health and active, its lack of singing abilities would not necessarily prevent it breeding successfully.

PECKS HIMSELF (G. A. C.).—Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only for a fortnight or so, and in addition to this give only half-a-teaspoonful of mixed seed twice a week, and a liberal supply of green salad—dandelion for preference—daily. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day during the first week, and afterwards, every second day for a week or ten days, give instead ten drops of lemon juice, six of glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. See that its cage is quite free from red mites.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

HAS FREQUENT FITS (T. Gould).—The probability is that the bird is now utterly ruined by being kept in an open wire cage hung in a window. I am constantly referring to the danger to birds of this position. Frankly, I think the kindest thing would be to chloroform the poor thing, or get a chemist to do it for you. But if you wish to treat it, give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately half a teaspoonful of mixed seeds twice a week, on two other days a similar quantity of egg food, or its equivalent in bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. Give a little green food daily, and this you may vary occasionally with a morsel of banana, but see that it has sufficient green salad to keep the bowels quite free, but not unduly loose. In an ounce of water for drinking dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and about half the same quantity of bromide of potassium every second day for a week. In the next week give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day, and then repeat the dosage of these two weeks for a month or six weeks, if necessary. It should be the first step to move the bird from the window, and keep it in a bright position, free from cold draughts or sudden extremes of heat and cold, further in the room, and a cage of the box type would be much more suitable, and conducive to the well-being of the bird.

OUT OF CONDITION (Novice, F.K.).—Limit the diet of these birds to plain canary seed only as staple for two or three weeks, and give as extras only half a teaspoonful of mixed seed per bird twice a week. Give the cocks three or four leaves of dandelion, and the hens a good sized spray of watercress, daily. In the water add every second day for a week ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and in the next week give five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day. The latter may be continued for a fortnight if necessary. There is nothing whatever wrong with the sample of seed you enclosed, but I note that it contains a slight sprinkling of hemp and millet, which may tempt the birds to throw it about and waste a lot of it in searching after these stray grains. It is best to keep these seeds separate from the staple diet.

D. BARCLAY and B. C. PAUL.—Replied to by post.

MAKES SQUEAKY NOISE (A. M. F., Novice).—Treat the bird for a month the same as advised to "Joey" in this issue, and if not quite well in that time please write again and repeat particulars and I will advise you further. Give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake as the medium for the sherry and emulsion.

BACK GOING BARE (R. E. D., Novice).—First of all examine the cage very closely to see if there are any signs of red mites, and if so thoroughly overhaul the cage and all appurtenances to exterminate them. It is useless powdering the bird for this pest, which harbours in and about the cage, and not on the bird's body. If no insects are found give a staple diet of plain canary seed only, with just a pinch of summer rape, given separately, every second day. Twice a week on the intervening days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts black rape, millet, niger and teazle, and on two other days a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food—dandelion or watercress, for preference, in the order named—daily, and allow bird to bathe freely. Every second day for a week add to the drinking water 20 drops of Fluid Magnesia and ten of lemon juice. In the next week give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day. Then repeat these two weeks' dosage in the same order during the third and fourth weeks.

YORKSHIRES ROLLERS (C. A. B.).—(1) You have been a little too impatient, as the season is still rather early to begin to mate up. The birds seemed to be doing quite all right, and would doubtless have gone to nest soon if you had left them to their own designs a little more. To prevent the lining being pulled out of the nest pan you should have given a little cowhair or similar material for them to line the pan with. Unless you do this you will find but few birds that will not pull out the linings more or less. Your feeding might also be a little more generous. In addition to the canary and rape, give a small teaspoonful of the mixed seed to the pair every second day, and on the alternate days a teaspoonful of egg food. Give three or four dandelion leaves to the pair daily. Continue this feeding until the hen goes to nest, and I think you will soon find them at work in earnest. (2) If the Roller is really in good sound health and active I should be inclined to think it was of the wrong gender to sing much. The only way by which you can bring it back on to a staple diet of rape is to reverse the former process and gradually withdraw the canary, at the same time increasing the proportion of rape. Or you may give the seed box nearly full of plain canary and put a teaspoonful or so of rape on top and leave it with that until it has eaten some way down the bulk of canary before putting in any more rape. For an ordinary singer, however, it is neither essential nor advisable to limit it to a staple diet of rape solely. A mixture of two parts canary to one part rape is a very good staple. In addition to the staple give half a teaspoonful of egg food with about half the same quantity of equal parts maw and seed of pleasure added to it every third day, and twice a week a similar quantity of the mixed seed you use for the Yorkshires. Give two dandelion leaves daily. Every second day for a fortnight add to the drinking water ten drops each of glycerine and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece.

STILL PUFFY (A.M.J., Cricklewood).—Keep the hen that still keeps so puffy in a good sized cage where she can get a fair amount of exercise. Do not trouble to give a pinch of seed hourly, but give a small teaspoonful of canary seed every morning all at once, and at mid-day put in a good supply of green salad—dandelion, if you can find sufficient, which you should be able to do now, otherwise substitute watercress, or any similar succulent salad. About every third day, instead of the usual morning ration, give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, rape, niger, and teazle, and a similar quantity of canary seed in the afternoon, with, of course, the usual supply of greenstuff at mid-day. Do not give a greater quantity of seed than that named, and do not allow any waste seeds or husk to remain in the cage, but you need not limit the quantity of green food. Every fourth day add to the drinking water 15 drops of syrup of buckthorn, and on the following day six drops each of tincture of gentian and dilute sulphuric acid. Continue this treatment for a month if necessary. Glad to hear all the other birds are better.

SAMPLE OF SAND (J.W.J.).—The sample of sand sent would do very well to spread on the cage floors to assist in keeping them clean, but it is not sufficiently gritty to be of any practical use as an aid to digestion. For breeding birds, a more limy or calcareous mixture is best to provide the hens with material for their egg shells. The sample would do for the floors, if you supplied a more gritty and calcareous sand in a small tin in one corner of the cage.

MATING MARKED BIRDS (Cobb).—As far as the health, stamina, and fertility of the birds is concerned, there is not the slightest detrimental effect in mating together two heavily-marked birds. The only effect will be upon the colour of the young, which will in all probability all be heavily marked or broken, or even self greens, on account of the colour of the young having a tendency to revert to the natural green when marked birds are mated together.

A TRIO (A.C.).—(1) Cage this hen alone for a time in order to be sure whether the feathers are dropping naturally. If so, then it will be useless mating her until the moulting is quite stopped. Keep in fairly equable temperature, free from cold draughts, and give every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and add to the drinking water six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. Continue this treatment until the feathers have quite ceased dropping, by which time the hoarseness should have passed away. (2) The food you mention has not been on the market since the death of the proprietor some years ago. It could scarcely be called a food without egg, seeing that it was guaranteed to contain 50 per cent. of fresh egg. There is a food very similar, in appearance at least, now on the market under another name. You will find details of foods for rearing without the use of eggs in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." (3) I cannot advise you to introduce a bird purchased from a birdshop among your stock until it has been isolated in quarantine at least a fortnight to guard against any possible infection. You do not say what variety the proposed new bird is, so I cannot tell whether it would be safe to trust it with your other birds.

COCK MOULTING (Anxious).—The chances are all against the eggs proving fertile, but as you have small clutches it could do no harm to mark these eggs and put them under other hens, as you suggest, provided they are only just commencing to sit. It would at least be giving them the benefit of the doubt, which is a sound principle to follow in bird-breeding. Continue treating the cock as you have begun until the moulting is quite stopped.

CAPES AND PANTS (Joey).—The bird seems to be suffering from bronchial trouble, in addition to which your dietary is not quite correct. You should not give fat to a Canary except as a very exceptional treat. Closely examine the cage, probing any crevices or open joints with a pin if necessary, to see if it is infested with red mite, and if so, overhaul the cage and exterminate them. Keep in a fairly equable place, and see that it is free from cold draughts, or rapid extremes of heat and cold. For the next month give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give just a pinch of the mixture you now use for staple twice a week, and on two other days give a similar quantity of soft food—that you are using will do—with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a little watercress or dandelion daily. Limit the dietary to these items. In the drinking water add every second day for a week six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea. After this give five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight.

WHEEZES AT NIGHT (Perplexed).—It is incipient bronchial trouble from which the bird is suffering, and as you are taking it in time you should be able to quite cure it. Treat the bird in the same way as advised to "Joey" in this issue for two, three, or four weeks as may seem necessary. If the night symptoms quite disappear, there will be no objection to breeding with it, but I cannot advise you to do so as long as they are present. Should you be able to breed with it, do not take more than two nests from it this season, and it would be advisable to remove it to a comfortable temperature in good time for it to commence moulting.

ROOM FACING NORTH (Derflag).—If your birds have been hitherto kept under normal conditions of temperature there is no reason why they should not thrive well in the room facing north, especially if it is fairly well lit. Direct sunshine is of very little consequence, and does not in the least disqualify a room for a birdroom. If you take advantage of a spell of nice weather about the beginning of May, or even a little earlier, to remove the birds into this room, they will be well acclimatised by the autumn and there will be no necessity at all for removing them to other quarters for the winter, neither will it be necessary to employ any artificial heat. A little more generous feeding on the oily or fat-forming seeds during severe weather in the winter will be all that is really required.

KEEPING ROLLERS LOW (Constant Reader).—(1) As staple diet give good sound and mild summer rape only, and supplement this with only a little, say half a teaspoonful of canary seed every second day, and on the alternate days give either a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or a spray of watercress. Once a week after the first fortnight or so give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Dissolve as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the water for two consecutive days in each week, for the next month. It would be advantageous to keep them out of earshot of the other birds, especially those that are coming forward for breeding. (2) It is a little unusual for a Canary to refuse the paste you offered. Try breaking it little into crumbs and placing in the egg drawer, or on top of the seed. If it still refuses it, then give every second day for a fortnight or so half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw, and in the water give first six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three consecutive days. After this give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

ROLLER'S PROTRACTED MOULT (E. L. S.).—Keep the bird in the cosiest part of the room, not necessarily overheated, but see that it is just off the chilly side, as equable as can be, and free from direct cold draughts. Give a staple diet of a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. In the drinking water add 20 drops of chemical food every second day. Continue this treatment for a month if necessary, or you may discontinue it sooner if the feathers soon cease dropping.

IS IT SAFE? (Rose).—So far as any risk to the health of the hen is concerned, it would not be injurious in any way to keep a wheezy cock in the same cage with her, but if the couple were to regard the convenience as a licence to set up housekeeping on their own account, and raise any young, it would certainly be a risk to the well-being of the young, which would in all probability inherit this weakness and suffer in consequence. You might be able to do something for the cock by treating him in a separate cage.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

BREEDING CANARY-BULLFINCH (Norwich Crest).—I am sorry to hear of your loss of Bullfinch hens, and gather that you attribute it to the use of mixed seed. In this I am afraid I cannot quite agree with you. Neither of your birds could have been young ones, as you say they have laid for three seasons, and although four or five years is not by any means the age limit for captive birds, still I should consider it a good average, and birds, like ourselves, are liable to illness that is in no way brought about by either varied or plain diet. Anyway, the feeding I must leave with you, but remember that to get good results it is necessary for both birds to be in high breeding condition, which plain canary seed will not always give. You may be more successful with your new pair; the fact that they agree is much in their favour; but for success there must also be an assimilation between them over which man has no control. In these crosses percentage of infertile over fertiles must be very high; Nature does not intend her laws to be easily upset, so that if you are anxious to produce these Hybrids you must not be downhearted with your lack of success.

LOSS OF MULES (J. Mayfield).—You lost your birds by the illness known as "going light." It is most difficult to deal with, and is one of those ailments that is better prevented than cured. Cleanliness and care in feeding are the two most important factors to success. See the birds are given only just sufficient soft food to be cleared up, so that none is left lying about the bottom of the cage to become stale and sour; this also applies to green food. If you see a bird going quiet give it a dose of Glauber Salts for one day only, and offer a little bread scalded in hot milk daily, mixing 2 or 3 drops of cod liver oil with it, and for a day or two giving nothing but maw seed. This is the treatment that I have found to answer best, although others have been equally successful with a different method; the main thing is to prevent them going wrong by keeping them perfectly clean, and by proper feeding.

SAMPLES OF RAPE (Finch).—No. 1 is much the better. It is more uniform in size, better in colour, clean and sweeter to the taste. No. 2 is a stronger sample, and might be used occasionally for Greenfinches in mixture with other seeds. If you are purchasing fresh supplies you will find No. 1 far more useful for all-round purposes.

MIXED AVIARY (Woodcutter).—The birds you mention would do very nicely in your indoor aviary, and you could feed them in the following manner: Make a mixture of canary seed 4 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape 1 part, and another mixture of equal parts hemp, maw, and niger. The former will be the stock mixture, and the latter given twice a week, a spoonful for each bird, not counting the Foreign. For these you must keep a separate vessel filled with good millet seed. Half-a-dozen grains of sunflower seeds could be given every other day for the Bullfinch. In addition to these seeds you will have to supply them with bunches of greenfood and wild seeds during the spring and summer months. Among these should be plenty of sprays of seeding grass for the Foreigners.

FEEDING A MAGPIE (Esperance).—I fear you have not acted wisely in purchasing the Magpie. He has evidently been neglected and is now in bad condition. I think if you treat him properly he will recover his plumage and soon improve. Give him as a medicine sufficient salts to cover a shilling, dissolved in threo tablespoonsful of water. Let him have it in the morning and remove it at night In addition to the food you are now giving him, procure some best quality coarse chicken meal and meat meal. Take sufficient of the former for the day and mix a spoonful of meat meal with it; moisten the whole with gravy or a little hot milk. You could give him this alternately with the other food, which should be moistened with scraped carrot or boiled potato. He should also have a little shredded lean mutton or rabbit. If you can procure a dead mouse or sparrow freshly killed it will make a nice change for him. You should also supply him with a little fruit, such as apple or banana. The idea is to give him as much change in his diet as possible. Keep his cage clean and let him bathe on fine days. As regards the size of cage, my own is 3ft. long and 2ft. deep, and I do not think it is any too large for him. A Parrot cage is certainly not suitable.

PROPOSED AVIARY (Fancier).—If I understand your drawing correctly, you propose to build an aviary with 4 compartments, each of these to have a covered portion for protection from the weather. I presume the covered part will really only be covered in in the front, so that the birds can get behind it in bad weather. If I am correct I do not think you will require the glass as they will get plenty of light without it. As it faces the south you will require some shade in very hot weather, and if you made a wooden shutter or a framework, and covered it with canvas or roofing felt, it would answer the double purpose of screen and protection from bad weather at night. It could be made to fasten over the front. Now, respecting the birds. In one compartment you could turn in a cock Canary and two or even three hens. In another, two of the Finches, say a Goldfinch and a Linnet, and a couple more hen Canaries. You could do the same in a third compartment or, as you suggest, have the bottom flight for song birds. It would accommodate about a dozen.

SKYLARK NOT SINGING (Skylark).—I have read your letter carefully, and I do not think you are wise in giving your bird medicines. You would do far better in spending the money on a few extra mealworms for him or on a pound of good insectile mixture, and give it to him two or three times a week as a change from his usual food. What he really wants is feeding up. Give him a little chopped hard-boiled egg occasionally, and a pinch of maw seed or even a tiny scrap of shredded lean mutton (cooked). Hang him in a light position and I have no doubt as the days lengthen he will soon come into song.

BREEDING IN AN AVIARY (Twite).—Your suggested mode of proceeding during the coming breeding season is not at all out of the way. It is quite a common occurrence for Hybrid breeders to take a nest of Canaries first, as Canaries usually nest earlier than Finches. You say you intend turning in a cock and hen Canary next week. I do not think you are very wise in doing this. You had far better wait until the middle of March, as we may get some very bad weather yet, and it would be a terrible strain upon birds that had previously been kept inside. There is just one point about your aviary. Do you find tho roof sufficiently covered in? I should imagine the floor to be constantly wet. Why not make a false roof to put over tho wired-in portion in bad weather and at night. It would keep the inmates much more cosy.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (Braggeley).—After you have put in the layers of meal and flannel or sacking it will be necessary to turn in a pint or so of mealworms, according to the size of your box. You cannot breed mealworms without some as a start. In time these turn into beetles, the beetles lay eggs, and the eggs hatch into small worms. (2) Yes, put in a handful of fresh meal occasionally, just under the top layer of sacking. (3) It takes about twelve months for a box of worms to get into full breeding condition. It should be disturbed as little as possible, and kept in a warm cosy corner. (4) I am unable to give you the breeding powers of mealworms or beetles. I know that some boxes are much more successful than others, and increase enormously.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

ROSELLA PARRAKEETS (J. E. H.).—It is impossible to give a definite reply, as, of course, I have not seen the birds; moreover, their price indicates that full allowance had been made for the defect in the hen, and as the vendor has had the bird in full feather, his assumption that the plumage will be renewed is a reasonable one. Still I am bound to draw your attention to the fact that only a bird with the full use of its wings can be considered a good aviary bird; also, that nearly all species retain their power of flight during the period of the moult, and that when such is not the case the moult is not a normal one, and the conditions may be reasonably assumed to arise either from some temporary indisposition or inherent weakness, checking or preventing normal reproduction of the feathers. I can say no more than that the person referred to is a reputable dealer, and you must draw your own conclusion as to whether, after noting the above, the birds are likely to suit your purpose—with the allowance made in the price, the risk you take is not an unreasonable one.

WHAT KIND IS IT? (J. E. H.).—It is undoubtedly a Jendaya Conure or Parrakeet (Conurus jendaya), a species which does not attain the full glory of adult plumage for several years, and there is so much variation in the different stages before this is reached, that it is quite excusable when they are taken for other species or pass unrecognised. The full length of the adult is ten inches. They have been known to aviculture for a long period and have been bred on several occasions; also have been kept in mixed series; nevertheless the temper of resting Psittaci must always be watched, as it is very variable at this period. I have kept them with Rosellas, Lovebirds, Budgerigars, Thrushes, and Babblers, without mishap, but they did not nest with me in this mixed crowd, though a pair in a small separate enclosure did so.

AILING GREY PARROT (L. G. C.).—Unless you are prepared to take the bird to a vet., with a view to having the "gathering" removed, your best course will be to put a little honey and borax (about size of a pea) in the bird's mouth twice daily, till the trouble disappears. You can do this from the end of a stick, which is better than handling, but either a fresh stick must be used, or it must be thoroughly cleaned for each occasion. Keep the bowels quite loose, just short of watery loose, by putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water as often as required. When not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. While you have to give the sop, put half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion in it daily, also supply any kind of ripe fruit, which it will eat liberally. Keep seed in the cage, as the sooner it is able to get back to the regulation diet the better. Keep the cage strictly clean, and stand it in some well-ventilated but not draughty position, also where the temperature is fairly even, and not subject to sudden fluctuations. Report progress a fortnight hence.

MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS, ETC. (A. M. C.).—The Budgerigars will, I should say, soon recover tone; put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water every other day, and put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia into the drinking water whenever the droppings appear hard, the bowels of a bird in a healthy state should move quite freely.

French moult is usually marked not merely by a continuous dropping of the feathers, but also by a failure to reproduce them, so that a bird has either the whole body almost bare of feathers or has many bare patches. The sketch, though, of course unfinished, is quite charming, and the pose very natural. I should not give up in despair, your difficulties will pass, and the addition of one or two really good specimens to make up your pairs (procure them from quite a different source to your present stock) should soon rectify matters. With the advent of warm weather and a good supply of seeding and flowering grass, I opine your troubles will soon cease.

TO REPLACE SUNFLOWER SEED (E. A. B. N.).—(1) Safflower can form a regular portion of your Cockatoo mixture. I should, however, include some sunflower seed. A mixture for the present time in the following proportions should meet your needs: One pint sunflower seed, one quart each oats, safflower, hemp, maize, and peanuts, one pint each wheat and dari, the whole to be well mixed. (2) The beak of the female is shorter and a wee bit narrower than that of the male, the terminal hook of the upper mandible is also shorter, and she is slightly smaller generally than her mate. These are the only outward sex distinctions I am aware of. (3) The Combassou is sometimes troublesome when kept in a cage with species smaller than itself. According to the dimensions of your cage the following species would agree together, either in pairs or odd specimens: Grey, Gold-breasted and Orange-cheek Waxbills, Green and Common Avadavats, Cordon Bleus, and Firefinches. A rush nest makes a good sleeping place.

LOVEBIRDS (A. Myers).—(1) A small log or barrel is the best nest receptacle, but a box with a concave bottom will fully meet the case. (2) The period is erratic, any time between now and August. (3) From three to five, but number is very variable. Abundance of green-food and a small tin of broken biscuits are useful additions to the menu when they are feeding young. Very similarly. (4) The Madagascar Lovebird is not so free a breeder as the Budgerigar, though it is fairly prolific in some aviaries. I am not sure that it has been bred in a cage in this country, and the probability of success would be greater if your cage was half as large again, but if you have a tame, steady pair, success may attend their efforts. Note: The Madagascars line their nests with such things as stems of millet sprays, leaves, strips of thick bark and hents, and you must supply such, a little at a time as you have only cage accommodation, but keep up the supply till you see nest building has ceased. They may use the basket-work nest, but I doubt it. I fear they will cut it to pieces very quickly indeed.

FEATHER-PICKER (M. L. M.).—Do not give table scraps, sops, tea, coffee, etc., and also stop the bones. You can always keep up a reasonably varied diet from the following: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, biscuit, stale crusts, nuts, and greenfood; raw or cooked vegetables are in order, if unseasoned, and given without fats or gravy. Grit, cuttlebones, and pieces of a thickish branch of a tree should always be in the cage. Give the fluid magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, and when not giving the magnesia a little syrup of phosphates in the drinking water should prove a beneficent tonic. Spray this bird with a dilute tepid solution of quassia twice weekly. Give the flowers of sulphur on any of its food that can be slightly moistened with tepid water—it is sufficient to lightly dust the moistened food with the sulphur. Keep it occupied, and free from ennui, as much as possible, and as soon as weather permits give it a few hours out of doors on all genial days, in some unexposed position.

PARROTS AND PARRAKEETS (L. A. W.).—(1) I have kept a Senegal Parrot in a moderate sized aviary along with Thrushes, Babblers, Cardinals, Budgerigars, and Cockatoels, and it never did any mischief, though it would not fraternise with the other occupants. I have known of several pairs that have lived in aviaries out of doors all the year round. (2) New imported about 30s. to 42s. each according to condition and numbers available. £5 is often asked for an acclimatised and tame specimen. (3) Millet and canary is quite a part of their dietary, and this, together with a mixture of oats, hemp and sunflower seeds, would suffice for them, with the addition of ripe fruit and green food. (4) Many do not talk, and there are a good number that do, but as a rule aviary birds are not talkers unless they have had cage training first. (5) They are hardy providing they are put out not later than June and that the aviary they occupy has a dry well lighted shelter shed attached to it. Your plan appears satisfactory. (6) There is always a possibility of them breeding, though they have not done so up to the present. (7) As a rule, yes; but some individuals are very destructive, and an aviary for Parrakeets should always be of the thicker wire stores netting as a rule is the thinnest gauge usually stocked it is stocked in three thicknesses, and you could get it direct from the manufacturers in 25yd. rolls.

WAXBILLS, ETC. (Waxbill).—Perches are not forbidden in the booklet, but twigs are recommended as adding greatly to the bird's well being and comfort, as they enable the muscles of the feet to get proper exercise. A husk nest will do, but a rush nest is far better. They will take their food from ordinary feeders, but these I certainly advise to be inside the cage. The cage is certainly small for Budgerigars, as a husk-nut will use up almost a third of the space. I know of one pair of birds rearing a brood in one even a little smaller, but where one succeeded in so small a cage many would fail. Wild species, whether British or Foreign, need more space to induce them to go to nest than do domesticated Canaries, though there are notable exceptions to all rules. You are more likely to achieve success if you can give the conditions stated in the booklet. However, there is no reason why you should not try a pair in the cage named. I think Orange-cheeks or St. Helena would be the more likely to succeed.

GREY PARROT (Anxious).—Keep the bird as warm as you can, and make the change as suddenly as possible from its present quarters to a warmer one, but the temperature should be fairly regular. Spray it twice a week with tepid water, and after spraying cover up three sides (leave top uncovered) of the cage till the plumage is dry. I should continue to use the Dinneford's Magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely without being water-loose. For a week put three drops of tincture of saffron in the daily supply of drinking water (two tablespoonfuls), at the end of this period resume the chemical food in lieu of the saffron. Give it cod liver oil emulsion by some means, ten or more drops on anything absorbent it will eat, such as sponge cake, stale household bread, or biscuit, or you can give it with boiled maize (see other replies for how to prepare this); failing success by any of these methods you must give it several drops direct to the beak twice daily and continue this for some time. Examine its mouth, and if it is at all furred or slimy put a little honey and borax into its mouth daily from the end of a stick or quill, but only a clean stick must be put into the mixture. You must continue the treatment till the bird regains its strength.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Forge.—Ptomaine poisoning due to impurities in the mixture. Discontinue this and feed entirely on plain canary seed with the addition of a little hemp once a week. Prevention being preferable to treatment, medicinal measures will not be necessary.

G. W. Rattigan.—The bird you sent me (hen) was in good condition, Both lungs, however, were highly congested, causing death. I attribute this to adverse weather conditions, coupled with change of surroundings. If possible, I would advise artificial heat until the weather becomes more settled.

Vere Tonnithorne.—Bird died as the result of a fit. It was in good condition and otherwise healthy. The feeding was evidently all right.

Not Singing

Wanted, a Trial. We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Special notice to all bird fanciers. If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure; Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest medicine ever introduced for getting birds in song and into breeding condition. They are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg-binding, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, sold in 7d., 1/1 and 2/- bottles. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine. W. Reid, Greenock, writes: "Your medicine has been a great success, for both my birds are now singing." G. Chappell, New Mills: "The Tonic Drops have worked wonders. I was astonished at the quick result." C. J. Roberts, Bayswater: "Your medicine for egg-binding is marvellous." Mr. Hatton, Atherton: "Your Tonic Drops are excellent. They have cured me four birds in soft moult. They are now in full song." For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds; also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo, in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6; the 1/1 bottles are treble the 7d. size. All medicines are post paid, per return at our risk. Also four valuable food recipes, how to feed the Lark, Linnet, Roller, Thrush, and Blackbird for health and song given free to all purchasers of our medicines. See advert. below.

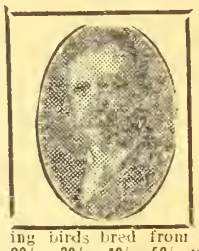
HOW TO SPEND EASTER

Special Invitation to all Fanciers.



I beg to inform all fanciers that I shall be at home during the Easter holidays, and I extend a very cordial invitation to one and all to pay a visit to my rooms. Whether you require birds or not I shall be equally pleased to show you round. I have 16 large rooms, stocked with an exceptionally large and choice collection of all varieties of Canaries and Mules.

If you are requiring any variety of Canary, come and make your own selection, but if unable to do so I shall be pleased to send one or more to any address in the kingdom, on 10 days' approval at my sole risk. The following are a few prices:—

CHAMPION NORWICH (The Bull Dog Strain).

The above strain needs no bounce. Their winnings for the past few years are sufficient proof that there is no better blood in the fancy. I am now offering birds bred from this strain at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- each. Matched Breeding Pairs, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- per pair upwards.

I have also a few good birds bred from other well-known strains at following prices:—Smart Thick-set Cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Good Cobby Hens, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Matched Breeding Pairs, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, in perfect feather and condition, and on full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Erect racy Hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6. Matched Breeding Pairs, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. EXHIBITION YORKSHIRES, bred from my own winners, and ready for immediate benching, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each upwards.

MARCH, 1915. UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. MARCH, 1915.

The following testimonials (in addition to scores of others (which are filed here for the inspection of all visitors) have been received during the last week:—

559, Dumbarton Road, Partick.—The pair of Norwich and Songster arrived safe, and I am delighted with them. You have treated me like a gentleman. I have had dealings with many bird fanciers, and you have been the best of them all.—Donald Crnickshank to Joe Thomas.

13, West Stewart Street, Greenock.—Just received the Clear Yellow Norwich Cock, and am delighted with him. He was not 5 minutes in the house before he was singing beautifully. I have already recommended two or three others to you. Thanking you for punctual delivery.—James McMahon to Joe Thomas.

10, Gray Street, Clowne, Chesterfield.—I have received the pair of Yorkshires quite safe, and am very pleased with same. They are a grand pair at the price, and if I want any more you will get my order.—C. Henshaw to Joe Thomas.

12, Park Avenue, Oswestry.—The Yorkshire and Roller hens arrived safe, and I am very pleased with them. I thank you for your straightforward dealing.—John Roberts to Joe Thomas.

8, Church Square, Tredegar, S. Wales.—Birds arrived safe on the 24th, and give greatest of satisfaction. They are good value for the money, and I shall always recommend you to my friends.—W. Lilley to Joe Thomas.

New Street, Underwood, Notts.—Received birds quite safe, and delighted with them. They are a well shaped pair and well matched. Thanking you for prompt attention.—C. H. Woodhouse to Joe Thomas.

29, Mill Street, Waterside, Londonderry.—I received bird in good condition after its long journey. It is worth double the money, and I shall recommend you to every one I know.—Joseph Burns to Joe Thomas.

56, O'Connell Street, Waterford, Ireland.—The pair Yorkshire arrived safely in splendid condition. Thanks for prompt dispatch and careful packing.—Thos. Phelan to Joe Thomas.

The above are a fair sample of letters I receive by every post from all over the kingdom, and only considerations of space prevent me from printing scores weekly. Please remember this, however: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to every customer.

ROLLERS, MULES, CRESTS, BORDER FANCIES, &c.

British Rollers, in full rolling song, will please anyone, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Hens same pure strain, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-. Matched Pairs, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- 30/-.

Mules.—Over 100 Goldfinch Mule cocks, in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.—I am exceptionally well placed at present as regards this variety, having acquired the stocks of some well-known breeders. I have some exceptionally large, massive birds, with plenty of feather, including some that can win. Crested Cocks, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- each. Crested Hens, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each. Crestbred Cocks, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- each. Crestbred Hens, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched Breeding Pairs, personally selected, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- per pair upwards.

MULING HENS.—Large, healthy, Sib.-bred Muling Hens, in perfect condition, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. These I can specially recommend to Mule breeders.

BORDER FANCIES.—Grand, smart, typical birds, real "Wee Gems," full of life and vigour, and bred from well-known winning strains. Cocks, in full song, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Hens, in perfect health and condition, 3/-, 3/6 4/-, 5/-, 7/6 each. Matched Breeding Pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per pair.

SONGSTERS! SONGSTERS!! SONGSTERS!!!—Champion song cocks, in full free song, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6 each. Sure to give satisfaction. Approval anywhere.

EXPORT ORDERS.—I export birds to every point of the compass, and shall be pleased to quote prices of birds delivered to any address in the world.

TERMS.—Cash or deposit with Editor. Easy Payments can be arranged if necessary with genuine fanciers.

Travelling Cages 3d. extra in all cases.

Remember This, Please.—I invite you to come on any day but Sunday and inspect my stock, and make your own selection. If unable to come, I am prepared to send any number of birds to any address in the Kingdom on 10 days' approval at my sole risk. I guarantee absolute satisfaction to every customer, or cash returned in full. Send a P.C. for my Free Illustrated Catalogue.

TRY THESE

Genuine Rollers of best strains known; cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6; hens, 2/6. A grand lot of hens, every bird guaranteed untried, 2/6, 3/6, 5/- each, equal to those sold at much higher prices. Cages, 3d.: Rudd, Specialist, Norwich.

Roller Canaries.

Voogt's Strain.

The following birds arrived on Sunday night, 21st inst:—

Only 800 Hens.
Only 210 Cocks, No. III.
Nothing more. Nothing less.

The 210 cocks were sold inside two hours, cash here. There is a great difficulty now in collecting these birds, and the expenses are out of all proportion to the profits obtained. I am therefore obliged to charge as follows for those arriving on April 5:—

Note Alteration in Prices.

Hens, No. I. class, to match Cocks I. class, 3/- each. Ordinary Cocks, 2 in wicker cage, 3/-; 14 in 7 cages, 13/8. The lowest price per 100 is 1/4 each; next week, 1/6 each.

Cocks No. I., 12/- each; 7 in 7 cages, 60/-. These are birds with surpassing singing powers. They mostly have soft, sweet musical notes, and improve day by day. Universal satisfaction given.

Only 100 expected.

Cocks No. II., 7/6 each; 7 in 7 cages, 42/-. These are the birds usually advertised having the Nightingale and Woodlark note, with sundry other qualifications.

Cocks, No. III., 6/- each; 7 in 7 cages, 35/-. There is a great demand for this class of bird, all being good, sound, serviceable Rollers.

Distinctly understand all orders accompanied by cash are guaranteed to be sent out in order received.

TERMS.—Cash with order only. All my customers may rely upon receiving birds answering above descriptions. They are at liberty to lodge any complaint with the Editor of "Cage Birds," by whose decision I shall abide. Telephone: 6341 Avenue.

JOHN HAMLYN,
221, St. George's Street, London Docks, East.

STOREY'S ROLLERS

I have only a limited number for disposal. The quality and price are right. Just have one of my Rollers on approval and compare the quality of its song with some of the supposed champions, and keep the bird that gives you the most satisfaction. I think it is splendid the way you keep Cage Birds going during this bad time.—M. Maxwell-Jackson (Harrogate).

When the annual balance sheet of Coventry Godiva C.B.S. was audited we had the nice amount of £5 13s. cash in hand to start the season, writes Mr. H. Saunders, late Hon. Sec.

Schedules for Portmadoc Cage Birds, etc., show, to be held May 14, will be ready next week, we learn from the sec., Mr. D. R. Evans, Llys Dewi, Borth-y Gest, near Portmadoc, N. Wales.

Will all members of the Cinnamon C.C. who have not paid their sub. for 1914 kindly forward on same so that I can make up books for the year, and get out balance sheet as soon as possible, writes Mr. W. E. Seed, sec.

We are having a meeting on April 10 in the Wesleyan Schoolroom at 7, writes Mr. J. W. Dean, hon. sec. Wombwell C.B.S., 9, Milton Street, Ship Croft, Wombwell. We have heard that one or two fanciers would like to join, but as I cannot get their addresses, I cannot write to them through the post. I will gladly give all information to anyone who would like to join us.

The Easter Holidays.

Will Advertisers, and Correspondents generally, kindly remember that all matter intended for NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE should be posted early, to reach us on Tuesday, April 6th (or Wednesday first post at latest). Queries for answer therein must reach us not later than first post, Saturday, April 3rd.

A HOLIDAY REMINDER.

Owing to the Easter Holidays, CAGE BIRDS has had to go to press one day earlier than usual this week; thus any notices, advertisements, &c., which reached us after Tuesday mid-day have had to be held over until our next number.—Editor.

At the next monthly meeting of the Northern Border Fancy C.C. at Pillar's Cafe, Pink Lane, Newcastle, April 7, at 7.45, Mr. Johnston, of Wallsend-on-Tyne, will deliver a lecture on the breeding and exhibiting of the green Border Fancy; all fanciers welcome, writes Mr. C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

One of the very best of the very many beautiful pictures we have seen from the brush of Mr. H. Goodchild is the plate of the Red-tailed Minla, which forms the frontispiece to the March issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, and which illustrates an article on the species by Mr. Wesley T. Page. Mr. Page also contributes an article on the Black Tanager, with marvellous photographs by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, and continues his record of "Visits to Members' Aviaries."

Allow me to thank you for the excellent Annual to-hand yesterday, also for the space therein devoted to the Roller. On page 37 Mr. Claude St. John writes of disposing of surplus hens as soon as the moult is over. With the ordinary singers this is quite correct. Fanciers who keep a better variety, however, will not do so until they have ascertained how, and what, the young cocks are singing, as from this they set a value on their hens.—Jos. Tomlinson (Newcastle, Staffs.).

The March issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," the organ of the Avicultural Society, is largely occupied by interesting accounts of the Kingfisher in captivity, by Messrs. G. E. Rattigan and P. F. M. Galloway respectively. Mr. Galloway writes also on the Nightjar, his contribution being illustrated by a beautiful photograph of the hen bird sitting. The account by "A French Member" of his Humming Birds is concluded, and the number contains a further instalment of Dr. E. Hopkinson's "English Names for the Parrots."

The Future of the Roller Canary in the United Kingdom.

WHY do some amongst our private breeders, and our dealers, continue to advertise their Roller Canaries under such styles as "Hartz Mountain" and "St. Andreasburg" birds? We must confess that we ourselves are unable to discover a satisfactory answer.

It may be true that such expressions have become largely trade terms, intended to convey degrees of excellence in the song of the birds rather than to denote their place of origin; but this only makes the retention of the terms less excusable than ever, for it is a tacit acknowledgment that British breeders are not as yet producing Roller Canaries the equal in song to the so-called Hartz Mountain and St. Andreasburg strains, which, we emphatically say, is not true.

Further, there is another, and highly unsatisfactory, side to the question, viz., that the use of such qualifying terms may tend to lead the outside public to think that the fanciers and dealers of this country are still engaged in the buying and selling of Roller Canaries "made in Germany." Every reader of our journal will agree that even the insinuation of such a thing would be deplorable and intolerable. So far as Cage Birds is concerned, we have taken action which we know every breeder in the Kingdom will uphold :—

No advertisements of Roller Canaries styled "Hartz Mountain" or "St. Andreasburg," will in future be permitted to appear in CAGE BIRDS.

We know that Roller songsters reach us from Holland and from Belgium—birds that are bred in those countries; and we are informed that our Russian allies have made enquiries recently through the Board of Trade, with a view to placing songsters on the English market. To the sale of these birds no exception, of course, can be taken. But such birds should be sold under names that clearly indicate their place of origin; certainly not under misleading German names.

And this brings us to the most serious of all aspects of the matter, i.e., whether Roller Canaries of unquestionable German origin have been placed on the home market this season.

It seems hardly conceivable that any of our dealers would lend themselves to the buying and selling of Canaries, the origin of which could be open to doubt—bluntly speaking, putting British money into the pocket of an unscrupulous enemy who has already cost the Motherland so dearly in the blood of her finest manhood—the blood of our friends and our relations. We are happy to be able to say at once that our enquiries have produced assurance, on no less authority than that of Scotland Yard, that such has not been the case. If ever evidence of such a detestable and un-English action should come our way, we promise the offenders instant and fearless exposure in the columns of Cage Birds and, we hope, a period of retirement at the expense of the State.

Now is the time the Roller Canary breeders of the United Kingdom should come into their own; we hope they will rise to the opportunity. There is a great demand for songsters every year; why should they not supply it? They have stock birds equal to any in the world; they are not, we are sure, lacking in brains to apply the proper methods. We may perhaps be pardoned for mentioning here that there is a contribution in Cage Birds Annual for 1915 specially written to put them on the right track.

Our representative who interviewed the officials at Scotland Yard was very courteously and frankly given some interesting information. He found that the question of the origin of the Roller Canaries—styled "Hartz Mountain," etc., though described as being Dutch or Belgian birds—now coming to England had already engaged the attention of this wide-awake department of public service. The dealers concerned in the transactions on this side had been seen, and their explanations tested; and the latter, we were glad to know, stood this test. For instance, every possible enquiry had been made by the British Consul in Holland, as the result of which he was able to give his consular certificate with every consignment of birds that left "that they did not come from or were manufactured in an enemy country."

AN ADVERTISER'S HARD LOT.

TOO MANY OF OUR READERS HAVE MONEY TO SPEND.

"SIR—I thought you would like to know that up to now I have had 43 answers to my sixpenny advert in CAGE BIRDS. It was rather unfortunate, though, for practically all sent money, and only one enclosed 1d. stamp with which to return it, so all my profit has vanished in sending back the blessed P.O.'s. I wish Sir, you would draw attention to this in your paper, and in future I shall never advertise without asking readers to enclose 1d. stamp to use if I cannot serve them."—Yours sincerely, R. KNIGHTBRIDGE (Leonard House, George Lane, South Woodford).

Kindly intimate, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, Loanhead, that I cannot see my way to accept any appointments this year as judge. I have been forced to refuse a number of shows, and this notice may save others from putting my name forward.

A Popular Fancier Ill.

Fanciers will hear with great regret of the continued illness of Mr. F. Easterling, the well-known metropolitan Yorkshire Canary enthusiast and judge. Mr. W. Gilbert writes that he recently went to see Mr. Easterling for the third time, and found him still very ill and under two doctors, so that he is afraid it will be a long business for this popular fancier.

Do Parrots Foretell Aeroplane Raids?

The French authorities have had a number of Parrots kept in the outposts of Paris, as well as on the summit of Eiffel Tower, says "Pearson's Weekly." The birds have shown a remarkable power of heralding the approach of an aeroplane when the latter has been quite invisible to trained observers stationed near. Warning is given by the birds in a peculiar way. Their feathers literally bristle with excitement, and they yell and screech until they are pacified. The extraordinary thing about this power of the Parrot is that it has nothing whatever to do with eyesight, many of the Parrots having given warning when perched away from the windows. This peculiar power of Parrots was discovered quite accidentally by the excitement they showed whenever the Paris air patrol was flying, or a raid was made by the German aircraft.

Messrs. Long and Craven, 21, Springswood Place, Shipley, are now hon. secs. of Shipley O.S., in place of Mr. E. Grange.

The present hon. sec. of the Shettleston C.B.S. is Mr. S. F. Wood, 4, Tolleross Road, Parkhead, in place of Mr. A. Berry.

The following gentlemen have consented to judge at our annual club show in Loanhead, on Saturday, Oct. 9, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, sec. Scotch Fancies, Mr. Alexr. Paterson, Edinburgh; Borders, Mr. Jas. Auld, Bannockburn; Norwich, Mules, and British, Mr. W. R. Finnie, Edinburgh. Secs. please take note.

The opening article in the March issue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby and Co., 326, High Holborn, one shilling monthly, is "Notes on Autumn Migration at Dungeness," which should be read by all interested in the subject. The usual monthly "Notes" are good reading, and an article by Mr. Oliver Pike on the Fulmar Petrel is illustrated by some wonderful photographs of the bird on the wing and on the nest.

White Blackbird at Bristol.

A white Blackbird has lately been seen by some of the suburban residents of Bristol. It has been suggested that the locality shall not be named. This specimen is a pure white, and has been seen with others of ordinary colour.

The Coal Hawker's Jackdaw.

A coal-hawker at Fulwell, near Sunderland, has so completely tamed a Jackdaw that the bird accompanies him on his rounds. It rides with him upon the cart, upon his shoulders, and on occasions when he is negotiating the sale of his coals it spends the waiting moments searching the road for food. When the hawker has concluded his transaction he proceeds on his way, paying, apparently, not the slightest heed to "Jack." But the bird takes good care not to be left behind, and as soon as he cart is moving again he resumes his perch on the shoulder of his master, uttering a perky "jack," "jack," as he settles down. The bird is frequently seen about the streets of the village "all on its own," and it seems to keenly appreciate the friendly interest taken in its movements by children and others.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

SOME HINTS ON PARROT KEEPING.

By The MARQUIS of TAVISTOCK.

Reproduced, by kind permission, from the "Avicultural Magazine."

Eclectus Parrots.—A brilliantly-coloured family in which the sexes present a remarkable contrast in colour, the cocks being more or less green and the hens crimson. Most of the different species resemble one another so closely that one is tempted to wonder whether they are anything more than local races of the same bird.

Eclecti should be fed on canary, millet, oats, hemp and sunflower with nuts and plenty of fruit and green food and an occasional piece of sponge cake. When kept in cages they are, as a rule, dull and stolid, though occasionally a tame one learns to talk and becomes quite a nice pet. Eclectus Parrots are decidedly sensitive to cold and should always be carefully protected from draughts and not exposed to sudden changes of temperature. They are extremely liable to contract septic fever and should never on any account be placed in an aviary which has contained a case of this disease.

In buying an Eclectus, always see that its eye is clear and bright and the feathers of the head unruffled. If the eye looks watery, have nothing to do with the bird or its cage companions, and do not believe the dealer's assurance that it is merely suffering from a cold in the head. In mixed company I found Eclecti most inoffensive birds, suffering themselves to be unmercifully bullied without making any attempt at retaliation. Their cry is very loud and harsh, but is hardly ever uttered unless they are in exceptionally good health and spirits or much alarmed. One may keep an Eclectus for months without knowing that it possesses a voice at all.

Cockatoos.—The habits of the various species of Cockatoos and their needs in captivity differ so widely, that nothing can profitably be said of the treatment of the family as a whole.

A Favourite Cockatoo.

Greater Sulphur-Crested Cockatoo (Cacatua galerita).—One of the best known members of the family. It does well in a cage, though greatly benefited in health and appearance by a certain amount of liberty. It is also very hardy, and when properly acclimatised can stand any amount of cold. The food should consist of canary, millet, hemp, wheat, oats, maize, fruit, dry bread and plain biscuit. Sulphur-Crests are readily tamed, become very affectionate, and learn to talk well, but, like all their relatives, they are capable at times of producing the most ear piercing yells. They have been successfully kept, and I believe bred, in this country at complete liberty and are certainly most attractive birds when seen flying at large, though unfortunately they are very destructive. It is said that the iris of the hen's eye is much paler than that of the cock, but I must say I have never been able to observe this distinction in any White Cockatoo except the Rose-crested. The Greater Sulphur-Crest is spiteful in mixed company, and its relative the Lesser Sulphur-Crest (Cacatua sulphurea) is even worse.

Salmon-crested Cockatoo (Cacatua moluccensis), a quaint and beautifully-coloured bird which should be fed like the Sulphur-crest. It is very hardy, but when kept closely confined in a cage is apt to become a feather plucker and should therefore be supplied with plenty of wood on which to exercise its powerful beak. The Moluccan Cockatoo makes a good talker and becomes absurdly tame and confidential, allowing its owner to take every kind of liberty with it. It is well able to make itself heard upon occasion, but it is not quite so noisy as some of its relatives. The hen is smaller than the cock, and has the iris of the eye very dark red instead of black.

Beautiful But Unfriendly.

Leadbeater's Cockatoo (Cacatua leadbeateri).—A very beautiful bird, but sometimes shy and unfriendly in disposition. It is quite hardy and should be fed like the Sulphur-crest. It is not to be trusted with weaker birds.

Bare-eyed Cockatoo (Cacatua gymnopis).—A hardy bird, readily tamed. When kept in a cage it should never be given hemp or sunflower, which are most injurious to it. It stays well at liberty, but is very destructive.

Slender billed Cockatoo (Licmetis nasica).—Hardy, and should be treated like the Sulphur-crest. It is a good talker and becomes very tame and gentle.

Roseate Cockatoo.—This well-known species becomes very tame and affectionate, and is not particularly spiteful with other birds, but it is noisy and a poor talker. Talented specimens are, however, sometimes met with, and I once owned a charming tame female which never screamed at all. At liberty Roseates are very attractive and are less mischievous than White Cockatoos. They are, however, difficult to start, and it is important that the hens, at any rate, should be perfectly tame where an acclimatization experiment is attempted. The birds should be placed in an enclosure with cut wings, and it may even be necessary to keep them from flying until they breed, which they are usually quite willing to do if they have plenty of room and unlimited quantities of grass to feed on.

If the plan is successful, and the birds stay when they are full-winged, it is a wise precaution to catch up the breeding hens at the end of every January and keep them in confinement for three months. Otherwise they are almost certain to attempt to nest too early and in consequence die egg-bound. The cock Rose-breast has the iris black, the hen red or hazel.

No Hemp or Sunflower Wanted.

Gang-gang Cockatoo (Callocephalon galeatum).—Hardy when properly acclimatized, but at first very sensitive to cold. Gang-gangs become very affectionate pets, but are noisy and seldom learn to talk. They should never, when caged, be allowed hemp or sunflower seed. They stay and do well at liberty, but must be released cut-winged, except in the case of an adult pair, when the cock may sometimes be released full-winged and his mate not allowed to join him until he has been flying loose for some months. The head of the cock is scarlet, that of the hen grey.

Banksian Cockatoo (Calyptorhynchus banksi).—Food: Hemp, sunflower, monkey-nuts and Brazil nuts—a diet which would kill most Cockatoos in a few weeks, but on which this splendid bird thrives admirably. Fruit, bread and green food is seldom appreciated, but smooth caterpillars are eaten greedily as well as the small white grubs found inside oak-apples. (In collecting the oak-apples reject all those which have a small round hole, marking the insect's exit). Wasp grubs, gentles and mealworms are usually refused.

When buying a Black Cockatoo always be sure to find out to what diet the bird has been accustomed, for if it has ever been used to sunflower-seed it will often starve to death rather than touch hemp, and vice versâ. Some Banksians are imported on plain canary, but this seed is not sufficiently nourishing and birds which will touch nothing else seldom thrive.

Dignified and Charming Pets.

Banksian Cockatoos do well in cages, but are not seen to any advantage in such close confinement. When taken young they are easily tamed and make dignified and charming pets, loving to be noticed by their owner and allowed to sit on his shoulder, though they have a curious objection to being stroked or having their heads rubbed, the gentlest of them tolerating rather than enjoying such attentions.

HOW WE BREED OUR WINNING NORWICH.

By C. STUBBS (Of Stubbs Bros.), Cheltenham.

Once the nest is built, after a day or two the first egg will be found therein.

In some cases the hen has great difficulty in laying, and appears as if about to die. Even then it is best, in most cases, to leave things to nature for at least the first night. If she has not laid then (after being ill the night before) she may often be relieved by holding her with the vent over a jug of boiling water; after this steaming, drop into the vent a spot of sweet oil, then put her on the nest again.

The first three eggs should be quietly removed as laid, and placed in bran until the evening of the day the third is laid, when all should be replaced. The hen will sit closely now, and she should not be disturbed. Hatching should come about on the thirteenth or fourteenth day. After five or six days the full eggs can be distinguished from the unfull ones by their partial opacity. Just before they hatch you will need to put in the cage a jar of egg-food. Don't give any green-food until the young are three days old, when a small spray may be given, gradually increasing the quantity as the young get older.

Hens That Feed Badly.

Some hens are bad feeders, and in such cases a slight change of food sometimes helps, also giving the hen a salt-water bath; but, after all, some hens either can't, or won't bring up young, and there is nothing but to bear it, some such losses and disappointments being the lot of all. If all goes well it will be necessary only to gradually diminish the proportion of egg in the food, and add a sprinkle of maw, and give summer rape, also canary seed crushed. Watercress is a splendid green-food for Canaries; so is shepherd's purse and chickweed. The latter is best when it is old and seedy. Be sure to see that all green-foods are given to the birds quite fresh and clean, and free from frost.

Cures for Some Ailments.

Colds in Canaries may be treated by putting ten drops of paregoric, a bit of gum-arabic the size of a pea, and about ten drops of glycerine in the drinking-water. Loss of voice can be treated the same way, but in either case it is as well to give them one or two drops of castor oil from the point of a penholder. Diarrhœa is usually caused by stale green-food; by giving the castor oil as above, and adding gum to the water, and also sprinkling the egg-food with prepared chalk, you can generally effect a cure. Constipation rarely occurs when green-food is properly given; if it does, it may usually be cured by adding ten drops of glycerine and the same of infusion of gentian to the drinking-water. Use sawdust for the cage-bottoms (give sand or grit in a small vessel); it is much cleaner for the birds' feet. On no account forget the bath.

In conclusion, if this article is of any benefit to the Fancy, I shall be amply repaid, and with the Editor's permission at a future date I will write a few notes on the colour-feeding of the Norwich Canary. [We are sure fanciers will be glad to hear Mr. Stubbs' views on feeding for colour.—Ed.]

FIRST AID FOR AILING BIRDS.

Author of "The Science of Living," Manuals of Canary, Poultry, etc., Diseases, "How to Feed Canaries," etc.

It may be pointed out that too great care cannot be taken in the handling of a small bird, because very slight pressure may be the cause of death. It is not an uncommon circumstance to receive a small bird for post-mortem examination, with the remark, "it died in my hand," the immediate cause of death having been pressure on a bird over-loaded with masses of fat. The pressure under the circumstances stopping the action of the heart.

The Way to Hold a Bird.

The proper way to hold a small bird is in the hollow of the hand without any pressure on its body, or by a grip of as much of its wing and tail feathers as can be taken between the forefinger and thumb. Even if the feathers come out, better so than the risk of killing the bird, for feathers will soon grow again. Birds which shed the feathers too readily (except at moulting time) are, however, not in a perfectly healthy condition of body and are in need of treatment. In many cases when a bird is in an unhealthy condition one of the symptoms is the occasional shedding of feathers out of season. This is the result of the premature ageing of feathers, and more especially at the base. Feathers are developed in feather sacs, and nourished by secretions from glands in them, and when premature decay of feathers take place it can only be the result of insufficient nourishment, due to a diseased condition of the feather sacs. It is my opinion that the fault lies in the choking of the glands in the feather sacs by earthy matter in them, and this opinion is based on the fact that in all cases of birds shedding their plumage out of season the skin is overcharged with earthy matter, and more especially on the claws and feet.

In these cases the toe nails have a tendency to become overgrown, and this is a symptom of premature age, or old age. Here it may be pointed out that overgrown toe nails should receive careful attention because of the risk of the bird getting caught in the wires of the cage by them, with the liability of a broken leg, sprain, or other injury which might have been prevented by the timely trimming of the nails. In the first place the nails may be cut, and then they should be rounded with a file. It is a good plan to use a file to take off as much of the nail as is necessary, because it will not split the nail. In any case the instrument used to cut the nails of a bird should be very sharp, especial care being taken not to use a blunt pair of scissors.

Cracked or Tender Feet.

In some cases the feet of a bird become cracked across and very tender. This is in many cases the result of allowing the feet to become clogged in a dirty cage, though this may not be so much the result of the uncleanliness of the cage as the discharge of mucus from the coat of the bowel of the bird through the action of irritant matter upon it. This may be irritant bilious matter discharged into it from the liver, and disorder of the latter may be the result of some irritant in the diet, though it is mostly due to disorder of the kidneys. If the latter, the bird will be passing an excessive quantity of whitish matter in its excrement. In bad cases the whitish matter—urea—will be of a dirty whitish colour. In the first place steps should be taken to remedy the kidney trouble in a way that will be pointed out in a future article. The affected feet should be cleaned thoroughly, and then dressed with some antiseptic ointment that will not injure the bird when trying to get it off with its beak.

Removing Entanglements.

There are cases where a claw, or the foot, or leg, becomes entangled with some fibrous substance to such an extent as to stop the circulation of the blood in the part below the stricture. If this should happen gangrene would soon supervene were the substance not removed. It may be necessary to cut through the fibrous substance on the front part of the claw, or leg, so as to avoid the arteries. Should there be any appreciable bleeding a solution of adrenalin should be applied, or some cotton wool saturated with compound tincture of benzoin (Friar's balsam). In all cases before commencing any operation everything that may possibly be required should be laid ready to hand. Should neither of the things already named for arresting the flow of blood be available, some cobweb, or burnt white rag, may be used.

Using One's Brains.

One of the chief reasons for allowing a bird a daily bath, is the advantage of moistening its feet. It is well to consider the contrast between a bird kept upon a dry, sandy floor continually, without a chance of wetting and cooling the feet when parched and dry, and a bird in its natural state, which is almost daily wetting its feet with the soft morning dew. Then, too, think of the contrast in diet between the bird confined to dry substances almost entirely devoid of fat to soften its tissues, and the bird which is almost continually devouring soft, juicy vegetable and animal substances. Is it any wonder that a caged bird incorrectly treated suffers from scaly, or cracked feet? The unthinking cruelty of man to creatures under his care becomes grievous to anyone who has a real love for them, because there is not any excuse for not using one's brains.

Scaly legs and feet should first be occasionally dressed with a little of the fresh juice of a lemon; then with a little sweet oil, after having been wetted, or soaked, for a short time in rather hot water. To merely cleanse the feet of a bird they may be soaked in a little rather hot water, to which a small quantity of borax or a little common washing soda has been added.

A Skylark Which Lives on Seed.

Sir,—I am considerably interested in a Skylark that I have in my possession, as it lives entirely on hard seed (mixed seed). I should like to know if any other friend has one that lives on the same diet. What class could I exhibit the bird in? I am pleased to say it is very healthy, a cock bird, and sings well.

R. Etherington.

[We have heard of a number of Skylarks which have thrived on hard seed only. In our view, however, it is not a diet to be encouraged. Skylarks always compete amongst the insectivorous species.—Editor.]

Is Mixed Seed as Bad as a Disease?

Sir,—When I wrote about my Goldfinches and the feeding of the same Mr. Balcombe must remember that I was referring to fresh-caught Goldfinches only, and I will say again that anyone who has the intention of going in for Goldfinch catching, will not better the treatment in the "Nutshell!" booklet. Goldfinches when caught would not know what canary seed was; some would live, but the majority die. This I have proved, as I myself have had a bitter experience by feeding as Mr. Balcombe advises.

S. Payne.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—Although I have been serving under the Government in Dorset (four miles from any station) since Sunderland show, I have always got Cage Birds each week. It is gratifying to me that those who favour the true parentage of "White Rose," as our most popular judges have done, are gentlemen enough to sign their own names to any letters they write. Can any experienced gentleman explain, without any personal insults, if it is possible to breed a light or clear Hybrid from two dark birds? "White Rose" has generally been exhibited in Hybrid classes that include Canary-Bullfinch.

R. D. Parlett.

Sir,—I would like to inform your correspondent "Patrick" that I am fully aware that "White Rose" has been called a Greenie-Bullie by a few. I have also seen some opinions that it possesses Bullfinch characteristics only. I agree with Mr. Hainsworth that it is the height of meanness for a man to sling mud at a brother fancier, just because he is more successful than he is. I should think there has been quite sufficient proof of the bird's parentage for any "Doubting Thomas."

R. Blake.

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve It.

Sir,—It is very evident that my letter of the previous week has left Mr. W. Spillman with only sufficient wind to "blow his own trumpet," and to jog my memory of a 1911 compliment to him, and a generous acknowledgement I made in reference to his old cap-marked bird. Not a word for or against the "big hen," nor any attempt to justify his assertion of no Crestbred or Lancashire blood in his room, whilst his "challenge" has seemingly vanished into thin air. All we get is a suggestion that I do not bandy words with him, but come to Plymouth. What a fizzle out! What help my critic is rendering the Fancy, with 22 years' experience behind him!

E. W. Allsopp.

Sir,—Every observant fancier must admit that of late years we have had various types on exhibition. Certain sections of the Fancy, and certain judges, combined together, have conceived the idea that they must have a giant of a bird, irrespective of those beautiful properties which are and must be the standard properties (of these I have already given my ideas). Now if the selected judges are men who know their work we should soon have a more uniform class on exhibition. Uniformity makes the judges' task more difficult, and the fanciers more interested. I am not going to blame any judges, but I say we have too many of them, which I attribute to the consideration for prizes of those big, rough, heavy-feathered, long cast, bleary-eyed, poultice-chested specimens which some of my friends favour. I say we know what you are using in your breeding-room. This has been clearly hinted at in this correspondence. I maintain this class of bird should be kept at home until the "refining process" has produced a more presentable specimen. If societies will appoint the judges they know will give their awards to the standard properties, without fear or favour, I feel sure they will soon have a more uniform class of birds, and an increased entry.

An Early Brood and a Novel Question.

Sir,—I have a Yorkshire hen which laid 4 eggs on Dec. 28, 29, 30 and 31, and hatched 4 young ones on Jan. 13, which are fine birds. On Feb. 9, 10, 11, 12 she again laid and hatched out 4 more young Canaries, which are doing well. She has laid again this day, Mar. 22. Not a bad record for so early in the year? Could you please let me know if the first lot were 1914 birds or 1915, as the eggs were laid in 1914.

P. Hayes.

Border Fancies at the Horticultural Hall Show.

Sir,—After Mr. Ramsden's letter, coming from one so well-known and respected by the Fancy in general, does Mr. Jenkins tell us that he passed all the birds of alleged coloured appearance at the late L.C.B.A. show? Those who have been talking about the the matter in private all seem to agree that certain birds in the money were the ones the judge was speaking of. I am personally in favour of the non-ted bird, but if what Mr. Ramsden says is common to all the big winners, well, the sooner we novices clear out our birds and go in for another variety the better. Just a word, in passing, to those older fanciers who think my letter of last week (under the non-de-plume "Border") "unfortunate" (according to accounts from friends that reach me): Would it not have been better for some of you who knew even more than I to have taken your courage in both hands and done as I did, however late? Many fanciers, whose names are well known, could have saved me, quite a novice, from doing what has been a most unpleasant task. As Mr. Jenkins does not care to answer a letter written under a non-de-plume, I shall be happy now to sign myself, as I usually do,

Harry C. Humphries.

Sir,—I was surprised to see in Mr. Ramsden's letter that he had exhibited Borders at the last L.C.B.A. show, as I saw nothing of his name in the catalogue. Mr. Ramsden says he was standing filled with admiration at the wonderful colour of the birds with the "tickets." Now, to put it plainly, that means to say all the winners were of a very high colour, and suggests that they were helped in colour. As an exhibitor and also a winner in these classes (taking two 1sts, one 2nd, and one 4th, also most points in S.B.F.C. competition) I should like to say that not a single bird I have ever exhibited has been colour-fed, or helped, as it is termed, in any way whatever. At the same time I was very much impressed by the colour of the Borders from the North at the last Palace show, and even felt I had been left out on that account, and set to work at once to breed for colour, the effect of which cannot be seen until this season's young have been hatched. I would like to point out to all Border men of the South Mr. Patterson's remarks in Cage Birds Annual re colour. Now, Mr. Ramsden, keep those cages, and borrow a few of the cocks you gave to your friends, and with good hens see if you cannot bench some "Wee Gems" of the first water. I am sure you will be welcome in the S.B.F.C., and you can help us to get fair-play, and also share in the spoils of our club. It may even be my pleasure to hand you the cup that you handed to me at the last Palace show.

"IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY."

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

The Pelton Fell, etc., Amalgamation of Societies.

Sir,—Having seen Mr. Ward's letter, I may say that I think it is not an amalgamation when it takes three secretaries for eighteen members. If there were so many members paid up, as Mr. Ward says, it was a success, but I would like him to point out to the members where the real success lay. I got the lion's share of prize-money, but what is there in a show where there are two birds in a class? I exhibited at five table, three nest feather, and three all-age shows, nine up to twenty-four birds at eleven shows. So if we had to pay for traps and trains, we had very little money left. At the first nest-feather I was the big winner (three firsts, two thirds and other cards). I won 9d. and carried the birds two miles. I gave all my prize-money to get them home. I always was against the amalgamation, though I said I would still be a member. I hope the old members will lay their heads together and get the shows on a right footing again. I think the amalgamation is about done for when there is no money in the societies. It was all paid out. There were eighteen members paid up at 7s. 6d. each, there were six judges (cost £3 10s.) and three secretaries (cost £1 10s.). If we had not been good triers, and had help from outsiders (tradesmen, etc.), we could not have paid 5s. a class.

James Stanger.

The Heavily-marked Norwich at the Welsh National Show.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Allsopp, I submit that a marked bird up to and including a bird half light and half dark could have competed in Class 28 (lightly marked) considering a class for heavy marked was provided, defined as "more dark than light." The expression "lightly marked" would give a judge a good deal of latitude. Readers will note that "Mr. A." declares that had the three leading birds in Class 29 have been entered in Class 28, he would have promptly disqualified them. What inconsistency!

H. J. Davis.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. H. J. Davis, we should like to inform him that we have full claim on the award we received in Class 29. The bird we exhibited in Class 29 was more dark than light, as, if he had our bird in his hand, he would see for himself. We note he refers us to Mr. Allsopp's admissions, but if Mr. Allsopp had our bird in his hand, he would withdraw his admission as to the second prize-winner. We do not require to make any bother in respect to this class, as we accept the judge's decision as legally binding. We saw the leading bird at the show, and could easily have lodged a protest with the hon. sec., but we let it go, and accepted the decision as sportsmen, as the leading bird deserved its place. As regards Mr. Davis' claim of being the first prize-winner, if it goes as far as he threatens we can claim the first prize before him. We hope our statement will be clear enough for him, in respect to what we are entitled in Class 29.

Greaves & Richards.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Allsopp, let me repeat the first sentence of Mr. C. Kane's letter: "I am rather surprised at the bellicose attitude Mr. Allsopp now adopts." I cannot compliment him on the tone of his replies to fair criticism. Sarcasm is neither wit nor argument. He instances the case of an exhibitor who mixes his labels, puts a yellow in the buff class and vice-versa. Yes, Mr. Allsopp, I have seen this done and assisted at many such sportsmanlike actions as putting the matter right. This is an injustice to no one, because, after the exchange the exhibits are competing in their right classes. But what was done at the Welsh National was equivalent to allowing the yellow to compete amongst the buffs and vice-versa, which I say would be an injustice to the other exhibitors. Again, in the cases of mixed seed in the cages instead of plain canary seed and of putting labels the wrong side of the cage, if the judge is straight this makes no difference to anyone as he (the judge) judges the birds and the best one in his opinion wins, heedless of the kind of seed used or the side the label is on. For some weeks it has been tacitly admitted that the birds in question were more light than dark, and it is rather late in the day to argue the opposite now, as Mr. Crawshaw does. No Court of Law will uphold the Society's officials when they deliberately break their contract in the way they have—no matter what their rules may say.

T. Patterson Riddle.

Sir,—Of so wide-spread an interest has my recent action at the Welsh National Show become, that it seems the only fitting conclusion is "the execution," or "living happy together for ever afterwards." Even Mr. J. Bastock has left the other and more peaceful camp to give me a dig; and, incidentally, talk sense by pointing out exhibitors have two alternatives, viz., "keep their birds at home, or accept awards in good spirit." Mr. D. Williams again joins in, and offers to stand bail—beg pardon, offers to subscribe in the event of Mr. Davis's defeat. Fancy insinuating that Mr. Davis might lose. Then what of the Irish row? I mean Mr. C. Kane, who asks Mr. Davis to wipe his feet upon my coat-tails. Sounds like a wake, does it not? In spite of it all, impartial critics must ultimately get down to the bed-rock of my action, which, broadly, was fully justified. Had I disqualified the three birds in Class 29, I venture to say the Plainhead Fancy would have risen as one man and condemned me for an autocratic action, and, I say, justifiably so. A generous interpretation of the schedule description is the worst anyone can make of my action, and upon this I stand, and not fall. And in these columns I have now said my last word upon the matter. I can only regret that a show with which much out of the ordinary was associated, a show the outcome of much virtue, one in which was embodied peace and goodwill and even philanthropy, should have brought in an aftermath of spleen, ill-will and intrigue, the threads of which are visible, though perhaps of not real consequence.

E. W. Allsopp.

Sir,—I feel I must take sides with the unfortunate Mr. Davis and other exhibitors who entered according to the schedule, for I consider they have been most unjustly treated. I'm surprised at Mr. Crawshaw. What on earth good would lodging a protest have done, when it was by the consent of the chief officials of the show that these birds were allowed to stand eligible? I venture to say the protest would have been over-ruled, and Mr. D. have forfeited his 5s. The birds were wrongly entered (there's no disputing the fact) and Mr. Allsopp was wrong in seeking other advice—he had his guide in the classification, and surely he has lived long enough to know that "Two wrongs never make a right." His letter this week makes the matter worse. He must know that the committee could not withhold prize-money, the entrance fees had been paid and accepted, therefore the class was well supported. Exhibitors want no rearranging of classes after entries are in; and also judges that go straight to their duties knowing what to do without private consultations. I must add, in conclusion, how much we fanciers are indebted to your paper, and also to Mr. Norman for his straight, unbiassed report, without which this matter might never have been brought to light.

Voluntary Enlistment.

An Appeal for More Recruits.

Sir,—The War Office has approved of a recruiting scheme which can be effectively carried out if taken up and supported by the whole Press. I have been authorised to act as the instrument for enlisting the co-operation of every daily and weekly journal in the United Kingdom to publish forthwith the Registration Form at the foot of this letter, and to agree to the following procedure in connection therewith:—

1. The Forms when duly completed, to be returned to the issuing paper (Cage Birds) in envelopes marked "Recruiting," and the names and addresses of prospective recruits to be published daily or weekly in the columns of Cage Birds.

2. The returned Forms to be forwarded daily or weekly to the Honorary Organiser, c/o Recruiting, 39, St. James Street, London, S.W., where they will be scrutinised and tabulated into districts in accordance with the existing recruiting areas, prior to being despatched to the various regimental districts.

The total number of registration forms assembled by this method will be published at the end of the month, as well as the number of recruits enrolled by each journal. It is evident that the success of the scheme depends primarily upon the public-spirited generosity of newspaper proprietors, who are asked to give valuable space gratis, and upon the editorial support which the scheme will receive. It is hoped that, for national reasons, both will be freely accorded, and that the whole Press will co-operate. The publication of this letter has been officially sanctioned.

Yours faithfully,

Francis Trippel, Hon. Organiser.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-st., Mar. 3, Mr. A. Broadhurst chair, and the best gathering for some considerable time. New members made: Messrs. Loach and Taylor. Nominated: Messrs. Padmore, Lane, Staveley, Ancott and Sheldon. It is very gratifying to see so many new members, we are going strong. Shall be pleased to receive names of any other fanciers who wish to join us. Balance-sheet was presented showing a balance in hand of £7 0s. 6d., after granting £3 6s. 9d. to the National Relief Fund. The meeting was followed by a most interesting lecture given by Mr J. Burke on the "Breeding and Management of the Yorkshire Canary," several points being raised which proved very beneficial to those present. Will all members, new and old, make a special effort to be present next meeting night, April 7, 8.30 prompt; business, N.F. Show, etc., after which the meeting will be thrown open to questions; this will give the novice a chance of asking the experienced fancier anything which he may want to know which may help him during the breeding season.—A. C. Shirley, Assist. Sec.

BEAMISH C.B.S.

Meeting, Bird Inn, High Hold, March 20, Mr. W. Creswell chair, with only a poor turn-up. Decided not to hold a young bird show this year, but the annual show on October 23. Mr. S. Elliot was elected chairman; sec. re-elected, and committee as heretofore. Nomination of judges: Mr. R. S. Bewick, W. Read, J. Risehorough, T. Dixon, F. Swan, J. Emerson, J. Calvert. Secretary to write for terms. New members: J. Stanger, T. Elliott, Pelton, Fell, J. W. Robson, Burnhope, and J. Vasey, Beechgrove, Edmondsley.—J. H. Elliot, Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Mar. 25, "Seven Stars," John's Lane, Wolverhampton. Mr. Willows, chair, with a good attendance. New member enrolled: Mr. Robinson, Netherton. Correspondence was read from the B.R.C.C. that only B.R.C.C. rings will be recognised. Nearly the whole amount of rings ordered, 500, have been sold. Members not having got them please let me know, with subs. for 1915 inclusive. Messrs. Thompson, Harper, and Bird each brought a pair of birds to illustrate the Gluck tours, and an enjoyable time was spent. Vote of thanks to the gentlemen for their kindness, and to the chair, brought the meeting to a close.—J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.S.

Annual meeting, Mechanics' Hall, March 13. Mr. G. H. Bowerbank presided over a fair attendance. Sec. submitted balance sheet, which was accepted as satisfactory, and the following officers were selected for the year: President, Mr. R. B. Webster; chairman, Mr. G. H. Bowerbank; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Bowerbank; sec. Wm. Tallantyre; treas., and show manager, J. Nicholson; auditors, J. Nicholson and T. Fawcett; committee, T. Shield, M. Philipson, J. Walton, R. Morrow, R. Armstrong, I. Elliott, G. Heslop, and W. Howe. Decided to hold three N.F. shows July 3rd, July 24th, and Aug. 7th, and to give prizes for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd most points. Annual show, Nov. 19 and 20. Sec. to write to a number of gentlemen for terms for judging.—Wm. Tallantyre, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, "Old Boar's Head," Manchester, Mar. 27, Mr. Wareing in the chair. Members attended from Bury, Ramsbottom, Ashton, Redditch, Levenshulme, Bolton, Withington, Rochdale, Oldham, Openshaw, etc., a splendid gathering, which made our worthy President and Secretary smile. Decided to order a second lot of rings for the P.R.C.C.; first order sold out. A Points Competition will be worked with profits from rings. This will be very interesting, and the Society intends giving some good prizes as well as specials to all users of the P.R.C.C. rings. New members are rolling in, six being elected. The Society seems to have a new lease of life, the members all taking full interest in the meetings. Next meeting there will be some very interesting things to settle.—Tom Routledge.

GRIMSBY O.S.

Meeting and table show, Mar. 25, Slatter's Rooms, 160, Freeman Street. Mr. A. Oliver in chair. One new member was elected. Proposed that the society obtain a new silver cup for the British section, owing to the old one becoming the winner's own property by winning it two years in succession. Goldf. or Bullf.: 1, Towl; 2, Oliver; 3, Smith. Linnet: 1, 2, 3, Watson. Siskin, etc.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Towl. Greenf.: 1, Towl; 2, Oliver; 3, Watson; 4, Smith. Bunting: 1, Watson. A.O. Brit.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Oliver; 4, Watson. Hen: 1, Smith; 2, 3, Watson. Roller singing contest: 1, A. Towl. Mr. H. Harding judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Next meeting April 29, when Mr. Harding will give a lecture on Canaries; any fanciers or friends heartily welcome.—J. T. Cotterill.

BARROW C.B.A.

Meeting, Gardner's Restaurant, Mar. 24, R. Shackley presiding, with a fair turn-out of members. A few friends also attended, who are taking the invitation given them. We should be pleased to see as many lovers of birds as possible at any time. There was a good turn-out of British at the table show, and some right good birds among them. McFarlane 1, with a Linnet; 2, 3, hc, Shackley; vhc, c, Miss Winder. Mr. J. Mercllo judged, and the exhibits were well placed. The sec. intimated he had secured Messrs. F. Maynell and C. Barben as vice-presidents. New members were enrolled, and everything is promising for a good show season for the club. Membership has increased, and a long list of gentlemen are at the head of the association; anyone desirous of becoming a member we shall be glad to see at the meeting, April 7: an essay to be given by the sec. on Mating and Breeding.—D. McFarlane, Hon. Sec.

SHETTLESTON CARNTYNE AND DIST. C.B.S.

A NEW SOCIETY FORMED.

Meeting Housdan's Tea Rooms, Mar. 27 for purpose of forming the above Society. A splendid turn out gave Mr. Hendrie, who was elected President, every encouragement. Office bearers elected: Vice-Presidents, G. Henderson, R. Rae; Sec., J. Irvine; Committee, Messrs. J. Dalling, R. Hartley, J. Mackay, J. Rice, P. Thomson, A. Berry. Decided to hold F.F. show 3rd July. A cup is being presented to the Society for most points gained in young bird classes at the annual show. Seven new members were added to the roll, which now totals 35. Baillie W. Robertson (Troon), a highly respected and generous gentleman, has decided to become a member. Radius of club is 5 miles from Shettleston Cross, to enable fanciers who are outside the mile and half limit to join and give us some competition. All particulars can be had from J. Irvine, Sec. (28, Blair-st., Shettleston).

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Annual general meeting Mar. 27, before a good attendance of delegates. Mr. F. Cruise (Pres.) in the chair. Idle and Dis. C.B.S. tendered their resignation and same was accepted with regret. Mr. F. Hammond was elected Treas. The balance-sheet, which showed a satisfactory year's working, was adopted as read, and an honorarium was granted the retiring Secretary. Mr. R. Halliday gave the Auditor's report, finding the books in perfect order. He expressed a desire to retire as Auditor, the Council allowing same and expressing regret. A vote of thanks to the retiring officers was suitably responded to by Messrs. W. Cruise and R. Halliday. Much discussion ensued in respect to the ballot, and one of the new rules came in for severe criticism, it being eventually decided to test the feeling of the members of each society, by the delegates, before the next Council meeting. After a brief respite the annual presentation of prizes was duly carried out, Mr. W. Cruise presiding over a good attendance of fanciers. Everything passed off very satisfactorily. No musical programme had been arranged. Votes of thanks were accorded to the donors of the special prizes, Messrs F. Carl, J. W. Ramsden, W. Errington, etc. A vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the year's work to a close. A full list of all prize-winners has been published previously in this paper.—H. Hill.

HUDDERSFIELD O.S.

On Mar. 20 we had a very instructive lecture, given by Mr. Chittenden, of Bradford. It was a masterpiece from beginning to end, and full of very valuable information for both old and young fanciers. The lecture was on "Feeding and Rearing of Canaries." Numerous questions were put to the lecturer, which were answered in fine style. After the meeting we had the pleasure of making two new members.—A. Lawford, Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Meeting and Table Show of British, Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie-rd., Mar. 20, with a good attendance, Vice-President Mr. W. B. Adam in chair. Replies from judges were read and met with approval. Judges engaged for Annual Show: Nor., and Crests, A. M. Gardiner (Newton Grange); Bord., Wm. McAdam (Lasswade); Scotch Fancy, G. C. L. Hope (Edinburgh); Brit. and For., C. Sykes (Musselburgh). Members elected: Messrs. J. Proctor, W. Smith, W. Wall, G. Muir, Patrick, Stronach, and Williamson. Mr. J. Sykes (Musselburgh) judged Table Show; Mr. Robt. Craig steward. Agreed to pay 1/- per class in prizes. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to the chair.

Table Show.—Goldf.: 1, 2, Watson; 3, Ritchie. Linnet: 1, Allan; 2, Adam; 3, Weir. Bunting: 1, 2, W. Watson. Softbill: 1, Watson. Siskin, etc.: 1, 2, Watson; 3, Ritchie. A.O. Finch: 1, Allan; 2, Watson; 3, Ritchie. Hen for Hyb. Breeding: 1, Adam; 2, Allan; 3, Watson. Muling Pairs: 1, Stormont; 2, Brown. Hybridising pairs: 1, Weir; 2, Allan. Class 10: 1, Watson; 2, Brown; 3, Stormont. The members held Judging Competition after Mr. Sykes's decisions had been scaled, and Mr. Brown won with 98 points; runner-up, W. B. Adam, 93; each receiving a special prize. Vote of thanks to Mr. Sykes and Mr. Craig was well responded to.—J. Charlton, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Mr. Allsopp presided over a well attended annual general meeting. The Auditors (Messrs. H. C. Smith and M. A. Ball) gave a report. We had a loss of £2 11s. 6d. on the Radius Show, also on the year's working a loss of 17s. Mr. Smith appealed to members to pay contributions when due; if members had paid their arrears we should have had a balance to the good. Mr. Ball endorsed all that Mr. Smith had said, and also moved that £10 of the cash in Treasurer's hands be placed on deposit at the bank. Officers elected for ensuing year: Chairman, Mr. Whetton; Vice-Chair., Mr. E. J. Banks; Treas., Mr. E. J. Davies; Sec., Mr. E. Thomas; Assist. Sec., Mr. A. Ball; Committee, Rev. C. B. Jolliffe, H. C. Smith, D. Raymond, J. Pearce, W. Merritt, P. Brailli, A. Dun, E. James, S. Wiseman. Mr. Banks moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Allsopp, the retiring Chairman. Resolved to hold our annual Open Show on Nov. 19 and 20. Judges to be elected at next meeting. Resolved that Secretary book the Carlton Banqueting Hall for the Open Show; the members present promised to subscribe towards the cost. Mr. E. J. Davies' motion to rescind the members' cup rules was seconded by M. Phelps and carried. The following resolution moved by E. J. Davies was carried: That points for members' cup in Open and Members' Show in classes of 4 and under count backwards, that is, 4th 1 point, 3rd 2, 2nd 3, 1st 4. This resolution does not apply to the 4 challenge cups which will be competed for at the Open Show. Will members in arrears please pay up as soon as possible. Subs. are now due for the 1915 season.—E. Thomas, Sec.

(FOR RULES SEE ISSUE OF MARCH 20th.)

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

ANOTHER MOULTER (New Year).—I'm afraid you cannot have eliminated the exciting causes of the condition, or the moulting must have been checked before now. See that this part of the treatment is carried out systematically, and do not expose the bird to direct cold draughts, rapid extremes of temperature, nor damp, or treatment will be more or less useless. Keep in a comfortable temperature, though you need not overdo it in this way, and then treat the same as advised to "Novice, H.J." in Mar. 13 issue, except that in case you have been using the quinine tonic therein advised—I have not the previous reply handy to refer to—instead of using it again, you may try the effect of six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel. There is no reason why the bird should not get all right before next moult, in the next few weeks, in fact.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (Serin).—(1) Yes, there is a very good chance of breeding Canaries successfully in such an aviary as you describe out of doors. But if there is little or no protection from rain it would have been an advantage to have the roof, chiefly of glass, to throw off the wet and keep the floor dry. Also you must not rely upon the cement basin being replenished by condensation of moisture, if that is your idea in referring to it as a dew pond, as being in the centre of so populous a town I should doubt the purity of such a water supply. With these little differences I see no reason why the aviary should not be quite a success, provided you are careful to stock it with birds that have been bred and kept under normal conditions of temperature. Take advantage of any mild spell of weather from the middle of March onwards to put the birds out. (2) The combination you suggest is quite a possible one, and should do very well for experiment. Put all the birds out together and leave them undisturbed through the season. There is no necessity to remove the cock in such a case as this. Fix up half a dozen nesting sites, and do not place one or two decidedly higher than all the rest, or there will be no end to the quarrels for the possession of those particular sites.

UNFERTILITY (D.M.).—As you say there is no fault with the hens, I take it that you have tried the cock with more than one hen of known fertility in the last two seasons. If this surmise is correct, I would not advise you to rely upon him as a stock bird in the coming season. Indeed, it would be the best course, considering his age, to discard him altogether from the breeding stock. If, however, you wish to try him further, feed him up every third day for a few weeks with half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg food, with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed mixed in it, and on one of the intervening days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Every day give a fresh young growing stool of dandelion—leaves, blooms, and crown altogether, cut off just below the surface of the soil, and placed in the cage whole. About the middle of April, if in high breeding condition, mate him with a young hen, also in good breeding condition, and anxious to go to nest.

A ROLLER DUET (Novice, A.B.).—(1) This bird will probably soon resume song now that the weather is getting brighter and milder, and spring is in the air. It would help to bring him out if you could let him hear a good singing bird near at hand regularly for a week or two. In addition to its regular seed diet give every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry on it, and about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Also give two or three crisp, young leaves of dandelion daily. In the drinking water every second day for a week you may add 20 drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. (2) The cock four years old is by no means too old to breed. As he has not bred hitherto, he should, if healthy and active, and well preserved, now be just in his prime breeding condition.

CHANGE OF SONG (Off Song).—It is not very unusual for a Canary which is kept for any length of time with a Linnet, or similar song bird, to pick up its song, and either interpolate it with its own song or sing it solely. When the association has been so long standing as you say, and the change has become fixed in the Canary's song, you can do nothing at all to bring it back to its own song exclusively. If the Norwich does not sing so much as it should, and you wish to increase the quantity of song, the type of which will, of course, be the same as now, you may treat the bird the same as advised to "Novice, A.B. (1)" in this issue.

NERVOUSNESS (Mist).—The manner in which your bird behaves is due to "stage fright" pure and simple, which is the outcome of excessive nervousness and a too highly strung nervous system. A weak or debilitated condition will, of course, increase these nervous symptoms, and all you can do is to aim at keeping the bird in a good sound condition of health, and endeavour to win its confidence by persistent attention in a quiet and methodical manner. Such birds often make ideal pets once the ice is broken, and their confidence gained, but there is always a great risk of their dying with alarming suddenness, simply from fright. Medicinal treatment is quite useless; tactful and gentle treatment generally is the only means of doing any good for them, and each case needs to be dealt with largely on its own merits. I do not think it is wise to attempt to breed with this type of bird.

SWOLLEN ABDOMEN (D.S.).—The probability is that the hen is suffering from a diseased condition of the ovary, and the external symptoms are of only secondary importance. Keep it quite warm, and in addition to the usual diet give a morsel of bread and milk well sprinkled with maw seed. In the drinking water add six drops each of dilute sulphuric acid and tincture of opium daily until the evacuations become normal. You may also bathe the feet once daily until better with a warm solution of wych hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a tablespoonful of warm water, then dry gently, and anoint with a little Lanocyllin. Cage the bird alone during treatment, and, as it is very unlikely that she will breed again this season, it would be as well to turn her into a flight where she can get plenty of exercise when convalescent, and keep her there for the remainder of the season, unless she should show urgent desire to go to nest again, in which case you may give her another chance. But the outlook is not promising, unfortunately.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (F. W. P.).—According to your drawing, and in theory, your aviary looks well, but you will find a little difficulty in getting the birds to take advantage of the sheltered portion. I would suggest that the top half of the partition be made to work on hinges, at the top, so that it can be raised and lowered at will; this lets more light into the interior of the sheltered portion, and you will find without it that the birds will refuse to go in, once they are let outside. You could easily keep about forty birds in an aviary the size of yours, but do not have an excess of cock birds; that is, if you intend to have some of both sexes. For nesting, hang up boxes, wicker work cups, and nest pans, and fasten up bundles or branches of heather, furze, or other pieces of trees, such as birch, pressed rather tightly together, so as to give shelter and a foundation to build on. A couple of box trees in large pots or tubs would look well in the open portion; and if the birds are liberally supplied with wild food, will not be very much injured.

LINNET NOT SINGING (Oxford).—I feel certain your bird is a cock by your description, but it is not long since you wrote for advice respecting his illness; you say he is now better, and I have no doubt will come into song when he has sufficiently recovered from the attack. Feed him as you are now doing, adding a little teazle to the mixture. You say he will only eat dandelion. Have you tried him with any other green food? What about shepherd's purse, chickweed, and groundsel? I have never had one yet but what would sample all these and many others, not that dandelion is otherwise than good for them, but birds, like ourselves, require a change occasionally. I think if you treat him carefully and have a little patience your bird will soon reward you with song. As a rule a liberal supply of cracked hemp soon brings a Linnet into condition, but in your case you cannot give him this, as he has been fed with it much too liberally, and it was undoubtedly the cause of his illness.

BRITISH AND CANARIES IN AVIARY (H. Jones).—I would not advise you to have more than six pairs of birds in your aviary, especially as you intend to try and breed young ones. (2) The hen Goldie and the hen Bullie will do nicely for hybrid breeding, but the fact of them being house-moulted does not make them any more reliable as mothers. Many Finch hens will incubate, but it is seldom they manage to rear the young, and you cannot do better than put the eggs under healthy Canaries. (3) Sorry I am unable to give you the recipe you want; if you keep your back copies perhaps you can look it up yourself. Methods of making egg cake have been published from time to time, and I believe quite a number of fanciers are using it this year instead of the usual egg and biscuit. (4) You could turn in the following pairs:—Goldfinch, Greenfinch, and Linnet; also one cock Canary, two hens, and a hen Bullfinch. This is not quite half a dozen pairs, but they would be a very suitable lot to begin with.

MANAGEMENT OF SIBERIAN GOLDIE (Nicholas).—When you got your bird you should have enquired the conditions under which he had been kept. It is evident to me that the change possibly from a cold room to your warm kitchen has started him into a moult. All you can do now is to keep him free from draughts and in a fairly even temperature. Your stock mixture appears to be all right, but he should also have a spoonful of wild seeds such as dandelion, thistle, gold of pleasure, and others, twice a week, and a little sunflower seed daily. These birds require practically the same treatment as our British Goldie, excepting that during the hot summer weather their allowance of fattening food should be somewhat reduced. If he will not bathe, you might spray him lightly in the early part of fine days, so that he does not get a chill, and goes to roost thoroughly dry.

GOLDFINCH NOT SINGING (Nor'-West).—I do not think there is much the matter with any of your birds. The fact of the young bird singing so lustily is possibly the cause of the silence of the old muler. Birds sing for supremacy, and when one cannot obtain it he will frequently sulk and refuse to open at all. Removal into another room out of hearing of the strong singer will often effect a cure. It is not actually necessary for a Finch to be in stout song to breed. If he is singing, and in healthy condition, with a clear beak, he is fit to breed with; in fact, I have known them to fertilise eggs when not in tip-top condition. Naturally, the more forward they are the better one's chances of success. (2) Fatness does not mean condition, as fanciers understand the term: in fact, an overfat bird, either cock or hen, will often prove unfertile. Your feeding appears to be quite right, and I would advise you to continue with it. It is quite early in the season for Finches to be fit; the wild birds in the open are far from it.

LOSS OF LINNET (A. H. Lodge).—Your bird may have caught cold, in which case the remedies you gave it would be useless. A few drops of whisky would have been far more useful. At this time of the year one wants to be particularly careful about hanging birds outside for any length of time, especially if they have been in a warm room all the winter. They should be got used to it gradually, say half an hour at a time in the sunshine. Of course, I may be mistaken, and he may have died of quite a different ailment. If you should lose another and are not quite decided about him, why not send the body to Mr. Yates for examination and report? It would be much more satisfactory and possibly prevent further loss. In future I would also advise you to use larger cages; the small back cage is not at all suitable for an active bird for any length of time, and exercise is as necessary as proper food.

LINNET-CANARY MULES (G. I.).—If you are anxious to get some more Linnet-Canary Mules from your pair, I would advise you to keep them in the breeding cage, as you have them more under control, and are therefore rather more certain of results. Let their stock food be sound canary with a third summer rape, and a little mixed seed twice a week, and a spoonful of egg food also twice a week, but not on the days you give the mixed seed. Your aviary is large enough to hold more birds than you have in it at present, but, of course, the less you have the better chance of success, and you had much rather have a couple of successful pairs than an aviary full that do no good.

YOUNG THRUSHES AND BLACKBIRDS (James A. Merue).—In selecting young Thrushes from the nest, take the brightest in colour; with Blackbirds, take the darkest. You will invariably find that the cock birds of both species are stronger than the hens, and are consequently to be found at the top of the brood. With adult Thrushes it is difficult to sex a single bird, but as yours sang some time ago it is no doubt of the right sex. The ailment you speak of is caused through improper feeding, and you had better give him an aperient of Glauber Salts for one day, repeating three days later. I also advise you to change his food; get a pound of good insectile mixture and give it him three days a week, mixing it with scraped raw carrot or boiled potato. Let him have scraps from the table, such as a little finely minced lean meat, pieces of suet pudding, rice pudding, or a cube of bread and milk. Why not send for our Nutshell Booklet on the Thrush? It will give you just the information you require to keep him in health.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2, "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4, "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." FOREIGN BIRDS.

RING-NECK PARRAKEETS (R.L.).—(1) You really do not give me sufficient data to go upon, so I can only assume that your cage is rather small for the two birds, and that in consequence they are in each other's way. The minimum cage for any prospects of breeding Ring-necks in should be 3ft. square, and from 3 to 4ft. high, with a nest barrel, say 9in. diameter by 12in. deep, hung up at top of back corner. I presume you have a pair—the hen has no black and rosy ring, but the ring is somewhat faintly indicated in emerald green. If the disagreement continues and you cannot give them roomier quarters, then keep them in two cages standing side by side. Pairs frequently damage each other a little before they are properly mated and settle down to nesting. If Mrs. Ring-neck continues her violence, such can only be stopped by separation as above; they can be tried together again later if a pair. (2) As a rule the hen, before laying, is mopy, sitting or moving listlessly about with dropped wings; much time is also spent in and about the nest receptacle. It frequently happens that these birds take a year to settle down before they go to nest, and, if yours are young birds, it may be two years before they do so. The only thing is to meet their requirements as indicated above, and then exercise patience till the birds take the required step.

TALKING AMAZON (T.H.S.).—There is much variation in talking capacity or inclination among the different species of Amazons, and equally as much between individuals of the same species. My own experience, as well as that gained generally from birds seen at friend's, etc., or heard of, places the Blue-front at the head of the list of talking Amazons. One sees and hears of the other species producing talented birds, but not in anything like the same number, even when making due allowance for the Blue-front being the species most freely imported. Every Parrot has the power of speech, but all are not equally responsive, even non-talkers are usually good mimics of sounds, calls, etc. You have a tame bird, and I should say give it at any rate another six months' trial. As well as continuing your present method of training, utter a short appropriate phrase to it whenever you give it any titbit from your fingers, holding the dainty before the bird—e.g., "Apple for Polly," etc. Keep its cage where the bird will share the daily life of the household, and it should pick up many things from the ordinary conversation, etc., going on around. While one should always use the constant repetition method to some extent, the vocabulary of most Parrots is largely gleaned from what goes on around them.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.) "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Goulbian Finches," No. 16 "Aradavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Warbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BUDGERIGARS (A. Cook).—You should not put new birds with the present ones till they are in condition again. Have your new cage as roomy as conditions will permit, give them twiggy branches for perches, and put in a good sized husk. Supply seeding and flowering grass ad lib when you can get it free from frost. I think your present birds will pick up as soon as we get some decent spring weather, and it would be well, as soon as you can arrange it, to have their cage thoroughly washed out first with some insecticide, and then with boiling water, letting the food vessels go through the same process. Also soak the husk in boiling water, and put in again when quite dry. Till your present birds have quite recovered tone, I should continue the treatment advised in previous replies. Your query, with others, went astray in post, hence delayed reply.

PORTUGUESE NAME (G.C.G.).—I am away from home and my books, and cannot answer your query till our next issue.

YELLOW-RUMPED SEEDEATERS, ETC. (Topping).—Unless the cock should prove troublesome they will be best left together, you cannot treat wild Finches quite the same as Canaries. I should leave the old pair together all the season, subject to above qualification. The same applies to the Java Sparrows, the only need to separate the sexes is to check breeding during the winter months. Either a rush-nest or a Roller Canary travelling cage will meet the needs of both species; and hay and grass will suffice for nesting material.

AFRICAN SILVERBILLS (J. W.).—The Silverbill is a weaving-finch, and in a state of nature constructs a spherical nest in bush or tree. In a cage a rush-nest or Roller Canary travelling cage should be put up in one corner of your cage near the top; in so small a cage as yours a rush-nest would occupy the least space. If you leave them to themselves and supply a little hay and grain they will line the nest therewith. These birds will rear their young on seed and greenfood alone, but when they have young it is best to supply a mixture of equal parts of crumbled sponge cake and good ants' eggs, make same slightly moist with boiling milk—only a small quantity will be required. I should give them a millet spray occasionally, and keep one in the cage continually while they are feeding young.

AUSTRALIAN PARROT (W. A. W.).—Bathe the feet in hot-water, not hot enough to cause discomfort. Dry with a soft cloth and then paint with neat whisky. If there are any sores anoint these with a little boracic ointment. Keep its bowels moving quite freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful in the drinking-water. The bowels should move quite freely, but should not be continuously watery-loose. When not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. You must give it a few drops of cod-liver oil emulsion daily, either on bread, biscuit, or plain cake, if it will eat either of these; if not, then give it, say, three drops direct to the mouth twice a day till it has recovered its strength. Examine its mouth and throat, and if this is at all slimy or furred, put a little honey and borax into the mouth from the end of a stick daily till it is quite clear. You do not say how you have been feeding, nor what kind it is. But, if as I suspect, it is a Roseate Cockatoo, then its diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, stale crusts and biscuits. Grit (not sand), cuttlebone, and a piece of wood for it to cut up, should be in the cage continuously.

BUDGERIGARS (P. E. W.).—Budgerigars need two husks, so that they may have the privilege of exercising a little choice as to their domicile and also provide a fresh clean nest for the second brood if they will condescend to use it. A superfluity of linsks is a necessity where several pairs are kept together, or there would be nothing but fighting for a favourite husk, for more than one pair would be sure to fancy the same husk. A millet spray is appreciated, as also are a few oats occasionally. The latter may be given regularly when they are feeding young. Our "Nutshell," No. 18, 2½d., post free from our Manager, will tell you all about this popular species.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. W. Guthrie.—Your explanation is the correct one. A clear egg is one that has failed to be fertilised, and an addled (or "rotten," as you term it) egg is one which has been fertilised, but in which the germ has died after incubation has proceeded for some period.

W. Forbes.—Many thanks for the newspaper cutting, which we will certainly use should space permit.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Soft Moult

Wanted, a Trial. We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Special notice to all bird fanciers. If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure; Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest medicine ever introduced for getting birds in song and into breeding condition. They are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg-binding, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, sold in 7d., 1/1 and 2/- bottles. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine. W. Reid, Greenock, writes: "Your medicine has been a great success, for both my birds are now singing." G. Chappell, New Mills: "The Tonic Drops have worked wonders. I was astonished at the quick result." C. J. Roberts, Bayswater: "Your medicine for egg-binding is marvellous." Mr. Hatton, Atherton: "Your Tonic Drops are excellent. They have cured me four birds in soft moult. They are now in full song." For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds; also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo, in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6; the 1/1 bottles are treble the 7d. size. All medicines are post paid, per return at our risk. Also four valuable food recipes, how to feed the Lark, Linnet, Belier, Thrush and Blackbird for health and song given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

APRIL, 1915. UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. APRIL, 1915.

The following testimonials (in addition to scores of others (which are filed here for the Inspection of all visitors), have been received the last week:—

Besthorpe, Collingham, Notts.—I beg to inform you that at our Annual Show (Newark C.B.S.) I took one 1st with a Yorkshire cock I had from you in 1913, and two 2nds with two youngsters bred from him. Thanks for bird received this week.—Walter Ashton to Joe Thomas.

19, Edward St., Nuneaton.—Received birds safe and am well satisfied. They are the best I have seen for the money.—R. E. Pallett to Joe Thomas.

75, Penrhiwceiber Rd., Penrhiwceiber, South Wales.—Bird arrived safe, and am very pleased with it. I thank you for the prompt way you carried out my order. I shall always recommend you to my friends.—A. Avery to Joe Thomas.

Fish and Duck, Prick Willow, Ely, Cambs.—The hens arrived safe and sound. They are two beauties for the money. I have had several from other bird dealers, but never had such quick dispatch before.—J. E. Pope to Joe Thomas.

8, Park Square, Esher, Surrey.—Received bird quite safe. I am very well satisfied with it and thank you for sending so quick after order.—W. Simmonds to Joe Thomas.

18, Queen St., Inverkeithing.—Birds arrived safe and sound. I am highly pleased with them. This is the fifth time I have purchased from you and you have given me satisfaction every time.—J. Prattis to Joe Thomas.

The above are a fair sample of letters I receive by every post from all over the kingdom, and only considerations of space prevent me from printing scores weekly. Please remember this, however: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to every customer.

STOREY'S ROLLERS

I have only a limited number for disposal. The quality and price are right. Just have one of my Rollers on approval and compare the quality of its song with some of the supposed champions, and keep the bird that gives you the most satisfaction. Cocks with full change of song by day or artificial light, price according to quality of song. Cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, a few extra good songsters 12/6 each.- I have none of the common half-bred rubbish, but have a few classic hens, 2/6, 3/- each. High-class typical Yorkshires, cocks 8/6, 10/6, hens 3/6, 4/-, 4/6; matched breeding pairs, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; also Norwich same prices. All birds on seven days' approval; neat travelling cages 2d. each, 2/3 dozen. The old reliable firm and address: E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

14 DAYS TRIAL—OUR RISK

Preston Contest Rollers, same champion strain that we supplied the winners at the principal contests for years, and have received thousands of testimonials. These wonderful songsters only 15/- each on 14 days' trial at our risk; special terms, send 10/- deposit to us and promise balance in two weeks and we will send one of these non-such Rollers on 14 days' trial at our risk. Try one against any other strain advertised and be your own judge. Hens, same strain, 3/6 and 4/6 each; Yorkshire, Norwich, and other Canaries on the same terms; list free: Bairstows, Ormskirk-rd., Preston. (30)

"CAGE BIRDS"
WATCH COUPON
April 10th, 1915.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

I write to inform you how delighted I was on receiving my Cage Birds of March 27, to find on your front page the drawing of my noted dark Linnet Mule, "Highland Leader." Great credit is due to your artist, Mr. Norman, for his excellent likeness and finish. Wishing Cage Birds all the success it deserves.—James Duncan.

I was pleased to see the portrait of my winning Yorkshire on front page of Cage Birds, for which please accept my thanks. It does your artist, Mr. Norman, great credit, and it is very encouraging to novices like myself to see their winning birds in Cage Birds. I wish your valuable paper every success, writes Mr. W. Andrews (Peckham).

The drawing of my Crestbred hen, second at the L.C.B.A., I think looks a treat in Cage Birds 1915 Annual. I might say I have been a reader of Cage Birds since its commencement, and I am proud we have such a paper in the Fancy. I hope its circulation keeps on increasing by leaps and bounds; as an advertising medium it has never had an equal.—R. S. Bewick (Newcastle-on-Tyne).

I was very pleased indeed to see my bird on the front page of good old Cage Birds, it reflects great credit on your capable artist, Mr. Norman, and many thanks for this coveted honour, writes Mr. H. L. Huggins. I should like to add that through my two adverts in your paper I have disposed of all my surplus birds (46 in number). I am looking forward to the coming breeding season, and strongly advise all fanciers to put up as many pairs as possible, for I am convinced that there will be an increased demand for the birds this coming season.

OBITUARY.

With deep regret writes Mr. F. Baxter, Sec. Cowdenbeath C.B.S., I have to inform you of the sad blow sustained by one of our members, Mr. Tom Cowan, who has lost his mother. Fanciers will extend their deepest sympathy to Mr. Cowan in his sad bereavement.

It is with feelings of deepest regret, writes Mr. R. Hutchinson, Sec., Stanley Victoria F. and F.S., that I announce the sad loss our esteemed member, Mr. W. Ostle, has had through the death of his daughter. I am sure all our members will join me in extending our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Ostle in their bereavement.

MR. C. DOBSON (Blaydon).

It is with extreme regret, writes Mr. G. Havver, that I have to record the death of that well-known Crest fancier, Mr. C. Dobson, on March 25th, after a somewhat lengthy illness. He has left a widow, four sons, and four daughters. The remains of Mr. Dobson were interred on Palm Sunday in Ryton Cemetery, there being a large concourse of mourners. The fanciers of Blaydon and Newcastle were well represented, among those present being Mr. F. Swan, Sunderland; R. Armstrong, Tyne Dock; Messrs. Coats, Hutchinson, Curry, Crawhall, Robson, Maddison, and Bertram, Newcastle; T. Fletcher, Rowlands Gill, J. Hands, G. Simpson, C. Graham, R. Harris, C. Vallans, Blaydon; and others. Our sympathy goes out to Mrs. Dobson and family in their great bereavement. Mr. Dobson was 61 years of age.

In the April number of "British Birds," one shilling monthly, Messrs. Wetherby and Co., High Holborn, the usual "Notes" occupy many of the pages, and are especially interesting. The rest of the issue is taken up by an article on the Blakeney Point Ternery, by Mr. W. Rowan, this being illustrated by many beautiful photographs.

The April issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," the journal of the Avicultural Society, opens with an article by the Editor, Mr. H. D. Astley, on the Red-headed Bullfinch, illustrated with an excellent coloured drawing by Mr. Roland Green. The Marquis of Tavistock relates "Some Experiences of Mealy Rosellas," and many other interesting articles are "Notes on the Breeding of the South African Coly," by Mr. G. H. Gurney; "A Tame Raven," by Mr. R. Phillipps; etc. Dr. Hopkinson continues his useful "English Names for the Parrots."

War on the Sparrows.

A wholesale war on Sparrows has been decided on by the South and West Lancashire farmers. At a meeting of the Liverpool and District Farmers' Club serious complaints were made as to the enormous damage done by Sparrows to the corn crops, and a resolution was passed urging all the residents in urban and rural districts to destroy all the Sparrows' nests they possibly could this year. One farmer, Mr. Frank Jones, of Mossley Hill, stated that half a 20-acre field which had been sown with wheat had been destroyed by Sparrows.

OUR "DISORDERLY BIRD-ROOM" COMPETITION.

This created a tremendous amount of interest, judging by the remarkable number of solutions received, and apparently provided excellent entertainment in the solving of the sixteen "sins" committed by the imaginary owner of the bird-room depicted by our artist.

A very large number of readers got within an ace, as the saying goes, of the absolutely correct solution, which is the list supplied by our artist along with the drawing. The item which caused the great majority to "come a cropper" was to be found in the top right-hand cage. The latter contained two birds (one partially hidden by the seed-hopper) with beaks open in the act of singing—two cocks paired for breeding! Many lists had every item correct with this exception.

The names of the senders of the correct lists were written on slips of paper, and the one drawn showed the winner to be to whom the prize of 5s. will duly be sent.

Mr. Stephen C. Tucker,
255, Folkestone Road,
Dover,

Some of the competitors treated the matter "humorously," as (1) anyone who ever possesses a bird-room like this untidy one should fill the pail with water and hold his head in it; (2) cage-scraper left on floor, where you are liable to trip over it, especially if you are Norwich type; (3) Sin No. 9 a Canary at large, 10 a mousetrap exposed, 11 pail of water ditto, remove the two last-named quickly, otherwise Sin No. 13, a death!

A curious feature is that 4 or 5 solvers gave the two cock birds as being "two hens in one cage." Others found lists of "sins" from 18 up to 27, such items as "no nesting material provided," "mouse with hole unplugged," "Hawk kept in Canary room," and "no cuttlefish bone in cages," being put upon the list.

Hoping for a Good Time.

With Cage Birds 1915 Annual I am very pleased. I have no Canaries at present, but will have as soon as my room is ready. I had Canaries some time back, only I kept them in an outdoor room, and was not at home all day; but I am now, and my bird-room will be a living room converted into one. I am hoping to have a good time with my birds.—J. C. Hawkes (London, S.E.).

Jackdaw as Workhouse Pet

At Llanfyllin Workhouse there is a pet Jackdaw. It accompanies the children from the workhouse to and from school regularly, perching on a tree within sight of the door while they are at lessons, and immediately they are out again flies over them on the return journey. On Sundays he accompanies the children to Sunday school in quite another direction.

A Fool of a Blackbird.

There is a fool of a Blackbird in my garden (says "F.Z.S.") in the "Liverpool Daily Post"; he cannot tell the difference between his own image and a real bird of flesh and feather. He spent all the breeding season last spring trying to solve the problem, and now, the nuptial time having come round again, he is still literally bumping his silly head against it. Literally, I say, for this idiotic bird, stirred by the martial spirit of the spring, spends a good part of each morning flying at his own reflection in the scullery window. He perches on a wall from which owing to a strange freak of the lights, he can see a perfect image of himself in the glass in front of him; then he sounds his angry challenge and goes full tilt for the window. Of course, he gets a sudden, and I should think painful—or is a pane-ful?—check, and flutters down for a foot or so. Very angry, he returns to his perch on the wall, sees the shadowy rival which he thinks gave him the bump, and returns to the assault. He is always trying to get his own back, and I suppose he will not learn sense until the spirit of rivalry dies a natural death in early summer. Then we shall have peace, and the window will require less cleaning.

"I inserted a small advert. in CAGE BIRDS last week and could have sold the birds over and over again. It is the first time I have advertised in CAGE BIRDS, and I consider it an ideal paper."—W. FRANK (Nunhead).

"I am absolutely cleared of surplus stock, the results from my advert. passed all expectations. The advert. columns of CAGE BIRDS are without a doubt doing "Business as Usual." —ALFRED R. JAY (Southfields).

"Kindly thank all those who replied to my advert. in CAGE BIRDS of Hybrid pairs, as replies were too numerous to answer; all showing what a valuable paper CAGE BIRDS is."—J. BROTHWOOD (Newport).

"Through the advertising columns of your valuable paper I have sold £12 worth of Rollers, and from one 6d. advert. I have had several applications for Roller Schoolmaster. I think good old CAGE BIRDS the best paper for advertising surplus stock, and I wish it every success." —A. H. PARKER (Ladywood).

"I received 29 applications for my Goldfinches advertised in CAGE BIRDS, for which I must heartily thank you. Having so many, I could not write to all, but if you could thank them through your paper for me I should esteem it a favour, as I am quite satisfied with my exchange, and my customer writes also to this effect."—C. MARCH (Evesham).

"From my last advert. in CAGE BIRDS I have an order from far away Vancouver, B.C., Canada, for six pairs of Rollers. I cannot supply them at present, as I have only two pairs now for disposal. It shows to what distance your splendid paper reaches. I hope to supply them in the autumn. I have taken CAGE BIRDS from the first."—F. HOCKING (Walworth).

"Kindly stop my advert. in CAGE BIRDS. I have sold all the stock I can spare. Pleased to say the demand for birds has exceeded my expectations. Evidently the birdy men are going to do their best to keep the hobby going – good luck to them! What a grand medium CAGE BIRDS is for advertising. The circulation must be enormous, as applications have poured in from all parts. May its popularity still increase."—E. BAKER (Cowes).

"Through CAGE BIRDS I have sold all the Borders which I advertised and also 12 Norwich. I could not answer all letters; and those that I did not I wish to thank through your most valuable paper. My advice is advertise in CAGE BIRDS exactly what you have got to sell at a reasonable price, and your outlay will be rewarded."—J. P. ANDREW (St. Austell).

WILD FOODS FOR SEED-EATING BIRDS.

By CHAS. PRIOR (Ropley).

The useful greenfoods, etc., available during April are herein described, and we have, we are pleased to say, been able to arrange with the Author to contribute a similar article in the first issue of each succeeding month.

THE horse in his stable turns instantly from his ration of corn and hay to the first bundle of succulent "greenmeat," and devours it with eager gusto. The stall-fed cow, with months of straw and mangold chewing behind her, literally slobbers with bovine enjoyment at her first visit to the verdant spring pastures. The carnivorous dog, nauseated by the unvarying monotony of biscuit and paunch, seeks an antidote on the grassy banks. Even man himself, the pampered "Lord of creation," despite his art in preserving and forcing the growth of delicacies to tickle his palate, greets with complacent satisfaction the first stick of outdoor rhubarb, the first spring cabbage, the first dish of green peas; the first head of asparagus. Is there one sound reason why the benefit of timely change of diet should not extend also to the birds?

April is here. Winter's frowning visage has capitulated, at long last, to the smiling countenance of Spring. The Yellowhammers and Chaffinches relinquish their task of gleaning around the corn-ricks, and hie them to the hedgerows and trees. The Linnets forsake the stubbles and rough grazing lands, and appear in couples amongst heather, furze and scrub. The Bullfinches return to the orchards; the Goldfinches are back in the elms, beeches and firs. For this is the season of change, and, to the birds of the air, change of situation means also change of diet. Once again, what reason is there for denying at least change of diet to the birds in confinement? The question has but one answer—there is none, and therefore my present purpose is to contribute a short series of monthly notes, indicating some of the good things in the way of wild foods, as they come in season, which may be secured with little effort and supplied with every benefit to all our caged seed-eating pets.

Weeds Everybody Knows.

April brings us three capital green foods—the time-honoured groundsel, chickweed, and dnadelion—and although any of our Finches that eat green food at all will partake freely of either of these at the end of a long spell on "hard seed" food, it is better to consider them separately.

Everybody knows groundsel. It is not at all handsome, and not over-fragrant, but it is very useful: that is, the seeding tops of it are useful. It is true that birds will eat the leaves as well as the tops until the abnormal craving for a change is satisfied, but the normal appetite is for the seed heads, and this preference must be commended.

Greenfinches are extremely fond of these seed heads, biting them clean through with their strong beaks, and chewing them up en masse. Bullfinches are almost equally devoted to them, grabbing and tackling them much after the same plan. Goldfinches delight in them, first singling out those heads in which the seed is more fully developed, and then extracting and eating each seed separately; dainty and dexterous in this as in all else. Siskins, Linnets, Twites and Redpolls are all pleased to sample this food, proceeding on lines similar to those of the Goldfinch. Canaries will clear it up, lock, stock, and barrel, or, rather, tops, leaves and stalk. But centuries of domestication have tended to pervert the Canary's instinct, and while the seed tops are unquestionably good food, the rather malodorous plant hardly commends itself as fit for such wholesale consumption.

Chickweed for Canaries.

The next item on our list, however, can be advised for Canaries with every confidence as perfectly safe and highly beneficial. That is chickweed, a shallow-rooted dwarf of a plant of creeping habit, with small leaves and tiny star-shaped flowerlets of pure white, about as well-known as grass. The tiny flower quickly gives place to the small seed-pods; the tiny seeds form quickly in the pod, swell quickly, ripen quickly, and are quickly shed.

In the season all these stages are visible on one single plant, and its maximum feeding value is reached when it is carrying the greatest number of well-filled seed pods just at the bursting point. In this condition I venture to say that for feeding to Canaries which are producing eggs or rearing young, there are few foods of any kind within hail of chickweed.

In this condition Linnets, too, as well as their confreres, Redpolls and Twites, are more than partial to it, and so are Greenfinches and Bullfinches. Goldfinches are not so very keen after it, but Siskins, of course, greedy rascals, take quite kindly to it, and even Chaffinches will sometimes venture upon a dainty nibble.

A Use for Garden Pests.

Chaffinches, Bramblefinches, and the Buntings, however, are better suited by the provision of some kind of wild insect life, as an alternative to the domesticated mealworm, so an effort should be made to cater accordingly. House flies may be trapped for them, though it may not be wise to resort to arsenical fly papers for the purpose. Shaking a gooseberry or currant bush over an outspread newspaper will often yield a few green caterpillars.

Digging in the garden will sometimes bring to hand such delicacies as maggots, wireworms, centipedes, and various other ground insects, and their pupæ. All these are acceptable to the Chaffinch, and will stimulate him into firing off point blank volleys of "pink pink" and salvos of "chickweedo" and "kiss-me-dear." The Brambles and Buntings will also be grateful for the privilege of being allowed to stand in when the spoils are distributed.

Dandelion is available as a green food before April arrives, two or three consecutive fine days bringing along a tender young growth of leaves, in sheltered spots, as early as February. Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and Canaries appreciate them during that period of dearth, but the leaves of the plant are of altogether secondary value as compared with its seeding heads. These last, however, are not available until quite the end of the present month, and then not in any considerable numbers; and they will more properly be associated with the wild foods of May.

Just one more item may be added to April's list, and that will be small twigs of fruit buds—either cultivated or wild. Bullfinches are chiefly concerned with these, and they thoroughly enjoy a supply. The twigs may be entwined in the wire front of cage or aviary, close to the perches; and although the birds may not nip the buds off at once, they should not be removed on that account. In fact they seem to be preferred a day or two after gathering.

Where the Weeds Flourish.

Locality influences the relative earliness or lateness of these spring foods, and situation, exposed or otherwise, also takes a hand, therefore it will be understood that these notes refer approximately rather than precisely to the date of their advent. Chickweed and groundsel are abundant upon land which is in a state of high and frequent cultivation, such as, for instance, allotment and market garden grounds, or the home kitchen garden; but where grass is established they cannot survive. Dandelion, on the other hand, flourishes anywhere; on the country's flinty roadside, or the edge of the suburban gravel pit; in the solid clay of the brickfield, or the deep, rich loam of the garden; it can even hold up its head in the fields given over to the all-conquering grass.

Thus April introduces much desirable material with which to break the prolonged monotony of the birds' winter dietary, and the pen may now be laid aside until the claims of May demand attention.

THE MYSTERY OF "BIRD FEVER."

Author of "The Science of Living," Manuals of Canary, Poultry, etc., Diseases, "How to Feed Canaries,' etc.

THE most serious disease of caged birds is septic fever, the so-called "bird fever" that which has most annoyed bird-keepers has been their inability to ward off attacks, or effectually to combat the disease, and this has been through a want of knowledge of its cause.

In July, 1890, I attended a conference which met at St. Saviour's Mission Hall, Euston Road, London, to discuss this disease, and to hear a paper on it read by Dr. Bradburn, of Leamington. A great number of fanciers were present from far and near, including several medical men, and the Turkish Ambassador. Dr. Bradburn said that he spoke from an experience of twenty-seven years, and said that he hoped that they would be able to solve the difficult problem presented to them.

Dr. Bradburn's Views.

He said: "I feel quite clearly on this point—that the epidemic is one of typhus and diphtheria; two distinct diseases, although about equally deadly, yet it must be remembered that it is perfectly possible to have both in the same room. Typhus fever, or 'jail fever' as it used to be termed in days happily long gone by, when it infested our overcrowded and badly ventilated gaols, is essentially a fever of those who live in houses short of light and ventilation, but, although very infectious in what may be termed dens crammed with people, it retains scarcely any of its danger in a good-sized airy house.

Before the symptoms declare themselves in human beings there will have been a period of incubation ranging from two to twelve days Then there is generally a shivering fit, with hot, dry skin, suffused condition of the eyes, thirst, great prostration, and costive bowels. As the disease advances, delirium sets in, and then we get bronchitis, pneumonia, or pleurisy, which only too frequently ends the scene, the patient dying exhausted.

"Now I feel you ought to have no difficulty in applying such symptoms to your birds. You have a Canary, we will say, in your room, which ails. You do not know what, but find it constantly sitting in listless fashion on its perch; it goes to its seed, perhaps cracks a grain or two, which it does not eat, then makes for its water, which it hardly drinks; at last picks over its grit, ruffles its feathers, and puts its head under its wing. If you watch closely you will find this operation repeated dozens of times in a day.

"I do not say you will not find some such symptoms in other bird affections, but I do say that if typhus happens to be about amongst birds, and any of yours behave as I have described, then look out, for you will not be long in seeing it. This abnormal behaviour corresponds to the period of incubation in the human subject, and after it has continued for a few days, more or less in different cases, you would find, were you to register the sufferer's temperature, an increase therein, just as there would be in ourselves under similar conditions.

"Some secondary affection of the lungs will generally cause death in a subject so fragile as a Canary, and this it is most important to bear in mind, because I am certain in the case of many deaths occurring among cage birds put down to bronchitis and the like affections, that such are not the primary cause. There is, as you must know, a very vast difference between the simple bronchitis which may have been brought about through the birds having ben exposed to a draught, and the bronchitis which supervenes on an attack of typhus fever which has already all but taken the life out of the bird by producing sheer exhaustion.

Three Golden Rules.

"What, then, are the causes of such a complaint? Briefly, overcrowding and dirt, because under such conditions adequate ventilation can never be secured. Now what is to be done to prevent this state of affairs? How are we to keep out the disease? It cannot be too strongly pointed out that it is very much easier to prevent the disease than to cure it when once it has got hold of your stock, and I would impress upon you these three golden rules: (1) Never keep more birds than you can attend to properly. (2) Keep your cages thoroughly clean, your birds well fed, and your room well ventilated, but without draughts upon the birds. (3) Always give a strange bird a week's quarantine before placing it amongst your regular stock, especially if an epidemic happens to exist in the bird world. But what if you have it, or, in other words, what is the treatment? I must admit that the treatment of individual specimens is of little avail. The main thing is to save the healthy remainder, and this you must try to do by complete isolation in healthy quarters."

Dr. Bradburn was then proceeding to describe the disinfection of cages, etc., but at this stage I had to leave to attend to my duties. Afterwards I had the opportunity of reading the remainder of the paper and the discussion which followed, but both of these left in dense obscurity the true nature of the so-called "bird fever." Had I been able to stay at the conference, the main points in the paper would have been traversed by me, but I must confess that at that time the true nature of the malady had not been fully discovered by myself, although I was then aware that typhus, or diphtheritic germs were not the cause of the malady.

IMPROVING THE "MASTER SONGSTER," THE ROLLER CANARY.

By DAVID O'BRIEN (San Francisco).

Our American friend thinks the Roller can be made more handsome in appearance without sacrificing its song.

SONG perfection seems to be the sole object of Roller breeders, without any thought about type or plumage. Reading in CAGE BIRDS about the wonders that Miss Martin has accomplished in raising her white and then a black Canary ought to make every fancier sit up and think. I have made up my mind I would try what I could do in improving the type and plumage of my Rollers without affecting the quality of song.

I selected the best pair of birds I had, a yellow cock, clear except for a dark mark from the eye (the shape of a crescent) and a mealy female with a dark head, and one black wing, short tail and with particularly small clean feet. After keeping them away from the others in a breeding cage till they got well acquainted, I let them fly in the aviary, and they remained with each other all the season. She raised eighteen young birds from eighteen eggs. These are all alive and well, and raising youngsters to-day in their turn.

This hen laid four eggs and raised all the four young, four times in succession without a hitch. I tried to prevent her from building again, but she picked up enough stuff to construct a nest, and laid two eggs and raised the young, a male and female. These turned out to be the "King pins" of the whole season's work. The male looks like a twin brother of Mr. Hutchinson's Border Fancy, seen on the frontispiece of CAGE BIRDS of November 28, 1914.

I think this hen (the mother) as near a perfect female as I can get. She is kind and gentle, and, as her season's work showed, a hard and faithful worker. Money could not buy her. I have often seen her sit on one nest of eggs and feed the youngsters of the previous nest at the same time. I thought when she commenced to moult (Sept. 1st) that it would be the end of my little treasure, as the feathers all seemed to drop off in a night, and she looked the picture of misery. All the others were fixed up in their new winter suits, while she sported nothing but her "bathing suit." In six weeks' time, however, she had a new dress equal to any of them, and was in the pink of health as well.

This season I am mating her in my room with her last young son. He is a perfect model and I am looking for great results. She is sitting on four eggs, laid March 7th to 10th. She looks the picture of happiness in a nice new enamelled cage, with her nest of charpie and her bath tub hanging on the cage for any time she wants to use it. In a cage next to her is her mate. I let him fly every evening around the room, and he sits on her cage and "talks" to her. When it is time to shut off the light, I tell him to go to bed, and he does it, quick. I trained him to get into his own cage.

I always admired the London Fancy Canary with its dark wings and black tail. My dream of a perfect Roller is black wings and tail and a black cap, the balance deep yellow. I feel I will get near it next year. I have two deep orange females in the aviary with dark wings and a small dark stripe from the eye. One of them has a brood of young ones almost out of the nest. One of them will have a dark spot on its head, with dark wings, and if it is a cock I will be on the road to success for next year.

My first nest of young birds came out of the shell on Jan. 30, with ice outside the aviary ½ inch thick, so it proves that Canaries do not want a fire to keep themselves warm when you give them plenty of room to fly and get exercise.

Correspondence.

The Heavily-marked Norwich at the Welsh National Show.

Sir,—I think it only fair in the interests of exhibitors generally that the above subject should be fully discussed in your valuable paper. When (as in this case) the wording of the schedule is absolutely ignored what can show authorities expect—possibly short entries, fanciers "tired," etc. I certainly think Mr. Davis perfectly justified in his complaint, and I also have an idea that had either Mr. Allsopp or the Rev. Jolliffe been exposed to the same treatment they would have been equally as annoyed as is Mr. Davis, and possibly other exhibitors in the class. What we pay for we want; nothing more, nothing less. Did Mr. Davis get what he paid for? I think not. As regards Mr. Allsopp's letter of last week, surely a self-green is "more dark than light," and I, for one, should deem them eligible to compete if no class for greens were provided. I would point out to the Rev. Jolliffe that although he himself may think it for the good of the Fancy generally (which I fail to see) he must admit it was at the expense of the other exhibitors in the class. No, Mr. Jolliffe, you cannot make black into white without whitewashing it, and I don't think the Fancy care to see it white-washed in this way.

A Lover of Rights.

Sir,—I fully intended saying nothing further in this discussion, but more than one of your correspondents (to avoid personalities I mention no names) have expressed their gratitude for your paper in such a manner as to cast a deep suspicion on the honour and honesty of the officials of the Welsh National show. Kindly permit me to say that none values Cage Birds more than I, and this after several years of constant and eager perusal, so that my attitude is not in opposition to your very excellent journal. It touches me "on the raw" when I read—"thank Heaven we have the Press" as though the one thing to be dreaded above all others is the light of publication on the actions of the management. The insinuations against the character of gentlemen who not only give their services gratuitously, but also put their hands down deeply into their pockets is to be regretted. It would be a very bad day for the fancy were this type of gentleman to be driven out of its ranks by the unsportsmanlike and selfish attitude adopted by some of your correspondents. To read this correspondence one would think the only thing Mr. Norman said about class 29 was "The judge was caught napping," etc. A far truer appreciation of the class is found in Mr. Norman's words: "During the Saturday of the show the discussion waxed hot and strong over the exhibits in the heavily marked class. This is one that generally affords matter for discussion; some one is sure not to see eye to eye with some of the owners of the birds. The markings on birds cannot be measured with compass and rule, and these little differences are bound to arise, but then, after all, they are welcome. A good discussion without loss of temper is good for the bystanders," etc. I very sincerely hope that such an excellent show as the first Welsh National may not be snowed under as the result of this correspondence.

(Rev.) C. B. Jolliffe.

[Whilst considerable interest has been aroused by this controversy, we feel that all the various points have been so well discussed by the correspondents participating in the argument that any further letters on the matter may tend towards the superfluous. No one who knows Mr. Allsopp and his personal character would ever accuse him of acting otherwise than in what he conceives to be the public interest, and if his action in the present case has not commended itself to all the parties concerned, we feel sure that those who disagree with him will do him the justice of acknowledging that he has acted in all good faith, and that Mr. Allsopp on his part will accept criticisms directed against his action as based on a matter of principle, and not as being in any way personal.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

The Pelton Fell, etc., Amalgamation of Societies.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Stanger's letter, wherein he challenges me to point out where the success of the Amalgamation comes in, I might mention that I have attended three meetings for this very same purpose if called upon to do so, but I am very sorry to say that those in opposition to the amalgamation were conspicuous by their absence. In explanation of my reason to think that the amalgamation was a success, the first thing I should like to point out is this before being amalgamated neither society ever paid more than 6s. per class, and that for a subscription of 5s., a sixpenny entry fee, and a schedule of only about 29 classes. Under amalgamation members have received 5s. per class for half the subscription, viz., 2s. 6d., and besides having a schedule half as big again. Forty-five classes at 5s. a class is more prize-money than has ever been paid before, independent of only paying half subscription. Compare this with any open show prize-money, and 7s. 6d. for 1s. 6d. entry fee (and you must have eight entries in class before you can receive this), whereas our full money is paid on four entries. The next thing in favour of amalgamation is that it has a tendency to double the membership of each society which, working on average, enables us to have a bigger show than formerly. Now there will be a meeting held at Chester-le-Street on April 10, when I hope Mr. Stanger will try and induce these old members to attend and let us hear their arguments against amalgamation, as it is usually by argument we get enlightenment.

The Fertilisation of Eggs.

Sir,—Re the discussion on "The Fertilization of Eggs," now proceeding in Cage Birds, I am writing to tell you of a little experience I have had this season. I had several Yorkshire hens in a large flight by themselves, getting them into condition for breeding. One morning I noticed a hen crouching in the corner of the cage, and on being disturbed she flew up on to a perch and laid an egg, which was broken in falling. I immediately took her out and put her into a breeding cage with a young cock, and they mated up at once. She laid four more eggs and has hatched three young, one egg being clear. One youngster was very small and died when a day old, but the other two are going on first rate, and are now just getting their feathers. This seems to have been quick work considering I am led to believe by the correspondence that the eggs are all fertilized at once, and before the hen has laid at all. Wishing your splendid paper, Cage Birds every success.

A Splendid Suggestion.

Who Will Help Soldier Fanciers to Re-start in the Hobby?

Sir,—As everybody knows, many of our fancier friends have given up their hobby to serve their King and their country, and I believe that the proposal I am about to make will meet with a ready response from the Fancy as a whole. If those fanciers who cannot be with them, sharing their dangers and hardships, would put aside out of their next season's breeding one or two pairs of birds, it would restart many brave men in their hobby free of expense on their return, and I feel sure it would also be the means of bringing a little joy and pleasure to many of our friends broken in the wars. I personally will be quite willing to put aside three pairs of Norwich of a value of not less than £1 per pair, for this purpose. I feel confident the Editor would not mind keeping a list of those willing to help, and to him our warrior fanciers could send their applications.

J. Silver.

Earls Court, S.W.

[Our correspondent's proposal seems to us a splendidly worthy one, and we have no doubt it will be generously and widely supported by bird-breeders. We shall be very happy to keep a list of promises of pairs of birds (or breeding cages, too), and to do our best when the time comes to see that they are distributed to really deserving applicants—i.e., fanciers who have lost their birds owing to active participation in the great war.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

Suggested Fanciers' Social Club for Manchester.

Sir,—A meeting was held on March 27, Manchester Homing Club, 32, Victoria St., a good muster turning up, and it was decided to form a social club, to be called the Manchester Central Fanciers' Social Club. Mr. Fulcher took the chair, and things went on in a business-like way. Next meeting will be held April 17, at 8 prompt, to elect officers, draw up rules, etc. We also want to fix up a ramble and smoking-concert at early dates. Now fanciers, rally round, everyone welcome, no cliques, etc. As the subscription is a nominal one, fanciers can only blame themselves if they do not avail themselves of this opportunity.

R. J. Metcalfe, Sec. pro tem.

Sir,—At last we have someone who has ventured on this social club business. I have heard whispers of this for some time now, and am really glad the thing has come to life, and let us hope to live. I attended the meeting called by Mr. Fulcher, and after looking round the room I thought to myself, what a fine lot of lads; this looks as if something was going to be done at this meeting. One thing that pleased me was that the election of officers was left over until next meeting, then if we all do as Mr. Turner suggested (take another member each) we ought to have some choice. I have been a member of several clubs, and have noticed every now and again we have suggested concerts, rambles, etc. Sometimes they have come off, pretty often not. When they have come off, they have generally been very nice, only you have so long to wait for another. I understand this club is going to make a special line of these things, so now let us all help to make it a success. Come and be made members, you'll get a right "welcome."

The Illness of Mr. Easterling.

Sir,—I also have seen Mr. Easterling, and I am sure all fanciers will be sorry to hear of his long and severe illness, and will hope with me that his little business can be kept together until he is able to attend to it again. I think we all ought to try and help a brother fancier in this all trying time and get up a subscription for one who has always been one of the first to help a brother fancier or the fancy in general. I ask you, sir, to take this matter in hand, as I am sure a little help will be very needful for him. I shall be pleased to start such a deserving case with 10s. 6d., and Mr. Lathbury, 17, Wandsworth Bridge Road, has given me permission to say he will give 7s. 6d. Now brother fanciers join in.

The Future of the Roller Canary in the United Kingdom.

Sir,—The decision arrived at and announced in your last issue to exclude all German terms in the naming of Roller Canaries is, I feel sure, a step in the right direction, which will redound to the credit and good standing of the Roller. It is indeed a step that has been greatly needed for a long time, as the multitude of utterly meaningless names which have been tacked on to this variety in the last few years of its growing popularity cannot be said to have always been elevating or encouraging to the novice who has been too often misled by them into thinking some fantastic and concocted term attached to the word Roller indicated some superior qualities of song. The simple term "Roller" is sufficient for every purpose, and is so descriptive of the full rolling tours of song required of the bird as to be fully understood and appreciated by everyone, expert and tyro alike. That being so, there is no necessity at all to go further for a descriptive name. Call it the Roller, and let that simple and easily understood word suffice. Then, to convey a definite and generally understood estimate of the birds' singing qualities, a standard might be agreed upon to classify the song for purposes of trade, in much the same way as the Continental wholesale houses supply them to the trade as Singers, Class I., Class II., or Class III. as the case may be. This method at least has the merit of being straightforward and business-like, so that even the novice may know what value in song he is likely to get for his money. It is only in the case of private sales of select exhibition songsters that the name of the originator of the strain, if British, and the birds bred from stock obtained direct, that any additional name should be deemed necessary, and it would be better if this could be dispensed with.

Claude St. John.

When Judges Disagree.

Sir,—Several fanciers, knowing I have been a breeder of Hybrids for over thirty years, have asked me my opinion of "White Rose." I have seen this bird a few times, and I have no hesitation in saying that I believe it to be what its owner says it is, viz., a Canary-Bullfinch Hybrid, and from my experience I should say it is not possible to get a variegated Hybrid from two British birds.

William Nichols.

Sir,—I do not wish to try and answer Patrick's questions, that is not my object in writing, and I still maintain what I have already stated—"White Rose" and its owner have not been treated in a fair or sportsmanlike manner. For Patrick's enlightenment, I will just mention, without giving way to sarcasm, that I have seen "White Rose," that I am an old reader of Cage Birds, and have read every line of correspondence relating to this bird, and that Mr. Blake and Mr. Parlett are absolute strangers to me. I like fair play, and when a bird comes out on top I like to give the owner credit. Anyone who reads these columns cannot but be struck with the cantankerous disposition of many correspondents, which does far more harm than good to the Fancy.

W. Hainsworth.

Proposed Blue Cross Show.

Sir,—In connection with the Blue Cross Show to be held at Wadebridge on July 14, it is proposed to hold an open show of cage birds, the whole of the profits to be given to the Blue Cross Society. Pecuniary aid is needed, and the object of this letter is to invite fanciers of cage birds who are interested in the object either to write to me or to Mr. Cave, of Gwendrock, Wadebridge, stating what help they are willing to render, either in guarantecing classes or in a pool guarantee for general expenses, which will be kept as low as possible. Although we are a good way west, there is a good train service to Wadebridge, by two railways, and we have one of the best lighted and most comfortable halls in the country. I also invite the co-operation of specialist clubs, as well as individual fanciers, for if we all pull together we ought to be able to raise a useful sum for the sake of the horses. Cage bird fanciers, by helping the Blue Cross Society to carry on their good work will also be helping the fancy, and thereby themselves. We are running this show not for any benefit that will accrue to ourselves, but entirely in the interests of the horses, and in an endeavour to keep the fancy flag flying, and it is imperative that we should endeavour to get all classes guaranteed.

Voluntary Enlistment.

An Appeal for More Recruits.

Sir,—The War Office has approved of a recruiting scheme which can be effectively carried out if taken up and supported by the whole Press. I have been authorised to act as the instrument for enlisting the co-operation of every daily and weekly journal in the United Kingdom to publish forthwith the Registration Form at the foot of this letter, and to agree to the following procedure in connection therewith:—

1. The Forms when duly completed, to be returned to the issuing paper (Cage Birds) in envelopes marked "Recruiting," and the names and addresses of prospective recruits to be published daily or weekly in the columns of Cage Birds.

2. The returned Forms to be forwarded daily or weekly to the Honorary Organiser, c/o Recruiting, 39, St. James Street, London, S.W., where they will be scrutinised and tabulated into districts in accordanee with the existing recruiting areas, prior to being despatched to the various regimental districts.

The total number of registration forms assembled by this method will be published at the end of the month, as well as the number of recruits enrolled by each journal. It is evident that the success of the scheme depends primarily upon the public-spirited generosity of newspaper proprietors, who are asked to give valuable space gratis, and upon the editorial support which the scheme will receive. It is hoped that, for national reasons, both will be freely accorded, and that the whole Press will co-operate. The publication of this letter has been officially sanctioned.

Yours faithfully,

Francis Trippel, Hon. Organiser.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

Well-attended meeting Crown Hotel, April 1. Some very important business was discussed. F.F. show was fixed for June 26. Several members offered specials. Will all members try and attend next meeting as we intend running our first open show.—G. T. Jones.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Owing to the small turn-out of members we did not pick our judges, but decided to have a special meeting, April 12, at 7.30, in Co-op. Library, for said purpose. Decided to send a letter of sympathy to the widow and family of the late C. Dobson, the well-known Crest fancier. New member proposed, Mr. Henderson, Whitley Bay. Decided to advertise in "Cage Birds" to the extent of 25/-.—Geo. Havver, Hon. Sec.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Meeting, Spencer Hall, Mar. 29, Mr. P. Johnston chair. Mr. J. Robson gave a lecture on Canary breeding, which was highly instructive and interesting to the good muster present. Mr. Robson answered several questions asked by the members, who no doubt went home with the intention of putting into practice many of the useful hints brought forward by the lecturer. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Robson.—J. Hyde.

STANLEY (Victoria) F. & F.S.

Meeting, Mar. 28, J. Armitage presiding, when we got through a lot of business. Following nominated for judges: W. Reid, Sunderland; J. Dixon, Bedlington; R. Bewicke, Newfield; A. Brown, Gateshead; A Hay, Tweedmouth. We had a good turn-up of members, there being a fresh face or two, but we can still do with a better turn-up, so don't forget next meeting, April 25.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Mail Coach Inn, Mr. Brotherton chair. Business was very soon over owing to a table show and judging competition, which was first judged by Mr. Webster, of Rotherham, whose decision was final. Members did not come up as was expected, this being a new thing to us. I hope it was not the judging that kept them away, as there were not many birds to judge, and it was real enjoyment to see the mistakes that were made. Decided that Mr. Warrender (Hoyland) should judge our first N.F show, and Mr. F. Gregory (Sheffield) the second show. A vote of sympathy was passed to Mr. Warrender upon the loss of his wife. The best thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. Webster, and brought a pleasant evening to a close.—J. E. Taylor.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

General meeting, April 1, Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market. Mr. Tindale chair. P.C. read from Mr. Holden, saying he was unable to be present to give his paper on Norwich. Mr. G. A. Key elected a member. Show fixed for July 3, judges and classes to be decided at May 6, meeting. Members please note: Subs. are now due; up to the present I have not been kept very busy making out receipts; I shall be pleased to receive subs. any time.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

NEWCASTLE EAST END C.B.S.

Meeting, Mar. 3, at Hall's Cafe, Heaton Road, Mr. McParthing presiding over a good attendance. Mr. J. Tate (Gateshead) elected a member. Correspondence was read from judges nominated as to their terms. Notice of motion was given to rescind rule referring to judges' radius (members please note), the selection being left over till next meeting. Discussion followed re the revision of rules, and it was finally decided that they stand as last year. Vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the meeting to a close.—J. W. Coutts.

CITY & COUNTY OF PERTH C.B.S.

Meeting, Laidlaw Rooms, Leonard Street, Mar. 29, Mr. D. Brown (Pres.) chair. New members enrolled: Messrs. J. Styles, R. Wood, M. Stewart. The following cups were drawn for each section: Nor., McGregor; Crest or C.B., Miller; Scotch Fancy, Burnfield; Border, Munro; Yorks,, Cairncross; Brit., Dalgliesh; Mules, Hyb. and For., Dow. Decided after amendments, that all cups be won for three years, not necessarily in succession, and only at annual club show. The society to put on the inscription. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to Chairman.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Mar. 11, Mr. T. Ridal presiding. A good muster present. Sec. read the balance sheet and gave a report of year's workings. Balance sheet (showing a balance of £2), was adopted and Sec. congratulated on it. The Society is strong, £12 in cash and 5 cups bringing it up to £20. Auditor's report was adopted. After business an Egg Food Competition took place, and keen it was; samples were fine. Judging was done by ballot, each members voting. Result: 1, Ridal; 2, Chadock; 3, Tomlinson. Two new members were made; next meeting Apr. 11. Lecture, "Seeds and their Uses for Canaries," by the Sec.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

EDINBURGH O.S.

Meeting, Buchanan's Hotel, High-st., April 3. Mr. William Allan presided over a good turnout. The President gave account of conference with Western Society officials, which was a benefit to both societies, but as yet we have no written communication from them. Agreed to limit the specials to be won by members, no member being allowed to win more than four specials at Club Show, cup and joint special not included in above. Mr. R. Stewart was admitted a member. Booking of hens and election of judges was then proceeded with. Next meeting September. Intending new members apply to Mr. W. Allan, 16, Lauriston, or Sec., 35, Easter-rd., before end of May.—A. Weston, Sec.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY.

Meeting, Mar. 31, headquarters, Mr. Hellman chair, and a very poor attendance. It is strange why this should be, as some of our members have promised to give lectures to keep things going until our next show. I have noticed that after the show some members do not attend any meeting until just before the next show, when they come and want their share of prizes that we, who do attend, have worked hard to collect. Also they generally have the most to say about the way specials shall go. At next meeting, April 14, we shall decide what to do with such members. Will members please note that subs. are overdue; also bring all unsold admission tickets. Decided to hold N.F. show, July 8. Members please attend next meeting.—J. S. Jones, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Annual meeting, Mar. 24, Mr. Crawhall presided. New members elected: H. Oxley (Bishopfield), G. A. Key (Benwell), J. Leach (Newcastle), J. Stark (Consett). Sec. presented the balance-sheet, showing a balance in hand of £6 16s. 3d., which was considered highly satisfactory. Officials elected for year: Pres., T. C. Crawhall; Vice-Pres., G. S. Ellwood, Dr. Duncan O'Neal, J. Shepherd, T. E. Pyman, T. B. Tomlinson, J. Curry, G. W. Cuthberson; Chair, C. Cattell; Vice, F. Johnson; Committee, Messrs. R. Butler, J. Stewart, M. Wigglesworth; G. Tweedie, T. Hedley, F. Mirley, F. Crossling, E. Deighton, J. Leach; Auditor, W. Mather; Hon. Sec. and Treas., R. Tindale. A member who wishes to remain anonymous kindly offered a silver cup for most points with unflighted birds bred by exhibitor over table shows, two highest birds in each class by each member to count. Dates for N.F. table shows fixed for June 16, July 14, Aug. 11. Mr. T. B. Tomlinson to judge the first show.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

PENICUIK O.S.

Meeting, Parish Church Hall, April 3. Mr. R. Monteith presided over a poor attendance. Office-bearers elected: Pres., Mr. R. Monteith; Vice-Pres., Pte. George Greig; Sec. and Treas., J. Weir, Hamilton Place, Penicuik. Agreed to hold annual show, Nov. 20. Election of judges and revised classification to be made at the next meeting, May 1st. Intending members please notify Sec. so that classification may be made to suit all. The radius for membership is ten miles, and annual subscription 1s. 6d. Pte. Greig, 8th Royal Scots (who has been in France during the winter campaign and is home recovering from a slight strain) was present, and related some interesting experiences of his visit to a French bird fancier who breeds with some eight or ten hens in one big cage, and is no believer in egg food for rearing the young, simply depending on some crushed corn. Pte. Greig told also of the different species of wild birds which were flying about and which didn't seem to mind the roar of the big guns.—Jas. Weir, Hon. Sec.

OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO. —LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

PELTON FELL & DIST. C.B.S.

Special meeting, Mar. 27, to see if we could draw fanciers together again, but I think there was a misunderstanding, for only five turned up: Mr. Robinson (Sec.), Mr. Stanger, Mr. McDonald (Pelton), Mr. Davison and Mr. Ward (Chester-le-Street). There was no meeting. I think fanciers are going the right way to let 3 societies fall through. I think the Pelton Fell and Chester-le-Street will go on as two old fanciers laid their heads together and determined to carry these old shows on. The amalgamation has ruined these 3 societies, and the ring business I think has caused a lot of ill-feeling among the members. I think 18 shows too many in one season in one society. I have been a keen shower and like to win, and I have done my share. The best thing for fanciers who want to be members of these societies is to send a postcard to the secretary. I hope all the old fanciers will keep the societies going.—J. Stanger.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, April 1, Mr. Jones presiding. The egg-food competition provided a good time and some merriment, as jovial remarks were passed as each competitor was going through the ordeal. Osborne biscuits seemed to take the lead, but two or three members used bread, and the utensils varied from mills, sieves, graters, knives, forks and spoons. Eight members competed, and Mr. White was adjudged the winner. He used biscuits made from one of the recipes which appeared in CAGE BIRDS some time ago, and it is evident that some of the members intend to try it. His time was 3½ minutes, but this was owing to a faulty mill, which was for use generally, and several members said what ought to be done with it. Messrs. Hobson, Sisson, and Hemmings were the other winners. Messrs. Drabble and Furness judged. Mr. H. W. Battye is booked for the May meeting for a lecture, and every member ought to be present. Friends are cordially invited. Meeting commences at 7.30 to enable Mr. Battye to catch his train.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

COLINTON & CURRIE PARISHES.

Meeting, Village Hall, Juniper Green, April 3, President, Mr. Michie, in the chair. Classification for annual show, Nov. 6, was gone into, and it was decided to drop the two classes for Crest and C.B., and to introduce a class for A.O.V. Canary; also to make the class for British into two classes, the first for Goldf., Bullf., Greenf., and Siskin, and the other for A.O. British bird. Also decided to make a class for juveniles under 16 years of age, open to the parishes of Colinton and Currie, for any variety of cage bird, entry fee for this class, 2d. per cage. Mr. Michie is giving a silver medal, and Mr. Palmer another special for this class, which we hope will be a great success, and we hope by this means to make members for our society in years to come. Well-known fanciers were proposed as judges, and Secretary instructed to write them in turn. Five of our members have joined the Army, and it was decided to retain them as members free of all subscriptions, and it was hoped that they would all be back safe before the show season came round. After a vote of thanks to the chairman the members present booked their hens.—J. Napier, Sec.

GLASGOW & WEST COUNTIES.

Meeting and show of Goldfinches and Linnets, Good Templars Hall. President, Mr. P. Pettigrew, presided over a goodly turn out. The Society's rules show but little variation. An amendment to rule 15, that no applicant belong to more than one Norwich Canary Club in or within three miles of Glasgow, was defeated by an overwhelming majority, so the rule still stands. Decided to rambles to Bridge of Weir, date to be fixed at May meeting. New members made: Messrs. T. Trotter, P. Mallon. The following classification was considered adequate for show, to be held May 1: Greenf., Siskin, Lesser Redpoll, Twite, Mealy Redpoll. Specials for show and judging competition were generously given by Messrs. Dick, Liddell, Findlay, Hamilton, Pettigrew, and Adam, who were cordially thanked. The judging competition of F.M. Linnets proved interesting, with a close result; winners: 1, Livingstone; 2, Findlay; 3, Jamieson. Mr. J. Downie, Bridgeton, judged F.M. Linnets, and J. Dick, Kirkintilloch, judged Goldfinches and H.M. Linnets; the awards met with general approval. Goldf. (10): 1, sp, Pettigrew; 2, Mallon; 3, Trotter; 4, McGowan; 5, Fitzpatrick; 6, Adam; 7, Jamieson. Linnet, F.M. (21): 1, 3, sp, 4, Livingstone; 2, Mallon; 5, Pettigrew; 6, Findlay; 7, Jamieson. A grand class, not a bad one amongst them. Linnet, H.M.: 1, Trotter; 2, 3, sp, Cochrane; 4, Pettigrew; 5 sp, Bannerman; 6, Fitzpatrick; 7, Adam.

AYRSHIRE SCOTCH FANCY C.C.

Meeting, George Hotel, Kilmarnock, Mar. 27. Ex-Bailie Robertson ably presided over a strongly representative meeting. The meeting was completely in harmony, and reflected much credit on the Bailie for the methodical means he had employed in bringing so many as twenty members together. Officers elected: Pres., Wm. Robertson; Vice-Pres., G. Deans; Committee, Messrs. A. Bowie, A. Campbell, R. McDowall, R. Ralston, C. McLean and J. Hainey; Sec. and Treas., H. M. Ferguson. Annual snb. was fixed at 2/6. Meetings to be held in the Ossington Coffee House, Kilmarnock, Saturday evenings, at 6; next meeting, April 24. The Annual Open Show will be held 2nd Sat. of Nov., in Kilmarnock; special Scotch Fancy judges will be chosen. Cups will be presented for competition. The President has already generously offered to give a cup, and there is a possibility of the Club acquiring other two cups for competition. Should the club exhibit in the same hall with another club it will be done only as a matter of convenience, for the show will be on its own financial footing, and will be known as the Ayrshire Scotch Fancy Club Show. Classes will be arranged at next meeting. Old birds may be added by any exhibitors. The Secretary of the Kilmarnock C.B.S., who was present, was inclined to favour a connection with the Ayrshire Scotch Fancy Club, and will submit the finding of this meeting in regard to show-room co-operation to the members of his Society when they meet on Apr. 14. Mr. Bowie will hand over his books to the newly appointed Secretary at next meeting, Apr. 24. Ex Bailie Robertson, Pres., gave a short address on the objects of the Club, mentioning particularly that he would like to see the Scotch Fancy Canary in the hands of more fanciers, and expressed his conviction that this could be done by each member of the Club striving to provide purchasers with decent birds at a reasonable price. Mr. G. Deans, Vice-Pres., warmly thanked the President for his most painstaking exertions in reinvestitating the Club, which he felt sure was going to be a great success. The members of the Club, besides the officers as above, are: Messrs. E. Ralston, W. Murdoch, R. Findlay, D. Holden, J. Allan, R Pearson, A. Reid, J. Lyon, W. Burges, M'Lure and A. Borland.—H. M. Ferguson, Sec. and Treas.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S

Meeting, Marie Stuart Hall, Crosshill, Mar. 27. Mr. R. Heggie chair, and a good attendance. Sec., Mr. Holloday, through illness, not being present, the duties were taken over by Assist. Sec., Mr. A. K. Hunter. One new member was admitted. Decided to retain members' names on roll who are serving with the Imperial Forces. Mr. Heggie promised to give a gold medal for the best young bird bred, reared and moulted by exhibitor at next annual show; a sample of the medal was shown and was much admired. Table show of Brit. was judged by Mr. R. Jeffrey, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Quality was excellent, especially in Goldf. and Bullf. Lesser Redpoll: 1, 2, A. Steel; 3, Knox; 4, Connelly. Linnet: 1, A. Steel; 2, McGavin; 3, Knox. Bullf. Hen: 1, McGavin; 2, A. Steel; 3, Knox; 4, McClymont. Ck.: 1, McGavin; 2, 3, spl, 4, spl, McClymont; 5 McAvory. Greenf.: 1, McGavin; 2, spl, A. Steel; 3 Knox; 4, Connelly; 5, McAvory. Goldf.: 1, spl, A. Steel, a regular beauty; 2, J. R. Steel; 3, 4, Connelly. Specials for most points: 1, A. Steel, 27; 2, McGavin, 19. Mr. A. Maxwell (Partick) gave a lecture on Norwich Canary management. The way Mr. Maxwell tackled his subject and the information which he gave to the novice in particular on selection, mating, pairing up, and general management throughout the breeding season, should, if followed out carefully, result in a bumper of young birds at next annual show. A number of questions were asked, and the masterful answers left the members in no doubt as to the lecturer's knowledge of the subject, and of his desire to further its interest. A vote of thanks to the judge and lecturer brought a pleasant evening to a close. Next meeting, April 28.—A. K. Hunter, Assist. Sec.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

LEEDS.

Quality singing contest, Old Bird House, Skinners' Arms, Mar. 28. 1, Laycock; 2, Appleyard; 3, shared Binns and King. Judges, Messrs. Clayton and Sellars.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Open Linnet contest for quality, April 3. 27 birds competed for 6 prizes. The singing was very good: 1, 5, Topping; 2, 3, Pickering; 4, Rigby; 6, Jones. Next contest, members only, club house, April 24, at 2.—G. Hayhurst, Sec.

CARNFORTH.

Saturday, Linnet singing: 1, Armstrong; 2, Old Joe; 3, Sample. Judge, Fairless; timekeeper, McCabe.—T. Armstrong Sec.—Linnet singing, Tinford Inn, Easter Monday, 45 birds entered. Fairless judged and gave satisfaction; timekeeper, Stubbs. 1, 2, 3, Walker; 4, Grame.—M. Moses, Sec.

WIGAN.

Wigan Linnet Club singing contest, Apl. 3, Bay Horse Hotel, Whelley; 26 birds were staged and some good prizes were sung for. Time: 1, Varney, 138 secs.; 2, J. Glover, 98; 3, Knowles, 83. Quality: 1, A. Leyland; 2, Ashcroft; 3, Walsh. Timers, B. Hepplestone and R. Leyland; judges, A. Parker and Ashcroft.—A. Leyland, Sec.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing, Mar. 27; 25 birds entered for 3 prizes. 1, Cooper; 2, Collinson; 3, Perkin, who thoroughly deserves to win, he has hung birds nearly every week for the past 3 years and has not been very fortunate. Now he has made a start, we trust he will keep among the prize winners. J. Cooper's birds sang the largest score of the season, also largest break.—R. Plows, Sec.

Members' sing, April 3, 38 birds entered for 7 prizes: 1, J. Cooper; 2, 4, Wallis; 3, Collinson; 5, 6, shared Liversedge and Perkin; 7, A. Cooper. Mr. Woodhead, of Leeds, gave 1 stone of Linnet seed, which was made into four prizes, and the following won: Liversedge, Perkin, A. Cooper, Wallis. A good company was present. Timekeepers, O. Potter, J. Wallis. Tappers, W. Perkin, A. Cooper.—R. Plows, Sec.

BARNSLEY.

Commercial Hotel open sing, Easter Saturday. The singing was the best this season. Timed by Mr. Shepherd; A. Warcing, chalker. 1, Cawthorne, 4min. 30sec.; 2, Jones, 4min. 20sec.; 3 and 4 dead heat. Coler and Thackra, 3min. 42sec. April 4, another record broken by Mr. Jones' bird. It will take some beating for 5min. singing, as it did the marvellous time of 4min. 56sec. 1, Jones, 4min. 56sec.; 2, Cawthorne, 4min. 18sec.; 3, Coles, 2min. 55sec.—Hardman, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

Open Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Mar. 27. 26 birds entered for three prizes, 4min. time singing. 1, Piper, 124; 2, Pugh, 101; 3, shared, Piper, Wingham, 97. Open sing, Mar. 28, 31 entered for three prizes three minutes' time singing: 1, Beard, 108; 2, Piper, 78; 3, shared Piper, Nelson, 58. Club sing, April 3, 26 entered for three prizes, 4min. time singing: 1, Nelson, 142; 2, 3, Pugh, 121, 107. Open sing, April 4, 40 entered for four prizes, 3min. time singing: 1, 4, Nelson, 99, 41; 2, Bull; 3, Wingham. Biggest breaks this week are:—Nelson 47, Pugh 41.—S. Pugh, Sec.

B. STEEL and F. J. O.—Replied to by post.

AGE FOR BREEDING (S. B. W.).—Yes, you can breed with the Yorkshire cock that is six years old with a very fair chance of success, providing he is in a sound condition of health and active. Many cocks breed well at a greater age than this.

PICKS HIS FEATHERS (B. N. C.).—You should thoroughly examine the cage, not the bird, to see if there is any trace of red mites. This pest does not live upon the bird regularly, and if you only examine the bird it may easily escape observation, even when it is very troublesome to the bird. If no trace of mites are found when properly searched for, see that the bird is kept in a fairly equable temperature, free from cold draughts, though it need not be above the normal temperature now. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts, by measure, of canary seed to one part summer rape. In addition to this, give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut slightly dusted with flour of sulphur and finally sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groat. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food daily—dandelion for preference. In the drinking water every second day for a week add twenty drops of fluid magnesia and ten of lemon juice, and every second day for another week after this give instead six drops each of tincture of gentian and dilute sulphuric acid.

DIET AND MITE KILLER (R. J. H.).—(1) The proper dietary for a pet singing Yorkshire is the same as for any other ordinary variety of Canary. A plain wholesome diet is far the best for the bird. A staple of plain canary seed only, or at most a mixture of three parts canary, by measure, to one part summer rape. Besides this, make a mixture of two parts each of hemp, niger, and millet; one part each of teazle, black rape or cole, and broken groats; a half part each of maw and gold of pleasure, and a quarter part each of linseed and mustard seed. Give a small teaspoonful of this mixture separately twice a week. Once or twice a week give half a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake, and a spray of green food daily, varying the latter according to the season. A morsel of any sweet fruit may be given as a variety instead of green food now and again. You will find full details of suitable variations in the Nutshell Booklet No. 5, which our manager will send you for 2½d., post free. (2) Fir tree oil, which you can buy in small bottles at almost any fanciers' provider's, is an excellent insecticide for the destruction of red mites. Essence of quassia, also on the market, is another. Use as directed on bottles. A solution of camphor in paraffin or methylated spirit—half an ounce to a gill—is also excellent. Insect powders are quite useless for this purpose.

EGG BINDING (E. B. Walt).—(1) The hen is probably in a weakly condition, and you ought to have said how you feed her and where you keep her. To try and prevent a recurrence of it when she is again going to nest, give, in addition to the usual seed diet, half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet and mixed every second day, and when she begins to nest add twenty drops of gin and ten of glycerine to the drinking water about every third day and mix a little crushed old mortar in the sand on the floor of the cage. (2) It is not at all unusual for a hen to drop an egg casually from the perch at this season without showing any urgent signs of nesting. If not mated, you should mate the hen with a healthy vigorous young cock that is keen on nesting, which will usually result in bringing the hen into full normal breeding condition. (3) The only rational way of preventing egg binding in either cold or warm room is to aim at getting the birds into a good hard condition during the winter months. The trouble does not often occur in really strong and healthy hens that are in good breeding condition. You may treat them the same as advised for No. 1, until they have gone to nest with their first broods. But the best thing you could do would be to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free for 7d., from our manager, and see if you are treating your stock correctly in a general way.

SQUEAKY YORKSHIRE (A. M. F., Novice).—I cannot advise you to attempt to carry out the proper treatment for a wheezy Yorkshire cock whilst it is engaged with the hen in helping to feed a brood of young only a few days old. You cannot treat it properly under such conditions. Your best course is to wait until the brood is reared and then separate the cock and treat him in a cage alone, in the way so often advised in this column—for instance, to "Joey" in our issue of March 27.

A MIXED COLLECTION (A New Start).—In the first place I cannot advise you to go in for a mixed collection of Canaries, Budgerigars, and Cockateels in the same house, if, as I take it, you intend them to fly at liberty, especially as you wish the Canaries to breed. Sooner or later disaster would be almost certain to befall the Canaries—broken legs, etc., from the unwelcome attentions of the Budgerigars, and also probably the Cockateels. The best advice I can give you is to limit yourself to Canaries. If you do this you can keep for breeding flying loose about the house and flight five cocks and fifteen hens, which will be sufficient to stock it for breeding, though if you did not wish them to breed particularly you could keep at least 60 to 65 birds in it. Any hardy variety of Canary would do well in the place, provided they were bred and kept under fairly normal conditions before being placed in the house. Rollers, of the ordinary type, Norwich, and Yorkshires are all suitable. There is no best breed of Roller for singing. It is a matter of strain and training. Such birds as indicated would do well in the place all the year round. You could take advantage of any mild spell of weather now to turn the birds into the place.

DROPPED WINGS (Needy One).—It really looks as though this bird was about dropping into moult, in which case it will be quite useless to mate him until it is quite over this trouble. See that it is not exposed to any sudden extremes of heat and cold, nor to cold draughts. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "R. J. H. (1)" in this issue, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of egg-food. Each day give a young growing dandelion stool. In drinking water for three consecutive days add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give every second day for a fortnight instead five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid. If bird is not quite well in that time, please write again, and say whether it has been dropping feathers in the meantime, when I will advise you further.

DROPPING FEATHERS (Juxtaposition).—The dropping of feathers is not due to the introduction of lamp into the dietary, but to the birds being caged in the window recess. Now you have removed them to a more suitable place, treat them the same as advised to "Needy One" in this issue, but give the rhubarb aperient for one day only, and instead of the egg food give the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Continue the treatment for about a fortnight after the feathers have ceased dropping. Do not attempt to mate the birds for breeding until a fortnight or so after the moulting is quite stopped.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

HOUSE-MOULTED LINNET (S. B. W.)—You should have no trouble to breed with your house-moulted Linnet. As a rule, Linnets are fairly easy birds to breed Hybrids with, even when they are recently caged. He should now be getting into stout song and could be run with the hen as soon as she is ready. Give him a spoonful of wild seed mixture three times a week, and a little lightly cracked hemp seed. When he is in stout song and his beak a dark blue-grey, he is ready for pairing. A leaf or two of dandelion is particularly good for them just now. Queries on different subjects should be written on separate sheets of paper.

TWITE OR LINNET? (Perplexed).—The Twite is somewhat smaller than the Linnet, generally richer colour, and more lavishly pencilled. His head is smaller and yellow in colour. He will pair with a hen Canary and the produce is quite an interesting bird. If he is in full song and the Canary is healthy and active, flapping her wings, and flying from perch to perch, you could put them together at once, supplying a nestpan or box, and plenty of moss and hair to build with. As the hen lays, take the eggs away, substituting the hen lays, take the eggs away, substituting the dummy eggs in place of them until she has laid three, when return them all in the evening and do not interfere with her any more. On the thirteenth day after she has sat supply a little egg and biscuit for her to feed the young with. As a rule, the Twite does not interfere with the eggs, but it is as well to keep an eye on him, and if at all troublesome shut him off by himself. You should obtain one of our books on Hybrid breeding.

TROUBLE WITH JACKDAW (Tom Tit).—You are feeding your Jackdaw in some way that is causing the trouble, but as you do not tell me the food you are giving him, I am unable to point out your error. You had better give him an aperient of as much Glauber Salts as will cover a shilling, dissolved in three tablespoonsful of water. Give it for one day, then miss a couple of days, and give again. Feed as follows: Procure some good chicken meat and mix with it a spoonful of meat meal. Soak it all in just enough hot water or gravy to make it crumbly moist. You may vary this by giving Melox treated in the same way. Let him have scraps from the table, just a little minced meat, vegetables, suet pudding, and fruit, and any insects or grubs you can procure. Give him the bath frequently. (2) Bullfinches are not reliable breeders. When in captivity they do not often reproduce when together; but the hen is used a good deal in Hybrid breeding and seldom fails to lay. The Goldfinch and hen Canary is a fairly common cross, and even if you have had no experience you could possibly manage them. Get one of our books on Hybrid breeding; it will give you all the information on the subject you require. (3) Several of the small Foreign Finches will breed in captivity, but for full information you should write this query on a separate piece of paper for our Foreign Bird Expert.

BRITISH BIRDS FOR SONG (C. Maskell).—I take it from your letter that you are anxious to keep British birds that are good singers; but you do not say if you would be content to keep those species that eat seed, or if you would go to the trouble and expense of looking after what are known as Softbills. The former would include the Finches and Buntings. Of these, the Linnet and the Goldfinch are the most popular, but all of them sing to a certain extent, and the Yellow and the Reed Bunting are quite persistent vocalists. Of the Softbills the Skylark will give you the most song, but in captivity the Thrush runs him close, and the Blackbird is a good performer. Other good singers are the Nightingale, Blackcap, Whitethroat, Woodlark, etc., but all these require special treatment that a novice could hardly give to ensure success. They could all be kept in a spare room in the house without heat. I would advise you to procure the British Bird Manual published in two parts, Hardbill and Softbill (1/2 each post free), from this office. You will find full information upon the treatment of each species. (3) It is against our rules to recommend any particular dealer. (4) Rules of deposit system are published from time to time. You will find them in the issue for March 20th.

BREEDING GREENFINCH-CANARY (P. G.).—This is about the easiest of all crosses between a British bird and Canary. You require a fairly tame Greenfinch and a vigorous hen Canary. Feed them on canary and a little rape, mixed seeds, twice a week, and a little egg food; also sunflower seed for the Finch. When the Greenie is in full song and the hen calling and flying from perch to perch, put them together, giving a nestpan and plenty of nesting materials. If the Finch behaves himself while the hen is sitting, he could be left with her. You must supply egg food, a little hemp and green food, for them to rear the young with. They make fairly good singers if trained under a good Canary.

BREEDING WITH HEN BULLFINCH (J.W.)—If your Greenie is quite out of condition (although I rather doubt it, because he would then scarcely trouble to feed the hen) you had better put in the Canary. You can easily run him out for an hour or so to pair with the Canary hen when she is ready to nest. This will not interfere with his partnership with the Bullie if they are on good terms. When in captivity the Bullfinch hen is likely to go to nest at any time, so that you will not do wrong if you encourage her now by good feeding and supply her with nesting materials. As regards the rearing of Hybrids, one cannot say that any of them are easy to rear. A good deal depends upon the feeders; but, in any breeding operations where fertility is not certain, the young are always more or less delicate. This rule applies to other live stock besides birds. (2) The fact of your Linnet refusing to feed the hen Bullie would not cause her death. How could it? She would not starve if she had plenty of food. There are so many ailments a bird might die of that I am afraid I cannot even guess at the cause. In cases of doubt why not send to Mr. Yates for post-mortem and report?

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

YELLOW BUDGERIGARS (Mrs. Barwick).—(1) You did right to return it, as it was in bad condition. Not only Budgerigars and other Lovebirds, but also some Finches, etc., get a sort of vertigo from commencement in too small a cage; but if you get healthy birds to begin with and give them a roomy cage, you should not be troubled with this annoying complaint. (2) Green Budgerigars are usually more prolific than the yellow variety, but the latter should ultimately settle down and breed as you are giving them a large cage. Put a husk at each end of the cage, and put in such twiggy branches as size of cage permits in lieu of straight perches. They require no nesting material. Keep cuttlebone and grit (not sand) continually in the cage, and supply seeding and flowering grass ad lib.

BREEDING IN A CAGE (A.M.C.).—A pair of Zebra Finches would be about the best you could have for a beginning. You should fix (securely) up amid the twigs, that is, against the back of the cage or under the central dome, a Hartz travelling cage, first removing the perches and fittings, cutting away two of the bars to form an entrance, and putting a little hay on the bottom. Supply hay and a Canary nest bag for building material. You can easily screen the dome, so as to give privacy, by fastening a piece of "butter-muslin" over it. Only put a little hay in the nest cage; the birds will construct their own nest. You should be able to get the Hartz travelling cage from where you suggest purchasing the birds. Zebra Finches are rather scarce just now, and their value is anything from 10s. to 15s. If you cannot procure a pair from your dealer or the large stores, send me an addressed envelope per the Editor, and I will try and help you.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (Greenaway).—It is impossible to say without seeing the bird, but most probably it is the moult. As the bird has been changing its domicile several times recently it would be well to keep it warm; give it two or three doses (one teaspoonful in the drinking water) of fluid magnesia, with three days between each dose, and on the days you are not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water, continuing the last-named every other day for a week or two after you cease giving the magnesia. It will be well to follow the diet the bird has been getting for a short time, and then gradually introduce the regulation dietary, which is, roughly: seed mixture and ripe fruit, with biscuit, crusts, plain cake and nuts as extras. Cuttlebone, grit, and wood for the bird to chew up should be kept continually in the cage. Get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free, from our Manager; it will give you full details of treatment.

SICK AMAZON (H. Rogers).—Your information is very meagre, and for a bird as ill as yours, if it has taken no food since your query was sent, I fear it will be too far gone for remedies when you see this reply. I do not know how you are feeding it, and this makes it almost impossible for me to give a helpful reply. You had better try it with a little boiled maize; boil the maize till it is soft, then drain off all water, and as soon as it is cool soak into it one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia, continuing this till the bowels have been well moved. You had better also give it about one or two tablespoonfuls of milk sop daily, prepared so: four or five pieces of sponge cake about the size of walnuts, put over it half a teaspoonful cod-liver oil emulsion, then a good spoonful of condensed milk, and lastly, sufficient boiling water to make it just sloppy. Keep the ordinary seed mixture and fruit in the cage as well. You had better repeat query next week, if the bird is still alive, and give me full details as to how you have been feeding it, and try to describe its symptoms a little more fully.

LEMON-CRESTED COCKATOO (M. Wright).—You had better let a vet. or some local fancier cut back your bird's beak to normal length. If you attempt it yourself, with no experience, you may make it bleed badly, and do the bird permanent harm. I should give it five drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak at once. Give it, till its appetite is normal again, a little boiled maize daily (only keeps fresh one day); boil till soft, drain off all water, and put half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion over it, allow it to soak in a little, then stir up and supply to the bird. Keep the usual dietary in the cage, and put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water daily for a month. Keep the bowels moving freely (not watery-loose) by an occasional dose (one teaspoonful) of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water as required, of course omitting the phosphates when giving the magnesia. Also get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and put a little in its mouth daily, as long as it lasts, from the end of a stick, but only a clean stick must be put into the mixture. Grit (not sand) and cuttlebone must be continually given. Place a piece of a good-sized branch to one side of the cage in such a position that it can reach it from its perch, it will be healthy exercise for the bird to cut it to pieces and help also to keep beak down to normal length. Renew the branch as often as may be necessary.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

M. Henderson.—You will find the desired particulars in this issue.

F. Maliman.—If you will give details as to your feeding and keeping of the birds, our Mr. Norman will doubtless be able to help you. Give particulars as fully as possible with your query.

F. Higgins.—Thanks for cutting kindly sent.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Fusilier, Kilmarnock.—Death occurred from internal hemorrhage, as the result of violence.

E. H. Selby.—Acute broncho-pneumonia caused death.

I.M.G.—Canary succumbed to broncho-pneumonia. In other respects it was quite sound.

Cockatiel.—Acute double pneumonia (hen bird), adult. This bird was in very fair condition, all its organs perfectly healthy and sound, with the exception of the lungs. There is no doubt it contracted a chill on the journey; in any case I believe it to have been a healthy bird when you sent it off.

W. Holmes.—Hen has not fed this chick, the crop was quite empty. Give for first three days egg only (yolk), after that egg and bread crumbs (the latter is preferable to biscuit). Give parent birds canary and summer rape as staple food, but no hemp.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published).

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Unerossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

WANTED A TRIAL.

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Special notice to all bird fanciers. If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure; Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest medicine ever introduced for getting birds in song and into breeding condition. They are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg binding, dullness, feather plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, sold in 7d., 1/1 and 2/- bottles. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds; also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo, in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart, tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6; the 1/1 bottles are treble the 7d. size. All medicines are post paid, per return at our risk. Also four valuable food recipes, how to feed the Lark, Linnet, Roller, Thrush, and Blackbird for health and song given free to all purchasers of our medicines. FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

APRIL, 1915. UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. APRIL, 1915.

The following testimonials (in addition to scores of others (which are filed here for the Inspection of all visitors), have been received the last week:—

"24, Ranfurly Drive, Belfast.—Yorkshires arrived this morning in good form. I am very well pleased with your selection. They are splendid value.—Alexr. Slater to Joe Thomas."

"109, Nether Street, Path-head, Kirkcaldy.—Bird arrived safe. Highly pleased with it. Singing beautifully. Will recommend you to my friends, for you deserve to be encouraged.—Lawrence Hall to Joe Thomas."

"9, King Street, Abergavenny.—I received the hen all right and she is a topper. I thank you for being so prompt. I shall recommend you to anyone requiring birds, as they cannot be served better.—F. Hawkins to Joe Thomas."

"41, Spring Bank, New Mills, Stockport.—Received birds safe. They are a lovely pair. I am well pleased with them and thank you for your straightforward dealings.—J. Graham to Joe Thomas."

"72, St. Michael Street, Dumfries.—Bird arrived all safe. I am well pleased with it. You are a decent chap and I am recommending you here to the Fancy.—Wm. Sherman to Joe Thomas."

The above are a fair sample of letters I receive by every post from all over the kingdom, and only considerations of space prevent me from printing scores weekly. Please remember this, however: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to every customer.

A Grand Gift to Canary Fanciers.

URGENT

THE Cage Bird Book that will never let you down

TO EVERY IMMEDIATE PURCHASER OF

CANARIES, HYBRIDS, AND BRITISH BIRDS

Written by well-known Fanciers in every Department

FOR A WEEK'S FREE EXAMINATION AT HOME

THE ONLY GUIDE YOU NEED

Point I.—It covers the whole ground, and is the only book the Fancier needs.

Point II.—It is written by men who are making big money by breeding Cage Birds; every subject is treated by a Specialist.

Point III.—It begins at the beginning; it is equally valuable to the novice as to the practised Fancier.

Point IV.—It embodies the results of years of patient experiment and enables its owner to profit by the wisdom and experience of the most famous breeders.

Point V.—It is practically illustrated in every department; and the Coloured Plates are exactly true to nature, enabling the Breeder to see what he is breeding to.

Point VI.—It has an Index of over 600 items, so that every point of doubt or difficulty can be turned up in an instant. At the same time the various sections are written by such genuine Bird-lovers that the delighted Fancier is captivated. He reads right on!

Test it FREE ON EACH of THESE POINTS

Point VII.—It is absolutely up-to-date in every department. It gives the latest authoritative information on Shows, Exhibiting, and the Standard points, defects, etc., of every recognised breed of Canary and Cage Bird and Hybrid.

Point VIII.—Its contents are highly stimulative and suggestive to the intelligent Breeder. This is especially true of the section on the Breeding of Hybrids, in which is embodied much information that has never before been tabulated on this fascinating subject. Here, too, the breeder is informed of those Crosses that have not as yet been achieved.

Point IX.—It is the latest, the best, the most complete book on everything concerning Canaries, Cage Birds and British Birds of every description. Get it for free approval to-day, and you will see that it is the ONE BOOK YOU NEED—if you mean to win at the next Show, or if you are just a Bird-lover who does not go in for Exhibitions at all: or if you keep Birds and want to know more about them. Send it back if you decide not to order it.

Mr. Bryant, Acton, London :—

Mr. Ralph Harrison, Whitley Bay :—

Mr. H. Hancock, Burslem :—
"I think the book a great help and well worth the money."

Mr. Lenyon, Clydach, Rhondda Valley :—
"I have no hesitation in recommending it to young breeders as essential. Without doubt the most complete work of its kind."

Hundreds of Enthusiastic Letters.

Mr. McLinden, Dublin :—
"It commends itself to the past master in bird keeping and is invaluable to the amateur, for it is written in such simple language. The chapters on Rearing and Pairing are very explicit, and the coloured plates are, to my mind, simply superb."

Mrs. Bertram, Christchurch, Hants :—
"I have found it of the greatest use, while the illustrations are of value to the novice and the expert alike. The sections dealing with Hybrids are especially commendable, and should prove of service to fanciers.

Twitterings.

We learn that Mr. W. Rackley, the hon. sec. of Watford C.B.S., has been "warned" for active service, and his place as secretary to the society will temporarily be filled by Messrs. Clarke and Sear, 27, Ashby Road, Watford.

I was pleased to see sketch of my bird on front of Cage Birds, and I am sure the camera could not have revealed a more life-like appearance. It is a great credit to Mr. Norman. I wish Cage Birds every success. —O. C. Smith (Reading).

I was delighted, on receiving my Cage Birds of April 10th, to find on your front page the drawing of my buff hen, writes Mr. F. Dipple, Birmingham. Great credit is due to your artist, Mr. Norman. I wish your valuable paper every success.

The syllabus of the Liverpool B.B.A. to hand gives the dates of all shows, lectures, etc., for the year, together with the classification of the N.F., night novice, and pair shows. The hon. sec. is Mr. T. R. Jones, 25, Emerald Street, Liverpool.

The North Liverpool C.B.S. has arranged a ramble for Sunday, May 2, writes Mr. Edgar Broadbank, hon. sec. Take tram from Liverpool to Ormskirk and walk back through the country; train arrangements later. We extend a hearty welcome to fanciers of other societies.

We hear that Mr. W. Cottam has resigned the secretaryship of the Preston O.S. The new sec. is Mr. C. Buck, 5, Nevett Street, Preston, and communications on the business of the society should be addressed accordingly. The annual open show is fixed for Oct. 8 and 9.

We have received the 1915 syllabus of the Leeds C.B.S. Besides the list of shows, and the details of their classification, lectures, etc., it contains particulars of the cups and specials, a balance-sheet for 1914, and the names and addresses of members. The hon. sec. is Mr. E. Norton, 11, Edgeware Place, Bayswater Road, Roundhay Road, Leeds.

Mr. T. R. Jones, hon. sec. of Liverpool B.B.A., asks us to state that in the syllabus for 1915, classes 9 and 10 in the schedule of the F.F. show should read Clear, Ticked, or Unevenly-marked.

Mr. Jas. Hopkins writes that he has removed to the Mouse Trap Inn, Disley, Cheshire, where all letters respecting birds should be sent, and where he will be pleased to see all fanciers and friends.

Will fanciers and friends in Wolverhampton and the Midlands kindly note we have fixed up for our next three monthly meetings three splendid lectures, viz., Mr. F. J. Weaver, "What should constitute the Norwich Plainhead?" May 6; Mr. J. Gibbons, a lecture on the Yorkshire, and Mr. J. A. Tonks, on Mules and Hybrids, writes Mr. J. Gibbons. All these I am sure will be well worth hearing.

OBITUARY.

Mr. F. EASTERLING (Battersea).

Just as we go to press we regret to say that a telegram reaches us from Mr. Buckingham, of Watford, saying that Mr. F. Easterling, the well-known judge and Yorkshire Canary enthusiast, of Battersea Park-road, passed away this (Wednesday) afternoon. His demise will be mourned by a wide circle of fancier friends.

Mr. S. WARE (Skelton).

It is with very deep regret, writes Mr. J. G. Cook, that I write to inform you of the death of the well-known fancier, Stephen Ware, of Skelton. Poor Steve had his leg badly broken in the mines. He was taken to the Guisbro' hospital, and had his leg taken off, but septic poisoning set in, and he died on April 3. On the Sunday I went into town intending to spend the afternoon with him at the hospital, and took my Cage Birds to leave with him; it was quite a shock to me when the matron informed me of his death. He was buried on Wednesday at Skelton, and a number of fanciers gathered to pay their last respects, among them being W. A. Cowgill (Bradford), Mr. Dixon (of the Redcar Society), Mr. Barker, Mr. Hewling, together with Mr. Knaggs, Mr. Hood, and Mr. Starling (of the Guisbro' Society). I am sure all fanciers will extend to Mrs. Ware their deepest sympathy.

The well-known bird seed and bird food specialists, Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co., are offering in our advertisement columns some exceptionally fine Spanish canary seed at a very reasonable figure, and fanciers would do well to write for samples. Canary seed is not getting cheaper, and there may be a rise in the price in the near future. Messrs. Rudd and Co.'s other specialities are proving their merit by their increased sale.

I am sorry to say, writes Mr. J. G. Cook, chairman, Guisbro Priory C.B.S., an old fancier, and one of our members, George Hall, is in the Middlesbro' Infirmary undergoing an operation for a bad rupture, and we wish George a speedy recovery. I was very pleased last Saturday to run against another of our club members, Mr. Allison, of the firm of Mays and Allison. Jim had ten weeks off with a severe attack of pneumonia. I was glad to see his smiling face and feel his hearty hand-shake, and to hear he was himself again. After all, Mr. Editor, sympathy makes all the Fancy akin.

Wake Up Abertillery.

Will fanciers kindly note that the membership of the Abertillery Cage Bird Society is open to Monmouthshire, writes Mr. H. H. Mortimer, hon. sec., 4, Granville Street, Abertillery. Sub., 6d. per calendar month, and 1s. entry fee. We have at present a balance of about £19 in the bank. Will members residing in the district kindly make an effort to attend the meetings, as it is very disheartening for the four or five members who do turn up; we were not able to hold our last monthly meeting owing to the members not turning up. A special meeting will be held April 24 at the Prince of Wales' Hotel at 6.30, to settle date, etc., for the First Feather Show, when I hope we shall have a large attendance.

The Opinion of a Noted Fancier—

"IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY."

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A Happy Result.

I am pleased to inform you that I have disposed of the half-plate camera I advertised in Cage Birds. I got five good hens and two cocks, all Norwich, with which I was perfectly satisfied, and when I sent on the camera, the customer (Mr. H. F. Marsh, of Preston) was so well pleased with his bargain that he sent me two more young cock birds and a new show cage. The medium of your good old Cage Birds has established a feeling of great friendship between Mr. Marsh and myself.—Clement Craven (Halifax).

WHERE YOUR MONEY CAN BE WELL SPENT.

"Kindly thank all enquirers for cages advertised in CAGE BIRDS, I find it impossible to write to all. I could have sold double the breeding cages over and over again."—B. JACKSON (Bingley).

"I would be very much obliged if you would allow me to thank all those who have answered my advt. in CAGE BIRDS. They were too numerous to answer personally."—E. GALLAGHER (Skipton).

"Mr. Blythe, Bacup, wishes the fanciers who applied to him for B.R.C.C. Rollers through his advert. in CAGE BIRDS to excuse him for not replying to their letters. He had over seventy applications and has disposed of all his stock. Through sickness he is unable to reply to each inquiry by post."

"I have noticed several testimonials respecting the advertising value of CAGE BIRDS. I may say I had for a time to withdraw my own advertisement in your paper owing to the enormous amount of orders received. The success of my business is due VERY LARGELY to your valauble paper. It has been "Business as Usual" with me. I wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success."—E. M. STANTON (Winton, Manchester).

In the Courts.

A CASE DISMISSED.

Robert Taylor, jun., Chatteris, was summoned for an offence under the Wild Birds' Act. Defendant pleaded guilty.

Inspector Lilley said he saw the defendant on the Turf Fen with three decoy birds in three separate cages. There were also some nets spread out. Witness went to him and asked him if he knew anything about the close season, when defendant replied, "Yes, but I only catch Linnets." Asked to show what birds he had caught that morning, he produced 10 Linnets, one Reed Bunting, and one Greenfinch.

Defendant said he committed the offence in ignorance and he was very sorry, but an authority had told him he could catch Linnets until he was blue. Defendant was cautioned, and as this was the first offence he was dismissed.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Reproduced, by kind permission, from the "Avicultural Magazine."

ADULT Banksians which have not been tamed while young are extremely nervous and intractable, and even when thoroughly reconciled to captivity are terribly upset by a sudden change of surroundings, refusing food for days in a strange place and uttering a grating scream of fear whenever a person approaches them. Black Cockatoos are not so hardy as most of their white cousins, and while able to stand a certain amount of frost are very sensitive to the effects of cold fog.

My experiment with these birds at liberty ended in failure, but rather owing to a series of unfortunate accidents than to their unsuitability for life under such conditions. I did not find them particularly destructive, and some individuals never damaged the trees at all. The adult cock Banksian is entirely black with a scarlet bar across the tail. The hen is spotted and barred with yellow and yellowish red. Anyone who desires to attempt to breed this species should be careful not to allow his cock to become too tame. If he does, the bird will transfer his entire affection to his owner, and display nothing but fear or dislike towards his intended mate.

Macaws.—Food: Canary, wheat, oats, maize, hemp, sunflower, nuts, fruit, green food, dry bread, plain biscuit and stale sponge cake. Macaws are very hardy birds, seldom ill when properly cared for, and in the case of the large species, at any rate, very indifferent to cold. They often make excellent talkers—the Blue and Yellow being the best—and become much attached to their owners, though they are sometimes treacherous with those they do not know. Their chief drawbacks are their destructive propensities and deafening cries. Macaws generally stay well when allowed their liberty, and if attached to their owner and familiar with their surroundings can safely be released full-winged.

Kinder Than They Look.

The rare Blue Macaws—Lears', Hyacinthine, etc., are as hardy as the commoner kinds, but appear more inclined to stray if allowed complete liberty. They are generally very docile and affectionate, and are rather less noisy than the other members of the group. They are not particularly aggressive in mixed company, although they are well able to assert themselves. Macaws are very difficult to sex.

Conures.—A large family of Parrakeets of small or medium size, the majority of which inhabit South America and the adjacent islands. They are easily kept, either in cage or aviary, and most of the common species can be wintered out of doors. Conures are lively and intelligent birds, easily tamed and capable of learning to talk: they are, however, extremely noisy, very destructive and often quarrelsome with other birds, especially those not nearly related to them. They should be fed and treated like Amazon Parrots, but should only be allowed hemp seed in small quantities, as they sometimes suffer from fatty degeneration of the liver. The sexes are usually much alike.

Quaker Parrakeet (Myopsittacus monachus).—A very hardy bird, indifferent to cold even when newly imported, and closely resembling the Conures in disposition. It is usually spiteful with Parrots and Parrakeets, but tolerably inoffensive towards birds of other orders. If allowed complete liberty it usually stays well for a time but ultimately wanders away, and it is more destructive than any other bird of its size I know.

Many Kinds of "Love-Birds."

Lovebirds.—A small genus of diminutive short-tailed Parrots which, despite their popular name, are not conspicuous for amiability towards their neighbours or even for the idyllic character of their domestic existence. They are quite untrustworthy with weaker birds of other orders.

Madagascar Lovebird (Agapornis cana).—A hardy and well-known species in which the cock has the head and neck grey and the hen green. It should be fed on canary, millet and hemp seed, with grass and other green food. Madagascars stay fairly well at liberty and will sometimes breed, but with me they have sooner or later fallen victims to various ailments, of which total paralysis of the legs is the most common.

Black-cheeked Lovebirds (Agapornis nigrigenis).—A hardy and attractive little bird in which the sexes are so alike as to be practically indistinguishable. A number of breeding pairs will nest together in harmony in a large aviary, but non-breeding birds are very apt to pluck and molest their neighbour's young and should therefore be kept by themselves. Black-cheeks are useless for turning out as they invariably migrate in August and September, after breeding.

Rosy-faced Lovebirds (Agapornis roseicollis).—A very beautiful species but the most vicious of all its family. It should be given plenty of fruit and sponge cake in addition to seed. A pair I once tried at liberty did not stay.

Passerine Parrotlet (Psittacula passerina).—Commonly called "Blue-winged Lovebird." Passerine Parrotlets are quite hardy when properly acclimatised, but require plenty of heat on first arrival. They should be fed on millet and canary seed, with stale sponge cake moistened in water. Green food may be offered them, but they often refuse to touch it. In spite of their grave and demure appearance, these little birds are much given to indulging in sudden and sanguinary fracas amongst themselves, and should never be overcrowded either in cage or aviary. If it should be necessary to keep a number of them for some time in a confined space, it is a wise precaution to separate the sexes. Bluewings do fairly well at liberty, and where Owls are not too numerous might succeed in establishing themselves. The hen is of a nearly uniform green colour and lacks the blue rump and secondaries which adorn her mate.

Palæornis Parrakeets.—Food: Canary, millet, hemp and oats, with fruit and green stuff. The Palæornidae do well in cages, and keep in far better condition than the Australian Parrakeets. The cocks are not difficult to tame, and make nice pets; some, such as the Indian Ring-neck, learning to talk well if taken from the nest and reared by hand. Palæornis Parrakeets are not very susceptible to infectious diseases, and the majority can safely be wintered out-of-doors, although it is not always prudent to allow them to attempt to breed at low temperatures, as the hens are rather subject to egg binding. Most species have an immature dress which they wear for a considerable period, and during that time they are most puzzling birds to sex. The palæornidae are not unduly quarrelsome.

Malaccan Long-tailed Parrakeet (Palæornis longicauda).—Deserves special mention on account of its extreme sensitiveness to cold. It should never be exposed to a temperature below 60 deg. and 70 deg.—80 deg., would probably be necessary for the success of a breeding experiment.

Great-billed Parrakeet (Tanygnathus megalorhyncus).—Food: Canary, millet, wheat, oats, hemp, paddy-rice, fruit, and nuts. This brilliantly coloured and grotesque bird is not often imported. It certainly cannot be described as beautiful, but makes an attractive addition to a collection on account of the oddity of its appearance and its absurd actions when tame. It is generally supposed to be sensitive to cold, but some newly-imported Great-bills I turned out this spring in very rough plumage, endured a spell of cold weather (including sharp night frosts) without the slightest injury. The hen is more "dumpy" in build than the cock, with a shorter neck and smaller beak.

ALL ABOUT THE GREENFINCH.

By R. T. CAMPBELL (Dunfermline).

THIS ever popular Finch, the Greenie, or, to give him his more classical name, Ligurinus Chloris, has always been as great a favourite with me as any on our long list of British birds. He may lack the gorgeous colouring of the Goldfinch or Bullfinch, and certainly his vocal powers deny him a place of honour in the chair of enchanters, but let us not think him unpicturesque, and although his voice may fail to inspire poetical sympathy, he has charms that lead us to include him in any team of British seed-eaters.

When "in the rough," the limits of the working man's pockets are seldom pinched in the purchase of a few likely specimens, but even in the case of a field-moulted bird, a good one always commands a respectable figure. I know of several present winners, which as "recently-taken" birds realised figures which would surprise many.

Where Greenfinches Nest.

"Green Linnets," as sometimes we hear these Finches spoken of, are very early breeders; given a choice of nesting sites, their fancy is often taken up with the forking branch of that hardy evergreen, the laurel, for here they find cover early in April, and, if the first round goes unmolested, towards the middle of May we may expect to find quite a number of speckled-breasted youngsters, who in first feather resemble the mother Finch, with the exception of a mottled or pencilled breast, which of course they lose at the first moult. In any good sized laurel shrub in a quiet spot you may expect to find several nests of Greenfinches within a few feet apart.

The eggs may be taken and put under a Canary hen, but unless one is desirous of rearing good, steady hens for hybridising purposes, it never makes a very profitable experiment. Canary-reared or hand-reared Finches very seldom ever gain either the size or colour of their wild brothers and sisters. If you wish to try a nest of eggs under a Canary, see that you give them to a persistent feeder, one not frightened at hard work. Young Greenfinches, being very heavy feeders, keep a hen fully employed, and sometimes we find that even a good feeder is compelled to relinquish her charge; she either gets nervous when she sees the expansive mouths, or after having fed them a few days with regularity, the strong beaks of the youngsters seem to irritate her face, and the pain arising from this compels her to leave them.

A Lesson for a Dilatory Hen.

When hand rearing has to be resorted to, prepare a diet of eggs, meat, and boiled rape seed, and when you have got them over twelve days, add to this a half part succulent dandelion seed, which, at this season, are plentiful, and which wild birds will be making the most of in the rearing of their nestlings. A young Canary fancier may have a young hen rather dilatory at feeding her own young, one that is inclined to sit and smother her youngsters rather than feed; I advise him to transfer these young to a foster-mother, and substitute a nest of young Greenies about the same age. If the maternal instinct is not wholly lost to her, the young Greenfinches will compel her to leave the nest and attend to their wants; I know of two instances where such hens were cured in this manner of the close-sitting habit, and afterwards made exceptionally good feeders.

Better than Hand-rearing.

However, as Greenfinches can be picked up so very cheaply during the autumn and winter months, it is very doubtful, as I said before, whether the trouble of Canary-rearing or hand-feeding is really worth the time. It is more profitable to secure from a catcher, say, a dozen cocks and a half-dozen hens; this would not be an expensive investment, and something like two shillings should put you in possession of a good selection.

In "The British Bird Manual," published by Cage Birds, the author and artist, Mr. H. Norman, has portrayed in Part I., page 39, what I consider an ideal model of a Greenfinch, and if you are fortunate enough to receive a bird modelled on such lines you may congratulate yourself. The essential points in a good Greenfinch are type (first and foremost), size, colour, and quality of feather, but before you make your selection you had better single out as many birds as you have show cages for, and bench them in exhibition fashion.

Do not delay making your selection, for a wild bird is much steadier when the surroundings are strange to him than after he has had the run of a cage for a day or two, and, moreover, you wish to get a pick made before the birds have lost their field fatness. Although those selected will lose a bit for a time in confinement, you will easily remedy that with judicious feeding.

The Points of a Greenfinch.

Now for the individual points that go to the making up of an exhibition bird. Starting with a nice round bold head, free from flatness, or the browyness of a Crestbred Canary, clear and well centred eye, short and thick neck, broad shoulders, nice and round breast, full, and running fine and deep, showing a nice curve from the throat to the root of the tail, well rounded back, wings well laid on, and fitting closely, the whole back showing a straight line from the gentle rise over the shoulders to the tip of the tail.

A well positioned Finch should stand on the perch at an angle of 40 to 45 degrees. You do not want a bird that lies low—"hugging his perches," as the saying goes. Generally these birds are nervous a bit, but by curtailing the width of the hop, and by gaining their confidence, you can greatly assist them to overcome this fault and regulate their movements from perch to perch.

Why Not Classes for Buffs?

The colour of the Greenfinch has for a long time been a vexed question, and many discussions have arisen thereto both in the Fancy Press and in the show room. What we are asked to secure is a rich yellow green, this I admit; but has this not been played on too much? Many a good, typical buff, teeming with quality, has had to stand back in preference to a better "coloured" bird, but one at this same time inferior in other points. I believe the day is not far distant when we will see some enterprising show committee introducing a class for the buffs. What says Bathgate, the Greenie town?

You must get the yellows, as the butts of the wings, primary quills, and tail feathers as rich in tone as you can, and showing plenty of it, but many a good-coloured bird just fails at these points, so do not discard such a bird; very often we find it to be a young unflighted bird, and with a touch of feed in the moult this fault will be rectified. The black and grey feathers of the wings and tail should be bright and valid, quite free from all smokiness.

How Winning Norwich are Bred

A leading Scottish exhibitor, who has won hundreds of prizes, describes his method of producing his winners. He, however, desires to remain anonymous.

WHEN first I started the Fancy I picked up several good birds, which were wearing the red card at some of our leading shows, which I gradually worked myself into a strain of my own; when I now require to buy any addition to my stud, I am very careful as to the stable it comes from.

I am a believer in the tumbler pigeon type for a Norwich, but of course with length of wing shortened a bit—that is, I stand by the bold, short, thick-set bird of good size, with nice round head and short close-fitting feathers; get this, then you are not far out of it.

My idea as to how to get this is to pair up the very best specimens that can be got, say a large buff hen, which must be of good shape and quality, and a yellow cock, nothing inferior, not one of the largest, but one of correct shape and good quality. A little variegation on either side is desirable in order to produce colour.

Have Size on the Hen Side.

I maintain that to get size one must breed from a big hen, a buff preferred, as these are the strongest, and have more substance than a yellow. I have bred in this way some of the best Plainheads of the day; in fact, birds that have never been defeated on the show bench except by their own stable companions. I make it a rule to keep one stamp only of Plainhead in my room, and that is as described above, and I find I am never far off the mark as a rule. My advice to the noviee is: pair up your birds as I have already described, but first of all see that you have got the proper material to work upon, and leave nothing to chance.

I am a staunch believer in pedigree, and I maintain the mother must be no dwarf—that is, if we expect to get the size we require. Of course, the more aged the parents the more deterioration in the size of offspring. You often hear one say "this or that hen lays a pretty little egg," but I always prefer to see an egg of fair size, as it is almost 10 to 1 the larger "scuddy" will be hatched.

Some time ago a well-known Norwich fancier gave his idea as to how to match up so as to breed winners. He explained that the proper way was to get a small typical hen, and to put this to a cock of great size and substance, no matter how unshapely, or rough, as the neatness and good quality of the hen would counterbalance all defects. This, no doubt, accounts for so many snipey-faced or browy specimens being seen in our show halls nowadays.

Always Use the Best.

To put the matter in a nutshell, pair up the very best specimens that can be had, as described in the foregoing, and fear not the result. I may say that I have been a breeder and exhibitor of the "chubby ones" for something like twenty-five years, and have won over 2,000 prizes and challenge cups at leading shows, and my experience may be taken for what it is worth. I have not written this with the idea of seeing my name in print; hence my adoption of a nom-de-plume.

Correspondence.

Are Yellow Norwich Decreasing in Number?

Sir,—In Mr. Walter Connelly's article in the Review of the 1914-15 Norwich Plainheads in Cage Birds Annual, he asks fanciers to refrain from double-buffing, and further says that too much double-buffing is being done, thus causing Yellows to be scarce. Mr. C. seems to have his back turned against double-buffing, and I should be pleased if he would speak his mind through your esteemed paper, Cage Birds. Others, I have no doubt, would join, and perhaps the fancy would gain thereby.

Briar Bush.

Proposed C.B.S. for Somercotes and District (Derbyshire).

Sir,—A meeting was held at the Devonshire Arms, April 10, when it was decided to form a society, to be called the Somercotes and District C.B.S. Mr. H. E. Tatlow, Market Square, Somercotes, was appointed sec., and Mr. L. Parsons, Lower Somercotes, treasurer. The election of other officers and drawing up of rules was left over until the next meeting, at the Devonshire Arms, May 1, at 7. An invitation is extended to all fanciers of the district to be in attendance.

H. E. Tatlow.

The Fertilization of Eggs.

Sir,—I have had similar experiences to Mr. Davitt—that is, of a hen laying before the cock has been introduced, and by mating up without further delay I have found that if the hen lays five eggs in all, three will be fertile, thus proving that eggs can be fertilized in 36 or 40 hours. On other occasions I have taken the cock away when the hen has laid the first egg, and found that all the clutch are fertile. I have read in Cage Birds of other fanciers only allowing the cock bird to be in the hen's company for a total time of 15 minutes, and yet all the eggs have been fertile, and this seems to prove very clearly that all the eggs are fertilized at once.

Who Will Help Soldier Fanciers to Restart in the Hobby?

Sir,—I think Mr. Silver's proposal a very good one. I for one would be very pleased to give either a pair of Yorkshires, Norwich or Cinnamons, whichever the soldier fancier likes best; they will be good birds. I wish with all my heart that you meet with great success.

(Mrs.) M. A. Ballard.

Sir, Having seen Mr. Silver's offer to supply birds to those returning from the Front, who through the War have been obliged to give up their stock, I have very great pleasure in asking you to put my name on your list of donors for three pairs of Yorkshires. The idea is a very good one, and I hope to see that you have a response worthy of the cause.

Thos. E. Pyman.

Sir,—Mr. Silver's proposal is a splendid one, and I trust a good many fanciers will support it. (I will for one.) But permit me to add another suggestion. If a fancier is willing to serve his King, let some fancier take a number of pairs from him and do his best for him till he returns. I have at the present four pairs of Yorkshires belonging to one of our members who has answered his country's call, and I hope if he is spared to return I shall have a good stock of young to please him. I might add my wife is giving me extra help in looking after these, as with my own stock, and business, time is well occupied.

O. C. Smith,
Sec. Reading C.B.S.

Sir,—The letter appearing in Cage Birds of April 10 over the signature of "J. Silver" I consider most excellent. That any man who, at the call of King and country, has surrendered what to my mind is at once the most fascinating and innocent of hobbies, should be so penalised as to find it impossible to start again, or so handicapped as to take years to regain his original footing in the Fancy, is unthinkable to a sportsman. It occurs to me that perhaps charity should begin at home, though Cage Birds may be the medium through which it is dispensed. As a member of the Cardiff C.B.S., I shall be pleased to send you half-a-guinea to be given for this purpose to any member of our society who may be placed in such a position. Should none have made such sacrifice, I am sure gallant little Wales has one, and, providing such is a member of a Welsh society, let him have next place. When you know of such a one, kindly send to me for the money and I will remit to you per return.

(Rev.) C. B. Jolliffe.

Linseed for Laying Hens.

Sir,—To aid birds in passing eggs, keep half a teaspoonful of linseed in the water in their drinking vessel. I hope a few will practise this mode for the season, and give results after breeding.

Linseed.

Border Fancies at the Horticultural Hall Show.

Sir,—We were pleased to see Mr. Jenkins' reply to "Border," and to know our hen "leaves the court without a (colour) stain upon her character." We were almost as disappointed as the owner at her non-success at Cardiff, but hope she will breed some as good as herself, and "come up smiling" next show season.

Burton Bros.

Sir,—As an exhibitor at this show, I have been interested in the correspondence about colour-feeding of birds in the prize-list. Mr. Ramsden's friend, the specialist judge of Borders, was entirely wrong when he said all Borders needed to be "helped" or were "helped"; Mr. Ramsden says he was satisfied he was right, therefore he is wrong too, which I could prove to either of them. Borders can be bred and exhibited a splendid colour without any "help" at all. Of course I admit that there are some exhibitors who help their birds, and it is for the judges to put them down. Novices or others buying birds to put colour into their stock have their own remedy, as if they buy a high-coloured bird from any breeder, and it does not moult out the same colour the following season, they can shun that breeder in future, as well as expose him to their friends. One point has not been made clear in the correspondence: did Mr. Jenkins say that any of the birds in the tickets had been "fed"?

W. Espie.

Sir,—Being an exhibitor of Borders at the L.C.B.A. Show, this question of colour-feeding is interesting to me. After Mr. D. Jenkins' own statement in Cage Birds, may I ask would it not have been better for him to have disqualified the birds he thought were assisted by colour-food? What is the use of breeding for natural colour if judges allow birds to win that in their opinion have been helped with colour-food. After exhibiting "wee gems" a few years ago, and not being very successful, I visited several shows and found, like Mr. Ramsden did, that colour beat me. But I did not do as Mr. R. has done. I set about to get colour by introducing plenty of dark blood into my stock, and can now get into the tickets without showing them the colour-food, for if I had to do that I would give up my fancy at once. I may say I saw the yellow hen, referred to by Burton Bros., at the Welsh National Show. She must, in my opinion, have been in very different trim at the L.C.B.A. Show to have secured what she then did.

J. H. Madagan.

Sir,—I was exceedingly pleased to read "Border's" letter. This is no new thing, colour-feeding; and even dyeing has been going on for years. We have many specialist Border Fancy clubs throughout Great Britain, and I should like to know what they have been doing to stop such tactics? I have visited a goodly number of shows in Scotland, and I find that in nine cases out of ten the prize-winners are colour-fed. Border Fancy judging is a huge farce. The men selected to perform the onerous duties have not the courage of their convictions, consequently colour wins. They are afraid to exercise their prerogative in case their judging engagements might suffer. And when one looks more closely into things one could almost say with precision it's a case of "You'll scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours." The parties to blame are the societies. I have known a very prominent exhibitor telling a member of another society, "Get Mr. So and So to judge, and I'll give you forty entries." Result, the "good thing" came off. I have never yet exhibited a Border Fancy in open competition, but hope to do so in the coming season, and the colouring, feeding, etc., fraternity can take it from me that I intend to protest and "plank down the dough" every time that the forbidden fruit is perceptible.

OLD CALABAR
OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO. — LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve it.

Sir,—Mr. Allsopp asks what help I am rendering to the Fancy with my twenty-two years' experience (should be twenty-five)? My answer is—actions speak louder than words. It may be a bit of a surprise for him to know that a Cardiff gentleman is prepared to stake another "fiver" that I knock spots off him. Surely, having had only one bird (the Temptress) in his life that did any winning in open competition does not justify him making such a hullabaloo. I will conclude by asking him if his latest introduction of a chubby muling hen is the "reliable" he expects to breed his champion Norwich from?

W. Spillman.

Sir,—I am surprised at our Plymouth friend crying out after making a challenge. Mr. Allsopp seems rather disappointed about it. As I am fond of a sporting match, I will show four young Plainhead Norwich of my own breeding against four of Mr. Allsopp's own breeding for 20s. each bird, clear yellow, clear buff, ticked or variegated yellow, and ticked or variegated buff. Conditions: The birds to be dispatched to the Editor of Cage Birds the last week in June or first week in July; the Editor to appoint someone to adjudicate, whose decision shall be final—the committee of the local societies to be asked to send one of their members to visit our breeding rooms to see the birds we intend competing with, as often as they think proper; stake for birds not staged forfeited. If our Plymouth fancier would like to join in we will have it a three-handed sweepstake.

J. Bastock.

Sir,—It seems that the advent of my Plymouth critic into this correspondence has had a demoralising effect. Can it be his name or his challenge, or what? That the introduction of the personal element might add a little piquancy to matters, suiting some, I do not deny, but the fancier proper, be he a beginner or old hand, must deplore this wasting of time. Inasmuch as I understand many beginners are looking to this corner for practical help from those who, if they choose, can render substantial help, I suggest, in the interests of everybody interested, that the bone be grasped, and not the shadow. The keen follower of this correspondence must surely now have no misgivings regarding the source of mere size in our breed. It is difficult to understand why some breeders regard with abhorrence the origin of the more massive Plainhead of to-day, as witness recently a lecturer before one of the London societies who stated he would give up the breed rather than rely upon such crosses. There seems to be no secret about the composite character of the Yorkshires, and no one seems to despise them for it, then why should the built-up character of our breed be held up to ridicule and contempt? Nowhere has the advice been given for all and sundry to introduce the Crestbred or Lancashire "slap-bang, and to go mad for size. All this happened years ago. To-day plenty of massive stock birds can be procured, especially up North, or in the Midlands (the usual source of the "big" movements) showing little traces of such crosses, but which nevertheless could not be guaranteed to be free. In the same way as I understand the first cross of the Crest with the Lancashire produces some youngsters in which or no effect of the cross is apparent, so with the Norwich and Lancashire or Crestbred, for many such change hands each year as good Plainheads, and accomplish good things, even though first crosses. It would indeed be hypercritical for anyone in close touch with the show bench of to-day to insinuate that size is not supported by outside aid, and it is significant that no denial is forthcoming from those that matter. The whole bother about these crosses arises from the fact that specimens which are only in the making are found upon the show bench, and when nothing better can be found in the classes, and sometimes it happens so, they win prizes. Now if you feel very well regarding size, let us discuss the beaks of our breed, for such is just one of those details that count, at least should do so. Never perhaps before have I examined more than 200 Plainheads so critically in one day as at the recent Welsh National show, and I found long beaks, short beaks, stout beaks, and slender beaks, and seldom the beak which in size, shape, and colour harmonised beautifully with the head and neck. It may seem strange to some when I say I found the neatest, boxy, harmonising beaks upon the largest specimens. It is no secret however, when one realises how close has been the attention Crest breeders have paid to the breeding of short-beaked Crests and Crestbreds of late years. This neatness has now become established, and so is not eliminated when crossed into the Plainhead. Therefore if the Crestbred has brought so much heart burning with it, please credit it with some good. How the first impressions of our judges are affected or influenced by even beaks is only realised by those who judge the breed, and as specialist with the interest of the breed at heart, but nothing will mar an otherwise grandly-moulded head and neck more than an unsightly beak, and rather than ruin my chances I would consider it worth my while to take advantage of the Crestbred cross if for this reason alone. The moral, at least for those breeders whose birds carry too much beak, is to sink all prejudice, and progress, for after all there is nothing at our disposal better calculated to remedy this defect than the cross mentioned. In any case choose stock birds with the smallest and neatest beaks, and in doing so you will have made real progress towards the grand, wide, full skull after which you hanker, like all good Plainhead breeders.

The Pelton Fell, etc., Amalgamation of Societies.

Sir,—There was a meeting at Chester-le-Street, when the amalgamation was abolished. I think each society will be better for this; fanciers will be more satisfied in each district. I should like to bring to fanciers' notice that Pelton Fell C.B.S. intends having a meeting on April 24, at Colliery Inn, Pelton Fell, at 6, to which I give all old and new fanciers a hearty welcome, and hope they will become members. The business will be: Subs., what should they be this year?; nomination of judges; schedule for N.F. and annual show; dates of shows and election of officers.

Black Canaries.

Sir,—In perusing some back numbers of Cage Birds the other day, I came across your issue of Dec. 7, 1912, in which you say in your Notes and Critique on the then recent Horticultural Hall Show: "Mr. Kiesel, the breeder of the well-known white Yorkshires, is having a try this next year for blacks. He has been so taken up with getting the whites to perfection, that he has not given much thought to the opposite colour; but he has the material, and intends trying for them in earnest. He feels rather confident of success, which we heartily wish him."

I also have a recollection that in a more recent issue of Cage Birds you published a letter from a New Zealand lady (I think it was Mrs. Martin) stating that she had actually bred some black Canaries from her white strain, and that a specimen was being sent to England, and in a footnote to her letter you stated you would give your opinion on the bird when it arrived. I do not remember, however, having seen any further reference to black Canaries in your paper, and I am wondering whether Mr. Kiesel has been successful in his experiment, and whether the New Zealand-bred bird ever arrived in this country, and if so what was the opinion of those fanciers fortunate enough to see it. Perhaps you would be good enough to answer the latter query, and I have no doubt Mr. Kiesel, with his usual courtesy, will enlighten your readers as to the result of this attempt to breed "Blacks."

H. C. Brooks.

[The black Canary to which our correspondent refers has never reached us, and we believe that Mr. Kiesel has not yet been successful in rearing Blacks.—Ed.]

Birds at the Barber's.

Sir,—One of the prettiest and most artistic aviaries to be seen in a day's march is to be seen at the back of a hairdresser's saloon in Fulham. It is "some" aviary, as our American cousins would put it. There is a certain sect of Pilgrims, the writer is one of them, who regularly journey to this veritable shrine of beauty, No. 1. High St., to pay their tribute, and incidentally to have their hair cut. The exterior of the premises gives no clue to the feast to be seen within, and the stranger who chances that way meets with a pleasant surprise. Its enchanting beauty and the glorious song from the feathered vocalists gladden the hearts of the patrons of this locally renowned establishment, whilst having the superfluous hirsute tissue deftly removed from their northern hemisphere by the courteous tonsorial artist.

Here aliens, naturalised or otherwise, are strictly tabooed, every bird being British to the backbone, including Canaries of home-bred varieties. The birds live in perfectly natural surroundings of mossy banks, stately palms and tall rushes, with a crystal spring in which goldfish dart to and fro, in fact nothing has been forgotten that would add to the welfare and comfort of the feathered inmates. Much amusement is caused at times by one or another of the birds, usually the hens, darting out into the saloon, for there is nothing to bar their passage, and seizing upon a tuft of hair recently shorn from an individual with a bushy growth, and hurriedly returning to its own quarters, where a nest is in the course of construction.

When Judges Disagree.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—Re that beautiful Hybrid, "White Rose," I happen to know Mr. Mallatrat (the gentleman who bred it) and he told me on his honour that it is a Canary-Bullfinch, and that it was bred from a buff cock Canary, and a British hen Bullie. I myself fail to see where the Greenie comes in. All honour to Mr. Mallatrat for breeding such a bird. Where do all the Canary feathers come from? And I should like to know whether any fancier has ever bred either a light or a Melanistic Hybrid from two British Birds? I think not. All I have to say to the critics is, let them breed one like it—that is what is puzzling them. The long and short of it is, the bird is in the wrong hands. It has been proved times without number that if certain men get hold of certain birds they are champions, and if others get them they are nowhere. "White Rose" is a champion, and if this bird had got into the hands of any of the leading Mule exhibitors it would have taken all before it. Because it has got into the hands of Mr. Parlett it has to be pulled to pieces by a certain few who think they know something. Regarding Mr. Houlton putting the bird first at Liverpool, I believe the Fancy generally look upon Mr. Houlton as one of those few judges who know their business. There are too many men posing as judges who don't know as much about the birds as the exhibitors themselves. I know Mr. Parlett personally, and can say that he is a sport. When he gets his eye fixed on a bird he will have it, no matter what price he pays. And I know Mr. Vardy offered a good price for the bird when six weeks old. How much more proof do the critics want?

J. W. Saywell.

Sir,—Mr. Parlett has taken advantage of the discussion on the parentage of White Rose no less than six times to sing the praises of the judges who have been fortunate enough to award prizes to his bird; no doubt they will feel duly impressed by his oft repeated flattery. But thank goodness we have judges who dare to ignore his threats of boycotting. Instead of attempting to reply to my letter of March 27th, Mr. Parlett asks if a light bird can be bred from two dark parents. My reply is, yes, hundreds of light birds have been bred from dark British birds; clears (Albinos) are not uncommon, and variegated (partial Albinos) are quite plentiful. I have also seen a variegated Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid on the show bench, and quite recently I saw a Goldie-Canary Mule, 1914 bred, all black with the exception of a few reddish coloured feathers on the head; its nest mates were normally coloured dark Goldie Mules, and all had been kept under the same conditions, so the black colour was not caused by feeding. The light plumage of White Rose is easily accounted for, but no one has yet attempted to account for the presence of the distinct and unmistakable traces of the Greenfinch which White Rose so clearly shows, traces which have never yet been seen, and are not likely ever to be seen, in a bird bred from a Canary and a Bullfinch. If Mr. Parlett is really satisfied in his own mind that there is no Greenfinch in White Rose, why is he so afraid to enter it in the light Canary Mule class? It might be to the interest of show committees to word their classes so as to compel White Rose to compete in the light Mule class in future. Perhaps Mr. Parlett will let us know what is the natural colour of the light plumage of White Rose. We all know that colour-feeding works a wonderful transformation on some birds; even British birds, such as Linnets, Bullfinches, etc., appear to be much affected by it. In reply to R. Blake, I would recommend him to again read my letter of March 27th, I may add that I am as much entitled to call myself Patrick as he is to call himself Blake. Funny isn't it, eh?

Patrick.

A BONNY BUFF NORWICH CANARY.

1st prize at the show of the City and Suburban A.C.B. for Mr. F. J. Martin, Battersea.

A Soldier Fancier in India.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in writing you. You will observe by the above address that I am at Lucknow, India, with the 2nd Wessex Brigade, R.F.A. I am sorry to say I had to clear my stock of birds with forty-eight hours' notice, to come out here last October, and they all went to the dealer, as just at that time breeders were chary about buying. It may be a surprise to you to know that I was a soldier fancier, but I had facilities for keeping birds, as I was on the staff and living out of barracks. I hope at some future date to take up my hobby again, as I found it a both educating and paying one, though of course I lost heavily on my last deal. I often wish now I had taken a little interest in Foreign birds, as there are some very nice species about these parts, of the names of which I have no knowledge. I have a Red-eared Bulbul at present, which cost me four-pence, with a wicker cage thrown in. Next month the travelling hawkers will be round with young birds, as I notice the birds are nesting everywhere. I have a pair of Green Parrakeets and a pair of Doves nesting over the beams in the roof of the verandah of my bungalow. I saw a tree a fortnight ago with at least a dozen Weavers' nests, bottle shaped, hanging from its branches. I had not the time to stay and examine them, as I was on parade, riding past them. Hoopoes are numerous here, as is also a bronze-green coloured Flycatcher. The Robin here has a red vent instead of red breast, and is similar in shape and action to our home bird. I am going to visit the museum here and spend an afternoon in the bird section, so as to acquaint myself with some of their names. Well, we are hoping to be selected to go to the front before April, or we must rest contented here until next winter. I have a letter before me from an Ipswich fancier asking me to supply him with birds related to one of my old stocks, which I sold him some two seasons past, and which has apparently done him a bit of good. I am sorry I cannot oblige him. I get Cage Birds each mail through my wife, and it gives me great pleasure to read the various interesting articles therein. I wish Cage Birds and the Fancy in general all success.

The Nightingale as a Pet Bird.

Sir,—I have been a regular reader of Cage Birds for over three years, and I have taken great interest in all articles referring to the Nightingale, and have learnt a great deal from same, so thought I would write you my own personal experience. A friend of mine, who keeps a bird-shop, procured for me two Nightingales in May, 1913, both of which I was unfortunate enough to lose. I asked him to get me one in 1914; he kept the bird for a week on 50 mealworms per day, then sent him on to me, when I placed him in a large single breeding cage in the bird room. I went out on the marshes and got some live ants' eggs. In gathering these I took a trowel and a paper bag, dug out the nests, and brought back eggs and ants too, which I sorted out afterwards. I grubbed about, found spiders, earwigs, woodlice and caterpillars, and also knocked off any greenfly from my cabbage; anything alive for my bird. When he moulted he looked a picture, but alas, we moved from the house the first week in November, and it rather disturbed him, and he lost his tail. Since we moved in November, he has lived in a public bar, and is the admiration of everyone (although he has no tail). He is so very tame that if he sees the mealworm tin he commences to dance from perch to perch, and when I offer him one he will "ask" quite nicely. He will answer my whistle from almost anywhere in the house. Sometimes I push up his cage-door, and down he pops into the opening, grabs the worm and jumps back on the perch. If I hold my hand flat he will jump on to it and pick the worms off. He doesn't mind any noise, and is not at all nervous. I kept him for five weeks this winter without mealworms, chiefly on spiders and woodlice. I go out and gather some moss for his cage-bottom, or if I cannot get that, I just keep the sand drawer clean. On April 2nd he commenced to warble, and now he is getting on quite nicely, but he does not sing at night-time, only in the day, to keep the others company. I have quite a chorus sometimes in the bar; a Lancashire Canary, a Goldfinch, a Blackcap (who is coming into song nicely), and my Philomel. I also have a Pekin Robin who, if he lives till July, has been in my possession three years; he is a beauty. My Blackcap I have had for one year and nine months, and my Nightingale twelve months. I would not part with my birds for a great deal. I have bred several Yorkshire Canaries, and this year I'll try for some Goldfinch Mules. I wish Cage Birds every success; through its medium I procured my Pekin Robin and my Canaries.

ABERSYCHAN C.B.S.

Meetiug, April 3, Mr. W. T. Couch, The Aviaries, Freehold Land, Pontnewynydd, was appointed Sec. Next meeting April 24, at 6.30. Members kindly turn up to fix date of N.F. show and next open show, and other business. Headquarters, Queen's Hotel.—W. T. Couch, Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting Palmer Hall, Mar. 7, before a poor attendance, and members are requested to try and attend more regularly. The only business brought forward was that Mr. Norman had been engaged to judge open show, Nov. 17. New members elected: Messrs. F. Wilson and A. Lovegrove.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

GLASGOW (East-End) O.A.

Meeting, March 23, 87, Old Dalmarnock Road, Bridgeton. Mr. A. M'Millan chair, and a fine attendance. Decided that the annual show in November be advertised in Cage Birds. Two new members were proposed and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chair.—D. Burnett, Sec.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, April 3, Lockhart's, Briggate, Mr. Walton in the chair. Decided to hold our next annual show Nov. 12, 13, our usual date. Club secretaries please note to avoid clashing. A long discussion in respect to rings took place, and it was noted a great improvement members having to pay their subs. before being entitled to receive any rings.—H. Best, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting Apr. 3, Lockhart's, Briggate, Mr. H. J. Mennard chair. Mr. Turner (Appleyard) was elected a member. Mr. W. A. Wilson gave a lecture on breeding and rearing in a very businesslike manner, answering satisfactorily no end of questions put to him. Vote of thanks to Mr. Wilson, who suitably responded, brought an interesting meeting to a close.—E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

SHETTLESTON C.B.C.

Meeting, Good Templars' Hall, April 10. Mr. E. Taylor, chair, supported by a good turn-out. Mr J Kirkwood was accepted a member. Classification for F.F. show fixed: Crests, 1 class; Nor. 4; Bord 4; Yorks. 2; Scotch Fancy 2; Mules 1; Hyb. 1, Hardbill 1; Softbill 1. Proposed for membership: Messrs. A. Graham, J. McLaren, D. Taylor, H. Cox and A. Frazer. Vote of thanks to chair terminated the meeting.—S. F. Wood, Sec.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Meeting, Oldham Hall, Mr. J. Abbott, chair, and a fair attendance. The chief item was the election of judges for the annual show. Decided to have three sections, viz., champion, amateur, and novice (Canaries only). At our next meeting there will be lectures on Colour-feeding, by Messrs. J. W. Metcalfe and W. Jones. Friends are cordially invited.—T. R. Jones.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

Meeting Apr. 10, Mr. Oxley's Hotel, Mr. W. Cresswell chair. Messrs. J. G. Sanderson, Geo. Potts, J. Yetts, South Moor, and J. Williams, Annfield Plain, were elected members. Judge elected for young bird show, June 19, Mr. Alf. Holden (Gateshead). Judges for annual show, Oct. 30, Messrs. T. Dixon (Bedlington), Canaries; J. Maddison (Newcastle), British birds. Decided to leave stationery, etc., in secretary's hands; also that novice rule reads as it is in rule book.—G. F. Bates, Sec.

CAMBUSLANG C.B.A.

Meeting, Free Gardeners' Hall, April 3. Alex. Crawford, Pres., in the chair. Agreed to purchase a new cup to go annually for the best young Mule or Hybrid bred by a member. Also agreed to engage two judges for annual show, Nov. 6. A few judges' names were given to the secretary to write. New members proposed: J. Leighton, W. Davidson, J. Marshall. Next meeting, April 24, 7.30.—Sam Lindsay, sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting Apr. 8, Mr. Havenhand presiding. Unanimously decided to hold N.F. show as usual on June 26. The same schedule as last year was passed, except that four Green Yorks classes are added (two novice and two members). It was left in the president's hands to secure the same room as for the annual show if possible. Judges' grant, stewards, etc., were left over to the May meeting, when I trust members will make a point of attending. We made two more new members.—E. Johnson, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Meeting, Nelson Temp. Hotel, Glasgow, Mr. W. Wood presiding over a good attendance. Classification for annual show was taken up. It was decided to revert back to old classification of 1913, and that no open classes be given. The following were nominated and have accepted appointments to judge: Nor., P.H. and Crests, Mr. F. Taylor, Glasgow; Bord. and Yorks., Mr. G. Hyslop, Stirling; Brit. and For., Mr. A. Livingstone, Paisley. Show to be held Grand National Hall, Nov. 27.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.S.

Meeting, Mr. J. Nicholson's, April 8. Mr. G. H. Bowerbank presided over a fair attendance. Correspondence was read from judges nominated as to their terms, and after a good deal of discussion the following gentlemen were unanimously elected: Mr. T. Arnot, Hawick, Borders; Mr. T. Dixon, Bedlington, Norwich and Yorks., and Mr. J. Maddison, Newcastle, British, Mules, etc. Arrangements for our first N.F. Show, July 3, will be made at next meeting, May 6, when we would like to see a large attendance. Subs. are now due, and sec. would be very pleased to receive same as early as possible to entitle subscribrs to show at N.F. shows.—Wm. Tallantyre, Sec.

ALTRINCHAM (Open) C.B.S.

Meeting, Apl. 7, Station Cafe, Mr. T. Harrison presiding over a fair attendance. Mr. J. Raynes gave a lecture on colour-breeding and colour-feeding, and the chairman introduced him to the meeting as an old fancier, who had past recollections of Altrincham. Various methods of colour-feeding were dealt with, and a good deal of discussion took place at the end of the paper, the questions which were asked being well answered by Mr. Raynes. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer, and Mr. Raynes thanked the members for their kind expression. Next meeting, Apl. 21, Station Cafe, at 8, "Construction and general management of the Border Canary," Mr. W. Bailey. A good attendance requested.—C. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

BARROW C.B.S.

Meeting, Gardner's Restaurant, Apl. 7, A. Hudson presiding, with a fair turn-out, and a very interesting evening was spent. Balance sheet, 1914, was read, and shows a balance to the good of £6 1s. 5½d. Sec. intimated that the effort in reorganising the society was finished, and three new gentlemen had been added to the honorary list, Messrs. J. Winder, A. E. Docker, and J. Gilolert, which makes a splendid finish to the effort. The lecture given by the sec. was much appreciated. Members take note: Bro. W. Willison is going to give a lecture, entitled "How should a Novice be treated," which is sure to carry a great amount of interest, so rally up and receive the benefit of this lecture. Still enrolling new members.—D. McFarlane, Hon. Sec.

NORTH-WEST GLASGOW C.B.C.

Meeting and lecture, Amalgamated Musicians' Hall, Napiershall Street, 30th Mar., Mr. Gibb presiding over a good attendance. Members might kindly note that in future all monthly meetings will be held at above address on the last Tuesday of each month. After the usual business, Mr. Maxwell, of Partick, entertained us to a very interesting and instructive lecture on the "Norwich Canary," which was listened to very attentively, and many were the questions asked of and very ably and satisfactorily answered by the lecturer. Mr. Maxwell was awarded a very hearty vote of thanks. New members were admitted: J. Coombe, H. Pringle, A. Jardine. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chair.—John Houston, Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Annual meeting April 10, Shields Cafe, Mr. J. W. Lawson presiding. New members elected: J. Bell, T. Taylor (Newcastle), H. Bird (Benwell), M. Turnbull (Gateshead), R. Proctor (Sunderland). Sec. presented the balance sheet, showing a balance in hand of £3 4s. 5½d., which was considered highly satisfactory. Officials were re-elected, with the exception of Mr. J. W. Lawson being elected chairman and Mr. H. Wellsbury vice-chair. Specials for 1915 were left over until a later meeting to see if the required number of shows are held. When societies apply for our patronage we wish them to bear in mind they must have at least two novice classes, and that we give preference where only specialist Norwich judges are engaged. We have fixed our first N.F. table show for June 16. Hearty invitation is given to fanciers to join us. Particulars on application.—F. W. Laidlow, Sec., 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual meeting, Duke of York; Mr. F. J. Weaver presided over a good attendance. Sec. presented balance sheet, showing nearly £5 to the credit of the society. Officers were elected en bloc:—Mrs. Stayley Hill, pres.; Messrs. A. Bird, P. Morris, Christopher, A. Cupiss, J. A. Tonks, D. Tonks, Miss MacDougall, J. Woodhead, Max Horton, J. Baker, S. R. Rhodes, vice-presidents; Mr. F. J. Weaver, chair; R. Willoughby, vice-chair; Mr F. Garfield, treas.; W. Harrison, sec.; and J. Gibbons, Press corresp; committee, all the members; the latter we have found works very satisfactorily, as it puts a stop to all friction. Decided to leave the matter of the annual open show for a month or two. Mr. F. A. Loach was unanimously elected on the list of vice-presidents. The balance sheet of the Inter-Club Show, which was badly patronised by the societies concerned, shows a deficit of nearly £1 10s., to which sum Mr. F. A. Loach has given 6s.—J. Gibbons, Press Corresp.

BOOTLE C.B.S.

Meeting Apr. 6, headquarters, Mr. T. Evans chair and a large attendance. Two new members were nominated. Chairman and Sec. were elected to represent the society at Amalgamated C.B.S. meeting. Decided to hold two half-day N.F. shows—June 19 (judge, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe) and July 24 (judge, Mr. T. Rowlands). Mr. J. W. Metcalfe gave a few instructive hints on the breeding season, followed by a discussion, in which most of the members present took part. Meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Metcalfe.—A. E. Huyton, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting, Apl. 6. The chief business was the reading of a paper by the sec., Mr. T. J. Hose, on egg-foods and soft-foods generally, and although it is hardly a subject which gives much scope for oratory, Mr. Hose managed to infuse into it a good deal of interest. At the conclusion he gave a demonstration of how he prepared egg-food for Canaries, which he did in a basin by first beating the hard-boiled egg with a fork, and afterwards adding powdered Osborne biscuits. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. At next meeting we shall make arrangements for annual outing, and consider the question whether an open show will be held this year. It is therefore to be hoped that the meeting will be well attended, so that we may have a variety of views regarding the open show question. If any member who cannot attend thinks he has a valuable contribution to give to the discussion, he should write either to me or to the sec.—A. R. Coe.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Meeting and show of British birds, Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, April 9, Mr. A. Hendry presiding over a good attendance. Prize cards and specials for British bird show of Mar. 12 were given out to winners. One new member enrolled, Mr. W. Allan. Specials were kindly given by Messrs. J. Young, G. McGown, J. Campbell, and G. G. Henderson. Entries were very much higher than in previous year, while type and quality were exceedingly fine, some grand birds being forward, and staged to perfection. Mr. A. Gillespie, Dennistown, judged, and gave every satisfaction. Bunting: 1, sp., 2, 3, Henderson; 4, Glass. Small Softbill: 1, Henderson. Large Brit.: 1, Henderson. For., including Goldf.: 1, Henderson; 2, sp., Glass; 3, sp., Allan. Dark Mule: 1, 4, Allan; 2, Glass; 3, Henderson. This show concludes the series of monthly table shows for the season, which have proved a great success, owing to the enthusiastic spirit of our members. We are endeavouring to arrange for something enjoyable and interesting at those meetings, when there is little or no business to be done. We have also secured the services of the following well-known judges for our annual show in November: Crests and Plainheads, Mr. A. Chalmers, Kirkintilloch. Bord. and Yorks., Mr. G. Hislop, Stirling. Mules, Brit. and For., Mr. R. V. Raine, Cathcart. Next meeting, May 14, Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, at 8.—George G. Henderson, Acting Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Apl. 7, Waterloo Hotel, Mr. W. G. Fellows, chair. Final arrangements made for British table show, May 5, the hon. sec., Mr. W. L. Page, offering prize for judging competition. Decided to hold annual outing in June at Lyndhurst Road, New Forest. Mr. W. G. Fellows gave a useful and interesting lecture on the Norwich Canary; he had brought some coloured plates of the Norwich 35 years old, and which dated from the time when he first started the fancy, showing the very great difference of type between then and the present. He brought no modern pictures, as the present type is well known to all from Mr. Norman's plates and drawings. After recounting some experiences of his early days he went on taking the bird in detail, pointing out what should be sought and what avoided, touching on head, breast, legs, wings, etc., and laying stress on a small beak, also on the need of good colour-feeding, pointing out how a well-coloured bird will take the popular eye, not to mention the judge's. He stated that it was important to introduce some green blood to improve colour, and to counteract the detrimental effect of in-breeding on the feathers; he did not favour the introduction of Cinnamon, on account of the liability to red eyes. In buying a bird at a show it was advisable to ascertain if it came of good stock, and a talk with the exhibitor might teach a lot. He advised members not to discard a good hen too early, if in good health and not overworked, he himself having bred good winners from a five year old hen. He considered the best young birds for breeding to be the cocks from early nests and hens from July nests, citing the case of Blackbirds and Thrushes, whose early nests are mostly cocks and late nests mostly hens. He ended by quoting from exhibitors' articles in CAGE BIRDS on various points. At the close of lecture Mr. Fellows answered a number of questions, after which a vote of thanks closed a very interesting and instructive evening.—G. J. Slade, Asst. Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Half-yearly meeting, Nelson's Tem. Hotel, Glasgow, Mr. J. F. Park, President, chair. There was a fair attendance. Decided to make all arrangements for annual show, on 12th and 13th Nov. Hall to be decided upon later. Classification was decided upon, and is as at last show. Prize-money, 30s. per class. The following were nominated as judges; and have accepted: Nor., Mr. W. Grewar, Forfar; Crests, Mr. Jno. M'Lay; Bord., Mr. W. McMillan, Dumfries; Yorks, Mr. C. Martin, Glasgow; Brit. and For., Messrs. Watson Edinburgh, and M. Craig, Tollcross. Vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

S. WALES & MONMOUTHSHIRE FED. OF F. & F. SOCIETIES.

Third annual meeting, Brish Hotel, Swansea, April 5, Mr. E. Dendle chair, in the absence of Mr. D. A. S. Longden, who, we are sorry to say, was seriously ill. The points gained for the several cups were very much below those of last year, the present grave crisis having affected the holding of shows to a great extent. Sam Jones, jun., Llanelly won 3-guinea cage-bird cup with 207 points. Novice cup, presented by Mr. E. Dendle, was won by Messrs. Griffiths Bros., Cwmgeidd, with 90 points, subject to these points being verified. Officers elected: Pres., Mr. S. W. Thomas, Swansea; vice-chair, Mr. J. T. Prothero, Ammanford. The Executive Council were elected from representatives from the following societies: Abertillery, Cardiff, Llanelly, Mid-Rhondda, Mumbles, Neath, Pontypridd, Welsh United Tinplate, and Ystradgynlais. We were pleased to see a representative from Swansea C.B.S. in Mr. Hitchings (secretary). The following were the dates of some of the societies, a number as yet not having fixed same: Mumbles, Oct. 28; Swansea Cage Birds, Nov. 11 and 12; Abertillery, Nov. 12; Ammanford, Nov. 18; Neath, Nov. 25; Mid-Rhondda, Dec. 2; Swansea and District, Dec. 9; Welsh United Game Club, Dec. 16; Llanelly, Dec. 27; Old English Game Fowl Club, Jan. 6; Llanelly Cage Birds, Jan. 11. Decided that the affiliation fee should be paid in future on or before the end of July in each year, and that no fees be accepted after that date for that season. Societies are instructed in future to give out 8 award cards, which will include 4th and reserve (the 4th not necessarily to be prize money). The points will thus count 8 for 1st down to 1 for commended. Societies not yet affiliated can obtain all information by applying to the secretary, A. A. Gordon McLucas, 48, Rosser Street, Macsycoed, Pontypridd. Medals are being presented to winners of last year's Federation cups.—A. A. G. McLucas.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

A Lecture on Seeds by Mr. Harrison.

Meeting held Apr. 6, Mr. A. E. Thorpe chair. Correspondence re F.F. show judges read; it was decided to accept Mr. Metcalfe's terms. Three persons were nominated for membership. The venue for annual open show, Nov. 12 and 13, was deferred to a later meeting. This concluding the business of the society, Mr. Harrison (of Altrincham) was invited to give his paper on "Seeds."

Speaking of stock seed, Mr. Harrison advised Turkish canary, which is very difficult to get at the present time, in preference to Spanish, with half rape. He warned fanciers to be very careful when buying seed in quantity to see that they were really buying seed and not husks. An easy method is to place one's hand deep down in the seed; when the hand is drawn out one will have a good idea whether it is all seed or part husks. Throw a handful of crushed oats into each cage once or twice a week during the winter months. Mr. Harrison expressed himself to be a great believer in sunflower seed for fattening, and would continue to give it during the moult. Maw seed is a good conditioner used sparingly, but it can be given too much, especially to young birds, making them go light. Gold of pleasure is also a good conditioner. A little inga seed during the winter for hens and every day during breeding season, tends to relieve egg binding. Mr. Harrison did not see why linseed should be advocated for putting a finish to the birds, as other seeds which contain much more nutriment can be used with advantage. Dandelion, given now and then during the winter, will have a marked effect. Milk and bread pudding containing bread crumbs, milk, and rice, seasoned and cooked to perfection, is a valuable dish to birds which are down or after travelling from the shows. Mr. Harrison said that the dish is so delicious that when fanciers come to his rooms there is not much left for the birds. A raw onion cut up and put between the wire for the birds to peck at, the speaker said, was a very good thing. Slip claws of young birds was caused by wire climbing; also Mr. Harrison deprecated the use of smooth perches, which had a tendency for the birds to slip. He rather preferred a square perch, with the top edges taken off and roughed with a saw in zig-zag fashion, which gave the bird, the hen in particular, a good hold. Questioned as to egg substitutes, Mr. Harrison said that it was a lazy fancier's habit to endeavour to shirk the hard boiled egg, as there was nothing to beat it. A very enjoyable paper and interesting evening came to a close with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Harrison, who had so ably and straightforwardly answered any question that had been put to him.—Thos. Hall, Press Corresp.

NORTHERN BORDER F.C.C.

Meeting April 7, Pillars Cafe, Pink Lane, Mr. A. Affleck presiding over a large attendance. The chairman, introducing Mr. Hutchinson, of Edinburgh, said we were always pleased to see visitors at the meetings, especially when coming from such a distance, and he was sure that the members would give him a welcome. This was accorded in a hearty manner. J. Blakey, Wrekenton, was elected a member. The challenge trophies not having been competed for this last season, a discussion took place as to who should hold them. It was agreed that they remain in the possession of Mr. J. Nicholson, Haltwhistle (1913 and 1914 winner). A motion was before the meeting that the conditions governing the competition for challenge trophies be altered, viz., that only the points from four highest birds at each show count. This was defeated, and the conditions remain as before. Mr. Johnstone gave a lecture upon the Green Border. The lecturer explained that owing to the demand of the Government upon his time he had not been able to prepare a paper, as he had intended doing, and would have to rely entirely upon his memory, but the masterly style in which he handled this subject convinced his audience that the lecture had not suffered from this omission. Mr. Johnstone emphasised the necessity of fanciers studying the model so as to obtain a true perception of the type required. He pointed out that the correct length of a Border is 5¾in., and it must be proportionately built, and is then by no means the skimpy bird that some imagine an exhibition Border to be. He also explained the use of Cinnamon blood in Green breeding, how and when to introduce this, also the results when this is abused. He told us his method of retaining lacings, etc. At the close of the lecture various questions were asked relating to pedigree and in-breeding, introduction of light blood into greens, and from what side, etc. The lecturer dealt with these in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. A vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer for his instructive address. Mr. Johnstone, in responding, said he was only too willing to help the club in any respect, and he incidentally remarked that he would sooner miss his dinner than a Northern Border meeting. Mr. Hutchinson (Edinburgh) also expressed his satisfaction and said he had thoroughly enjoyed the lecture. At next meeting, May 5, Mr. T. C. Crawhall has promised to address the meeting on Pedigree or Line Breeding. All fanciers are welcome.—C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

CASTLEFORD.

Linnet contest, Apr. 10, for three prizes; 1, Smith; 2, 3, W. Watkiss. Apr. 11 for three prizes; 1, Nelson; 2, Wainwright; 3, J. Watkiss. Linnet contest, Apr. 3, George and Dragon, Bridge Street; eight good prizes were sung for, and some good singing was done. Open sing Apr. 4 for three good prizes.—S. Morley, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Apr. 10; 27 entered for three prizes, four minutes time singing; 1, Nelson, 151; 2, Scottson, 138; 3, Beard, 122. Open sing Apr. 11; 1, Pugh, 94; 2, Morley, 72; 3, Beard, 68. Some good singing was done. Mr. Nelson's old champion is coming into his old form again. Pleased to see Mr. Scottson getting amongst the prizes. Biggest breaks this week:—Beard, 50; Scottson, 40; Pugh, 38.—S. Pugh, Sec.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing Apr. 10; 32 birds entered for three good prizes. 1, Plows; 2, Atkinson; 3, Wallis, who also tied with Cooper for largest break. Tappers, A. Bath and J. Cooper. Timekeepers, R. Collinson and A. Tomlin, who was home on a furlough, and it was a treat to see one of our soldier members timekeeping. A singing match was held after contest, W. Perkin beat A. Cooper. Now, you time singers, open contest, Saturday, Apr. 24, 3 p.m.—R. Plows, Sec.

BARNSLEY.

Open Linnet sing, Apr. 4 for four prizes; the singing was very good. Timer, Mr. Shepherd; A. Wareing, chalker. 1, Jones, 4min. 8secs.; 2, Cawthorne, 3.17; 3, Hardman, 3.11; 4, Coles, 2.55. Jones and Cawthorne sang again for a prize same day; Jones, 4min. 9secs.; Cawthorne, 3.9. Apr. 10; 1, Jones, 4.6; 2, 3, Coles, 3.51 and 3.36. Apr. 11; 1, 2, Jones, 4.48 and 4.36; 3, Cawthorne, 3.51; 4, Hardman, 3.5; 5, Coles, 1.24.—Hardman, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet Club, Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, Apr. 3; 1, 2, Whigfield; 3, Playford. Judges, P. Madden, A. Lorriman. Apr. 4, 19 birds; 1, Hargreaves; 2, Whigfield; 3, Jarrow & Banfield shared. Apr. 5, 18 entered; the singing was very good. 1, Parkinson, "Dark Horse"; 2, Wright; 3, Playford. Judges, P. Madden, C. Lorriman. Timekeeper, A. Lorriman. Apr. 10, 16 birds; 1, Whigfield; 2, Hayes; 3, Playford. Judges, C. Lorriman, Jim Chippdale. Apr. 11, 22 birds; 1, Banfield; 2, 3, Whigfield; 4, Lorriman. Judges, P. Madden, C. Lorriman. Timekeeper, N. Soloman.—A. Bryan, Sec.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A. Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Rd. Open contest for quality Linnet singing, April 2. 14 birds sang for three prizes: 1, Chippindale; 2, Buttery; 3, Farrar. Judges, Lacy, Wood. April 3, 25 sang: 1, Richardson; 2, Gomersal; 3, G. Hirst. Judges, Lacy, Naylor, Crane. April 4, 31 sang for 4 prizes: 1, Richardson; 2, Hirst; 3, Chippindale; 4, Stead. Judges, Hardcastle, Naylor. Whit-Monday, 21 sang: 1, Gomersal; 2, 3, shared by T. Johnson, Parker. Judges, Jennings, Naylor, Crane. Extra contest, same date, 19 birds sang: 1, Spedding; 2, Ward; 3, shared by Lacy and Gomersal. Judges, Jennings, Naylor, Hayes. April 6, 18 sang: 1, G. Hirst; 2, T. Johnson; 3, shared by Towers and Ward. Judges, Crane, Wood, Naylor. Quality singing, Apr. 10; 18, sang for three prizes; 1, Richardson; 2, Ward; 3 shared by Ward and G. Hirst. Voluntary Enlistment.

An Appeal for More Recruits.

Sir,—The War Office has approved of a recruiting scheme which can be effectively carried out if taken up and supported by the whole Press. I have been authorised to act as the instrument for enlisting the co-operation of every daily and weekly journal in the United Kingdom to publish forthwith the Registration Form at the foot of this letter, and to agree to the following procedure in connection therewith:—

1. The Forms when duly completed, to be returned to the issuing paper (CAGE BIRDS) in envelopes marked "Recruiting," and the names and addresses of prospective recruits to be published daily or weekly in the columns of CAGE BIRDS.

2. The returned Forms to be forwarded daily or weekly to the Honorary Organiser, c/o Recruiting, 39, St. James Street, London, S.W., where they will be scrutinised and tabulated into districts in accordance with the existing recruiting-areas, prior to being despatched to the various regimental districts.

The total number of registration forms assembled by this method will be published at the end of the month, as well as the number of recruits enrolled by each journal. It is evident that the success of the scheme depends primarily upon the public-spirited generosity of newspaper proprietors, who are asked to give valuable space gratis, and upon the editorial support which the scheme will receive. It is hoped that, for national reasons, both will be freely accorded, and that the whole Press will co-operate. The publication of this letter has been officially sanctioned.

Yours faithfully,
FRANCIS TRIPPEL, Hon. Organiser.
39, St. James Street, London, S.W.

APPEAL FOR RECRUITS: "CAGE BIRDS" REGISTRATION FORM.

I HEREBY DECLARE that I am of military age (19 to 38) and willing to enlist in His Majesty's New Army when called upon to do so by the Military Authorities.

Write Distinctly // Full Name .....

Full Address .....

This form, when completed, should be returned in stamped envelope marked "Recruiting," to the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

THE POULTRY WORLD.

The up-to-date, efficient poultry journal. Every number grandly illustrated and full of practical articles by experts. Invaluable for the beginner and the amateur.

Every Friday, 1d.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

F. T.—Replied to by post.

NOT YET NESTING (Ruth).—You should have said how you are feeding the birds. It may be that they need a little feeding up, but, as you say they have been together some time, the probability is that you mated them before they were really in breeding condition, which is always a great mistake. Try feeding up a little, as follows, and then if you exercise a little patience until the spring gets a little more certain, you will doubtless find them set to work in more earnest. In addition to the seed diet give to each pair of birds every second day a small teaspoonful of egg food with about half the quantity of a mixture of equal parts gold of pleasure and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternating days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Also give a small growing stool of dandelion daily to each pair—that is the whole root cut off just below the ground, with leaves, blooms and seed heads entire.

PICKS OUT FEATHERS (Mrs. E. M. Prace).—You should have said how you feed and treat the bird generally. Examine the cage well for the presence of red mites, and if any are found take the necessary steps to exterminate them, as you may have seen many times lately in these replies. If no insects are found give the bird a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut sopped in cold milk, and slightly dusted with flour of sulphur every second day for a week or so, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of fluid magnesia to the drinking water. Give a little green salad—dandelion, watercress, chickweed or groundsel—daily, and allow the bird to bathe freely.

TO ENSURE FERTILITY (Novice, W.D.S.).—If both birds are in good breeding condition when mated the eggs may reasonably be expected to be fertile after a period of from 30 to 40 hours has elapsed—or, say, birds put together in the afternoon of one day, an egg laid on the morning of the second day after may be expected to be fertilised, that is allowing one clear day between putting the birds together and the deposition of the egg. At the same time birds may be together for weeks and still produce only infertile eggs. Individuals vary to great extremes in this respect.

MAKES SNEEZING NOISE (H. W.).—(1) The bird may be suffering with only a slight cold, or it may be incipient asthma. I cannot say more definitely without more particulars than you give. Add to its diet every second day for a week a morsel of sponge cake the size of a hazel nut with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre. See that it is kept free from direct cold draughts. If not well in a fortnight or so, please write again and give full particulars about it, and I will advise you further. (2) It is not wise to breed with a bird in this condition. Better wait and see if it quit. recovers before mating it. (3) Answered in No. 1.

ASTHMA AND BOOK (D. G.). (1) See that the bird is kept in a bright and healthy place, and quite free from direct cold draughts, fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and a dusty, irritating atmosphere. Having done so, treat the bird the same as advised to "H. W. (1)" in this issue, except that you should first give an aperient in the water for three consecutive days six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. Then go on with the mixture advised in that reply, with the addition of five drops of tincture of lobelia. (2) The Nutshell booklet, No. 6, 2½d. post free, from our Manager, is a cheap and useful book on the treatment of Canary ailments. Part VI. of "Our Canaries" treats the subject more fully, and is cheap enough if you can get the single part. Possibly something still better may appear soon.

TO PREVENT HENS LAYING (Hendonian). Beyond feeding the birds on a plain, wholesome diet, and avoiding any highly stimulating foods, I do not advise you to attempt any special treatment to prevent the hens you do not wish to mate from laying. It is not unlikely that they will lay an egg now and again, or may even lay a full clutch in succession the same as if they were mated, but this will not necessarily have the least harmful effect, and you need have no fear that they "will not know when to stop." All you need do is to just throw the eggs out if, and when, they appear. Keep the cocks caged separately, and the hens in a large flight cage, or two in a flight cage, and give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Give just a pinch of summer rape three times a week, and the least scrap of bread and milk once or twice a week, according to the condition of the birds, during the summer months. Give a little green food daily, but avoid dandelion, and use instead watercress, chickweed or groundsel. Allow free bathing. This is all you really need to do. There is very little fear of the hens, if in a normally healthy condition, exhausting themselves by continuous laying, as you fear. Glad you have found our previous advice useful to you.

WHICH RAPE? (Anxious).—Practically German rape is only an old term for what is now more generally called Summer rape, to distinguish it from the larger and more acrid seed known as winter rape, and sometimes as charlock or wild mustard. The summer rape is a smaller and more reddish seed, of a more mild flavour, and is the one that is used for feeding Rollers. It is supposed to have a considerable effect in keeping the song of the birds low and free from harshness, or from too loud and excitable a delivery.

STOPPED SINGING (Disappointed). — It is not very unusual for a cock in full song and good breeding condition to cease singing when placed with the hen, and yet, if left alone, to breed quite successfully. This might have been the case with your birds, had you left things to take their own course. But considering what you say about the condition of the hen, I should strongly advise you to give up thinking of breeding with her, as she is obviously not in a fit condition to breed, and would probably only bring you disappointment. Get a healthy, vigorous 1914 hen, that is full of activity and anxious to nest, hang the cage with the cock in beside the one in which you have the hen in such a position that he can see her, and sing to and feed her. Feed both as you will see in the handbook you have, and after a few days you will doubtless find him taking a close interest in her, and calling her to be fed with tit-bits, etc. Then you may put them together; supply nesting material a day or two later; and let matters take their own course, when you will find things work out all right in the end. If the cock stops singing when placed with the hen do not worry; it will be of very little or no importance.

HENS REARING YOUNG (Miss Snow).—Yes, certainly, a hen will bring up the young without the assistance of the cock, in some cases even better than when he is left with her. In running two hens with one cock, however, you made a slight mistake in allowing the cock to remain with the last hen. You ought to have removed him when they began to sit, and caged him alone until the hens were ready to begin nesting again for their second broods. By doing so you always have the cock available for return to any hen that may be ready for him first, and the hens can generally be trusted to bring up the young quite successfully by themselves.

SINGS LIKE LINNET (J. F. P.).—If the song of the buff bird, which you think so Linnet-like, is short and broken, there is a certain amount of probability that it is a hen. Otherwise, it is doubtless merely a variety of song, which the bird has evolved out of extraneous sounds and songs it may have heard. Some Canaries are much more addicted to picking up notes and corrupting their own song than others. I have myself a trained Roller, which, from association with a Linnet, has a song which could scarcely be distinguished from a Linnet's, if the bird were not seen singing. The indistinct marking of the feathers seen in the sunlight has nothing whatever to do with it. I do not see any reason to suspect that the bird is other than a pure Canary, if that is what you are dubious about.

SITS VERY THICK (J. Smith, Birmingham).—There may be nothing more seriously wrong than a little overfeeding and constipation, in which case there is no reason why it should not be quite fit to breed from this season. Try what the effect of the following treatment will be in two or three weeks, and if not quite well in that time, please write again and give full particulars of its condition. In addition to the staple diet of canary and summer rape, give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut slightly dusted with soft sugar every second day, and on the alternate days give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, linseed and black rape. Give a little green food daily, watercress, or the tips of young growing groundsel for preference. In the drinking water, every second day for a week, add six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give instead five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for another week.

CAUSE OF CLEAR EGGS (R. V.).—The cause of the eggs being clear is not far to seek in your case. There were two causes, each of which was in itself sufficient to account for the infertility: mating the birds too soon, and the cock going into moult. As the cock is now through the moult, there is no reason why you should not succeed better with them in the next round if the hen is still in good condition. In addition to the staple seed diet, give, every second day for a week or two, a small teaspoonful of egg food, with about half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame seed mixed in it, and on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. Give also a small stool of growing young dandelion daily—cut the root off just below the ground, and give it to the birds entire. You may mate them again in two or three weeks, according to their apparent condition.

NOT SITTING (W. C.). The hen is not really in proper breeding condition, and you can do nothing but exercise a little patience, when she will doubtless settle down in better earnest. It will help to bring her forward if you treat her in the same way as advised to "R.V." in this issue, for two or three weeks, or it will do no harm to continue this treatment until she has gone to nest and laid her clutch of eggs. If she does not soon settle down with this treatment, you would be well advised to discard her and fill her place with a healthy young hen.

MOPY YORKSHIRE HEN (Disappointed).—Sorry, but I must say that I think your prospects of breeding with this hen are absolutely nil. Therefore, the best advice I can give you is to get a vigorous, active 1914 hen in good health and anxious to nest to mate with the six-year-old cock. If you wish to treat this hen, give, every third day for a month or so, in addition to the usual seed diet, half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the intervening days give first half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, black rape and broken groats, and next a pinch of equal parts gold of pleasure and maw. Give a little green food daily—dandelion, for preference. Every second day for a week add to the water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and after this give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food three times a week for a month. See that it is not exposed to direct cold draughts or extremes of heat and cold. Let the staple diet consist of three parts canary to one part summer rape.

A PANTING YORKSHIRE (Panting Canary).—Treat the bird the same as advised to "Disappointed" for a "Mopy Yorkshire Hen" in this issue, and be careful to see that it is not exposed to draughts, rapid extremes of temperature, or heated and unhealthy fumes from burning lights in the evenings, and instead of the Chemical Food to finish up the treatment, give five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for two or three weeks as may seem necessary.

A SOLITARY EGG (T. T. G.). The hen was probably not in proper breeding condition when first mated, but now the spring is getting more established she will doubtless soon settle down in a more businesslike fashion. Meantime you may treat her the same as advised to "R.V." in this issue and hunt out for her special benefit young stools of dandelion with a good supply of seed and flower heads on them. Mate her again when she has been on this treatment about a week, but continue the treatment until she has gone to nest. I do not think anything more will be necessary.

A FUTILE ATTEMPT (First Try). If the hen has no particular features which you specially desire to cultivate in your stock, I would certainly advise you to discard her altogether as a stock bird. It is doubtful if she will ever be a trustworthy breeder, and in the absence of any specially valuable features she is not worth the trouble of trying to save the eggs to be hatched and reared by other hens. You may, if you wish, try the effect of a fortnight or so on the treatment advised to "R.V." in this issue and the mating her with a spare cock you can leave with her during the period of incubation and rearing of the young if you are so lucky as to get any from her. The season being more advanced, she may possibly behave better, but if she fails again in the same way, do not waste time in giving her another chance.

A POOR BEGINNING (Veriest Novice). If you carefully digest the handbook "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you say you have, you will see that you are simply courting failure in your treatment of both the birds. (1) Being kept in a window in a wire cage after being accustomed to a box cage in a birdroom is the cause of this bird's condition. It would be utterly useless trying to breed with it whilst in this condition. Remove it to a position further in the room, and see that it is free from cold direct draughts, rapid extremes of temperature, and fumes of burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a little green food daily. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the water for three consecutive days, and afterwards five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and sweet spirit of nitre, every second day for a fortnight or three weeks as may seem necessary. (2) No, it is not the slightest use expecting any result from the cock you mated which has been dropping feathers all the winter and still continues dropping them. He is utterly out of breeding condition, which is the reason why he takes no notice of the hen. Feed the same as No. 1, with a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In the water give 20 drops of a mixture made by dissolving half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron in an ounce of sherry, and adding a teaspoonful of glycerine. Give this two days in every three until some little time after the feathers have ceased dropping. You may just as well separate them whilst giving this treatment, as it is quite useless keeping them together until the cock is in better condition.

DEAD CANARY (Canadian Reader). It is not possible to state cause of death from your simple statement that the bird seemed one day mopish and sick and the next day "handed in his cheque." Only a post-mortem examination could decide. The book for which you enquire is in course of reprinting, and the new supply may arrive any day. The Canadian stamps you forwarded are not negotiable here. If you could kindly manage to send a coin in lieu of them, we would return the stamps with the book.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

DO NOT AGREE (Blackpool). The fact of your Goldfinch and hen Canary not getting on well together is no doubt caused through one of them not being fit for breeding. Your remedy is to part them for a time. If you have a two-compartment breeding cage, put one bird in each compartment; if not, keep them in separate cages for a time. You say the Goldfinch is in full song, so it is just possible that all he will need is practically the same treatment as you have been giving him. Let the hen have a spoonful of mixed seed twice a week, and a little egg food three times a week, also supply a fresh dandelion leaf or a little chickweed daily. You could also give the Goldie just a morsel of the egg food twice a week. Fasten a piece of string on the front bar of the cage, and when you see the hen tugging it about, and bouncing from perch to perch, repeatedly calling, try them together again, when you will no doubt find they will agree better.

RUNNING GOLDIE AND HEN CANARY TOGETHER (H.P.).—You need not put your birds together permanently. If you let them occupy the same cage occasionally, or better still, put them in a double breeder that has a wire partition, it will do admirably. They would get used to each other, and most likely strike up a friendship that would prevent quarrelling in March when you put them together for breeding purposes. The hen does not require the Finch mixture during the winter; it would probably bring her on to nest too early.

COCK OR HEN? (Birdie).—If your Goldfinch is a cock bird he should certainly be singing now; if not, I fear it is a member of the opposite sex. The cock Goldfinch, as a rule, has a larger blaze than the hen, and it extends well past the eye at the top; his beak is stouter, and the head somewhat bolder and flatter at the crown. The wing butts are greenish black; in the hen these are inclined to take a brownish tinge. If you have only the one bird, I fear these notes on the differences in plumage will not be of much use to you, but, as I intimate above, a cock bird should now be in song, or anyway commencing.

MULE LOSING FEATHERS (A. R. Rhodes).—According to your description I should think your bird is infested with insects, and it is these that are making him mopy. You had better examine him, and if you find any give him a good hand washing or dress him with insect powder, then roll him up in a strip of cloth for about 10 minutes, repeating every three days until quite free from them. The cage should be thoroughly scrubbed and cleaned, or better still a new one brought into use. Feed the bird well with a little extra maw and hemp seed, and give a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food in his drinking water three times a week. Boil the water first or it will not mix.

MOPY GOLDFINCH (Cat).—I am glad to hear the treatment advised has done good. You had better continue the same occasionally, and as it appears to me that it suffers from constipation the salts should also be used now and again. A piece of sweet apple would be beneficial, or a smashed grape, if he will eat it, until you are able to get a supply of green food, which should do him good. If still in trouble, try the following: ½ teaspoonful of tincture of rhubarb and tincture of gentian, in two tablespoonfuls of water. Give it to him daily for 3 or 4 days, then wait a week and repeat if necessary. (2) Cutting the feathers around the vent of British birds just before the breeding season is not necessary. There is a great difference in the quantity of feather on a Canary and a British bird. If you handle them both and blow up the feathers you will see the difference, and be able to understand why it is necessary in some Canaries to reduce this by clipping.

HYBRID BREEDING IN AVIARY (Bad Appetite).—When the milder weather comes your Thrush would do well with a few hours in the open. It seems to cheer them up wonderfully, and you certainly get more song out of them. (2) You would have too many cock birds to do any good in your aviary in the way of breeding. You could not turn in more than one Bullfinch hen, as they are rather quarrelsome among themselves. You could try hens of the other Finches, such as Linnet, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, Siskin, Twite, and Redpoll, and leave enough cock Canaries to mate with them. If you put up plenty of nest boxes and keep them well supplied with building material, you will be almost certain to breed something. Of course, your difficulty would be in rearing them, as British bird hens are not to be relied upon, and most hybrid breeders have a few common Canary hens to put the eggs under. You will have some cock Canaries to spare out of your eleven, so that if you procure mates for them you could transfer the eggs as they are laid.

HYBRID BREEDING (Oakleigh).—As a rule hybrid breeding is more successful when carried on in cages than when the birds are flying loose in an aviary, but at the same time if you do not overcrowd you may meet with a certain amount of success. Of the birds you mention for breeding the Bullfinch and Chaffinch could very well be omitted, as they are not always a success with Canaries. You could run the half-dozen hens with the remainder of the cocks. They would do nicely in an aviary 8 or 10 feet long. If you decided to pair them up in cages they would do near the other Canaries, providing they were not constantly in sight.

WHAT BIRD (Rob. Mackie).—By your description and the place in which you see the bird, I think it must be the Dipper, or, as it is sometimes called, the Water Ouzel. It has a blackish brown head, dark grey back, white chest, and the lower part brown. Possibly you did not get into a position to be able to see his white chest, which is quite a distinguishing feature. He is a good songster, having a very sweet low warble, and will sometimes sing even in the middle of winter, in most severe weather. The Kingfisher is a much more gorgeously-coloured bird, with quite a long beak, and I feel certain your bird is not one; besides he has no song.

AILING GOLDFINCH (J. K. D.).—Your Goldfinch is certainly not doing well, and I do not think your treatment has been quite right. Do not force him to eat canary seed, few Goldies care much about it, and will almost starve if made to eat it. Hang his cage in a room with a fairly even comfortable temperature, not hot, nor quite cold. If he still has stomach trouble give ten drops of syrup of rhubarb in the drinking water; see that it moves him freely, and then discontinue. Feed on soaked seeds mostly, and every other day a cube of bread soaked in hot milk. As he gets better gradually work him on to his usual seed diet. While on soaked seeds give a fairly liberal allowance of maw, and, later, dandelion, thistle, niger, and a little cracked hemp. When he begins to look in better health the following tonic would do good: Aromatic sulphuric acid, tincture of gentian, and calumba root, in equal quantities. Give 5 drops in a teablespoonful of water for 4 or 5 days, then rest a week, and repeat.

FEEDING A TREE PIPIT (E. W. Satchwell).—As a caged bird the Tree Pipit must be classed on pretty much the same level as the small Warblers, although it is not so tender as some of them, but is more delicate than, say, a Skylark. It is quite a nice songster, its song partaking somewhat of the Canary and Skylark's, and, what is of equal importance, it is a pretty continuous singer. Its food should consist of a good brand of insectile food, made crumbly moist with scrap of raw carrot, boiled potato, chopped lettuce, etc.; occasionally a little hard-boiled egg should be minced up and mixed with it, but do not be too liberal with the egg, as these birds are inclined to put on fat. An occasional mild aperient will do them no harm. In addition to the above food they should have some live insects, small caterpillars, flies, maggots, mealworms, etc. A few live ants' eggs during the summer months are very much appreciated. If you are interested in Softbills you should procure the Softbill part 2 of the British Bird Manual from this office, 1/4 post free, or our "Nutshells" Nos. 25 and 26, 2½d. each.

PRECOCIOUS HEN GOLDFINCH (J. Adams).—It is certainly most unusual for a hen Goldfinch to lay eggs so early as February, they are generally rather late breeders, even when in a state of Nature. I am afraid you must be feeding her very highly and keeping her in a particularly warm room. Why not procure a mate for her, say a Greenfinch or Linnet. You might possibly manage to breed some good Hybrids.

BULLFINCH BALD (Thank You).—I am afraid there is something very wrong in the way you are feeding your Bullfinch. Do not give tattening or stimulating seeds. Let his stock food be three parts canary, two parts teazle, and one part summer rape, and a few sunflowers two or three times a week. Soak some of the above seeds and give him a spoonful daily, and be liberal with green food and fruit, particularly apple or others containing acids. For local treatment a little carbolized vaseline is as good as any, but cleanliness and attention to diet is of great importance.

FEEDING A GOLDFINCH (P.E.W.).—As you are a beginner in bird-keeping I would advise you to purchase our "Nutshell" Booklet on the Goldfinch, price 2½d. by post from this office. It will give you a lot of information that will be useful to you. The following is a good seed diet for your bird:—Teazle 4 parts, canary 3 parts, hemp 2 parts, linseed and summer rape ½ part of each. This will be his staple food. Give half-a-dozen sunflower seeds every other day. Lightly crack them for him if he is unable to shell them himself. Make another mixture of niger seed 3 parts, maw 1 part, and another of thistle 3ozs., daudelion and sesame, 2ozs. each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower 1oz. each. Give a small teaspoonful of these mixtures on alternate days. In addition to this seed diet he should have several kinds of wild seeds, particulars of which you will obtain from the little book mentioned above.

BREEDING LINNET MULES (E. B. Walt).—Yes, you can breed Linnet Mules in your aviary, but I am not certain if you will find the Linnet take to both of the hens, for as a rule he will only mate with one. Anyway, you can let him fly with both of them, and if you find he is vicious with one of the hens after the other has gone to nest you must remove her and leave him with the one bird only. Continue to feed them on seed as usual, and once a week give a spoonful of mixed seeds for each hird and a little egg and biscuit weekly; of course, not on the same day you are giving the mixed seeds. Feed like this, with a spray of greenfood occasionally, until the hens show signs of wanting to go to nest, which they do by flying from perch to perch, flapping the wings, and calling repeatedly. When the Linnet is ready, which you can tell by his beak becoming a dark blue grey and his being in full song, give them a couple of nest boxes or pans, and plenty of nesting material, when one of them will probably soon build a nest and lay. The eggs take thirteen to fourteen days to hatch, and the old ones should then be regularly supplied with hard-boiled egg and bread crumbs or biscuit to rear the young ones.

GOLDFINCH MULE WITH FIT (R. Etterby).—Your Mule had a fit, probably caused by wrong feeding, but as you do not tell me what you are giving him I am unable to point out your error. Discontinue stimulating or fattening foods, such as hemp, linseed, and maw, and feed on a plainer diet, consisting of canary 4 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape 1 part. Also supply him with a spray of watercress, chickweed, or groundsel every other day, and let him bathe freely. Give him an aperient at once; as much Glauber Salts as will cover a sixpence dissolved in two tablespoonsful of water. Repeat the dose in 3 days.

BREEDING WITH SISKINS (Novice H.K.).—You would do better and have a greater chance of being successful if you tried with your cock Siskin and one hen only. Choose the most healthy-looking and sprightly of the hens and let them fly together away from the others. In the early part of April supply them with a nesting box or pan, or an old bird's nest fixed in a handful of rough branches, and plenty of nesting material, such as moss, cow-hair, wool, etc. If the hen builds and lays in the nest these should be removed and dummy ones put in the nest or the cock bird might destroy them. You should have a hen Canary to place the eggs under to incubate and rear, as British hens cannot be depended upon to do so. If you intend to let them try themselves, put a dummy egg in the nest before the hen lays; the cock will get used to this and possibly not interfere with the genuine article. In this case do not remove the eggs or disturb them in any way.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

PORTUGUESE NAME (G. C. G.).—I regret that I have as yet been unable to find you the Portuguese vernacular you require, but hope to do so for our next issue, and trust this will not be too late for you.

COCKATIELS AND BUDGERIGARS (F.Z.S.).—Yes, old and young Cockatiels could be left together for the whole of this year, or till you see plumage beginning to change. Once this has taken place you will have a difficulty in telling one from the other. The same applies to the Budgerigars, but as these assume adult plumage much quicker, the only reliable way of being sure of retaining the parent birds is to ring them. This can easily be done now, before they begin breeding, by using the aluminium rings, which can be stretched open and then pinched together round the leg. This is the only safe way with Budgerigars, the alternative being to remove the young to another aviary as soon as they are able to fend for themselves. Budgerigars are not safe with Finches, and young Budgies are often more mischievous in such company than adult birds.

AILING GREY PARROT (J. A. R.). If you have not been doing so you should supply this bird with some proper Parrot grit (mingle a little with the seed) and do not give her unshelled walnuts. Supply these shelled. Give her the following as a drink for two or three weeks: One teaspoonful condensed milk, one-third of a teaspoonful cod liver oil emulsion, and about two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Stir well together. Supply to the bird when cool. Take away the drinking water overnight and supply the milk mixture first thing next day, leaving it in the cage all the morning. Supply clean water in the afternoon. Give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the drinking water; give several doses, but you must stop for a time if the voidings become watery-loose. Then, as soon as the bowels are normal, give occasional doses as a diver corrective. The bowels should be kept rather on the loose side. If necessary, give occasional doses of fluid magnesia to secure this, but I do not think it will be required. I should increase the supply of fruit, it can have as much as it cares to eat of apple and banana. Report progress in two or three weeks.

WHAT DOVE? (A. M. C.).—Your birds are not from Argentine, but from Tropical and South Africa. They are Cape Doves (Æna capensis), also known as Masked and Harlequin Doves. Doves are easily scared, and it is evident they get some bad night scare, which causes the shedding of the feathers. Doves are not really cage birds, and their tails get broken and damaged owing to the limitations of the cage. Could you not let these birds have their liberty about the room? They would then soon recover condition. If you fixed up a twiggy branch in one corner where both sun and light can reach, they would spend most of their time there and not make much mess about the room, especially if you had a seed tray (shallow box), with a pan of seed standing in the middle swinging from the ceiling near by. A little peat moss litter underneath the twiggy branch would catch and absorb the droppings, and these would be easily gathered up periodically. Give them a piece of rock salt, cuttlebone, and a mixture of canary and white millet seed. They will also eat small worms and slugs. The species is a very shy breeder in captivity. The best book on Doves is 'My Foreign Doves and Pigeons,' by Miss Rosie Alderson, which is published at 4/6, I think. The Editor would procure it for you.

"AUSTRALIAN LOVE BIRD"? (Love Birds).—If your bird is a Budgerigar, which I assume it is, though you give me no clue save "Australian," you can keep it singly. It will not pine away, and as it becomes quite tame you can give it a little liberty about the room on suitable occasions. Supply plenty of seeding and flowering grass as soon as you can get it, but it must neither be tainted with frost nor sodden with wet. If the above does not cover your need, report query with a description of the bird.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.) "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Aradorats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Warbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

AMAZON PARROT (Mrs. Allen).—It is a Blue-fronted Amazon. Your diet is right so far as it goes, but you can supply ripe fruit liberally. A few nuts, such as Barcelona, monkey, and walnuts, pieces of biscuit and dry potato. Also keep cuttlebone, grit, and a piece of wood continually in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. Some Amazons are very fond of boiled maize and about a dessert-spoonful daily is good for them. Boil till soft, but the corn should remain whole, and drain off all water. If the bird is thin it would be well to put 10 drops of cod liver oil emulsion on the corn while it is hot, and allow it to soak in, then supply to the bird. Put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day for a month. On the intervening days just colour the water with chemical food. Report progress in two or three weeks' time.

PROPER TIME TO PURCHASE (J. F. Morrison).—Young Blue-fronted Amazons are almost always on the market, but a bird of this year would not be available till the autumn. Parrots are long-lived birds; many of them mature slowly, and a bird several years old is still a young one. Watch our advert. columns and seize your opportunity. Supplies may be very erratic while the war lasts.

ZEBRA FINCH, &c. (H. C. B.).—I take it the Zebra Finch hen is merely a little out of condition, but keep it warm, strictly out of draughts, yet where it can get light and air. As soon as you can get it free from frost, give it seeding and flowering grass to pick over. Keep a piece of cuttlebone in the cage. Till the bowels become rather loose (not watery-loose) put half a teaspoonful of fluid magnesia into the drinking water daily and follow this by giving ten drops of syrup of phosphates in the water every other day. Cage the Java Sparrow hen up separately and treat her similarly to the Zebra Finch. Supply also a little paddy rice. As soon as the sun gets really warm, give them a short time daily in the open air, but they must neither be exposed to currents of air, nor have the sun's rays pouring directly down upon them.

BUDGERIGARS (Ruth).—I cannot answer your query as you give me no details. How large is your cage? How are you feeding, etc.? How long have you had them? If you will repeat query, supplying details as above, I will try and help you. Have you our Nutshell "Budgerigars"? If not, you should get it, 2½d. post free from our Manager. It will help you.

AUSTRALIAN PARROT (L.T.).—It is a Roseate Cockatoo: some of this species make good talkers, but the majority do not. The same treatment as that given to the African Grey Parrot will suffice for this species. Briefly, its dietary should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, stale crusts, biscuit and plain cake. The usual essentials—grit (not sand), cuttlebone, wood to bite up, and water—must be continuously in the cage.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. Neilson.—Bullfinch died as result of a fit, probably induced by fear or excitement. There was a large clot of blood on the surface of the brain. The bird was very fat, and in a good sound healthy condition.

ADVERTISEMENT CHARGES.

6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny for each word over eighteen.
Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.
Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

WANTED A TRIAL.

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Special notice to all bird fanciers. If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure; Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest medicine ever introduced for getting birds in song and into breeding condition. They are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg-binding, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, sold in 7d., 1/1 and 2/- bottles. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine. C. W. Town, Keighley, writes: "I find your Tonic Drops invaluable." A. Gifford, Sheffield: "Your Tonic Drops have given every satisfaction." W. H. Shaw, Doncaster: "Your Tonic Drops have been a great success. I was astonished at the quick result." W. Walker, Walkden: "Your medicines are unequalled." T. Griffithe, Derby: "Your Tonic Drops have worked wonders." C. J. Roberts, Bayswater: "Your medicine for egg-binding is marvellous." Mrs. L., Midwood: "Your Tonic Drops are splendid." W. Kiesel, London: Your Special Lung Tonic is excellent." B. Hutton, Holbeach: "I shall never be without your Revivo again." For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds; also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in sick feather, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo, in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6; the 1 1 bottles are treble the 7d. size. All medicines are post paid, per return at our risk. Also four valuable food recipes, how to feed the Lark, Linnet, Roller, Thrush, and Blackbird for health and song given free to all purchasers of our medicines. FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

APRIL, 1915. UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY. APRIL, 1915.

The following testimonials (in addition to scores of others (which are filed here for the inspection of all visitors), have been received the last week:—

"24, Ranfurly Drive, Belfast.—Yorkshires arrived this morning in good form. I am very well pleased with your selection. They are splendid value.—Alexr. Slater to Joe Thomas."

"109, Nether Street, Path-head, Kirkcaldy.—Bird arrived safe. Highly pleased with it. Singing beautifully. Will recommend you to my friends, for you deserve to be encouraged.—Lawrence Hall to Joe Thomas."

"9, King Street, Abergavenny.—I received the hen all right and she is a topper. I thank you for being so prompt. I shall recommend you to anyone requiring birds, as they cannot be served better.—F. Hawkins to Joe Thomas."

"41, Spring Bank, New Mills, Stockport.—Received birds safe. They are a lovely pair. I am well pleased with them and thank you for your straightforward dealings.—J. Graham to Joe Thomas."

"72, St. Michael Street, Dumfries.—Bird arrived all safe. I am well pleased with it. You are a decent chap and I am recommending you here to the Fancy.—Wm. Sherman to Joe Thomas."

The above are a fair sample of letters I receive by every post from all over the Kingdom, and only considerations of space prevent me from printing scores weekly. Please remember this, however: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to every customer.

SOFTBILLS: the smaller species; full information upon their proper feeding and management in captivity, is given by H. J. Fulljames in "Nutshell No. 25," which also deals with hand-rearing, and describes the collection of ants' eggs, 2½d. post free, from: CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. (2d. from agents; see list on another page.)

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

All birds on seven days' approval; neat travelling cages 3d. each, 2/3 dozen. The old reliable firm and address: E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

Roller Canaries.

VOOGT'S STRAIN.

I left for Rotterdam, Tuesday, 13th inst., returning safely on Saturday, 17th inst., with the following birds:—

420 No. II.
420 No. III.
840 Hens.

Nothing more, Nothing less.

By Monday afternoon, 19th inst., only 200 No. II. were left, with a few hens.

I have arranged as far as possible for Saturday arrivals here, consequently if dealers and others requiring any of below-mentioned will post their money Friday or Saturday latest, this will ensure their receiving whatever they require, notwithstanding the several cash buyers here in London.

TO DEALERS ONLY.

7 No. II. for 42/-; 7 No. III. for 35/-.

Cocks No. I., 12/- each. These are birds with surpassing singing powers. They mostly have soft, sweet, musical notes, and improve day by day. Universal satisfaction given.

Cocks No. II., 7/6 each. These are the birds usually advertised having the Nightingale and Woodlark note, with sundry other qualifications.

Cocks, No. III., 6/- each. There is a great demand for this class of bird, all being good, sound, serviceable Rollers.

Hens, No. I. class, to match Cocks I. class, 3/- each. Ordinary Cocks, 2 in wicker cage, 3/-; 14 in 7 cages, 15/-.

TERMS.—Cash with order only. All my customers may rely upon receiving birds answering above descriptions. They are at liberty to lodge any complaint with the Editor of "Cage Birds," by whose decision I shall abide. Telephone: 6341 Avenue.

JOHN HAMLYN,

Twitterings.

Walton and Everton C.B.S. has fixed on Oct. 30 for its old show, writes Mr. W. C. Robinson, hon. sec. Local secs. kindly note.

Mr. V. Zimmerman, hon. sec. of the York C.B.S., writes: "We have numerous valuable cups, rosebowls, etc., for competition, and purpose holding an open show some time in November or December; arrangements to be made later."

At the meeting, April 17, the Cumnock and Dist. C.B.S. elected Mr. T. McCreadie, Dumfries, to judge Scotch Fancy and Borders, and Mr. J. Steel, Dalkeith, British and Norwich at the show on Nov. 27, writes Mr. Alex. Wyper, sec.

I feel I must compliment you on the grand "Annual" you have issued for 1915. It is simply marvellous value, and it is most astonishing how it can be done for the small sum of sixpence.—W. A. Shaw, Galashiels.

Mr. Edgar S. Broadbent, of 25, Wellfield Road, Walton, Liverpool, has kindly consented to take over the secretaryship of the Green Canary Association, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, chairman. Secretaries please note; members kindly forward any suggestions for next season's show business.

Mr. P. R. Crosby, 5, Queen St., Plymouth, writes that he is desirous of obtaining employment as bird-keeper to an aviculturist. Mr. Crosby says he is a good carpenter, and is capable of doing anything that would be required in a large private aviary; he could give his whole time, and live in if desired.

The balance-sheet of the City and Suburban A.C.B. for the quarter ending April 1, is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn. Notwithstanding a net loss of just over £4 on the young bird show, the statement shows a balance in hand and at bank of £23 18s. 8d., an increase of £4 8s. 11d., over the amount brought forward from 1914.

Three of our members have recently answered the country's call and joined the Colours, writes Mr. A. Lawford, sec., Huddersfield O.S. They are Messrs. A. Morris, A. Sharp, and W. Charlesworth, so we now have four on H.M. Service. The members of the Huddersfield O.S. and their many friends wish them luck and a speedy return. All Mr. Morris's birds are now for sale, and will be found advertised in this week's Cage Birds.

We regret to learn that Mr. F. Rhodes, so long hon. sec. to the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, has been forced through illness to resign. The new hon. sec. is Mr. S. Wilcock, 16, Back Manor Street, Eccleshill, Bradford. Societies desirous of having the O.N.P.C. patronage should apply to Mr. Wilcock as early as possible. Mr. Rhodes is undergoing an operation at the Bradford infirmary, and the many fanciers to whom he is known will join us in the hope of his speedy recovery.

I have obtained your "Canary Breeding for Beginners" and a few of the "Nutshells," writes Mr. W. A. Shaw, and I am now, I feel certain, on the right road to success. Whatever would novices such as I and others do without the above instructive books, and our most popular weekly paper, Cage Birds? I look forward to my copy weekly, and not one line is missed, once I get it. I feel I am only voicing the thoughts of all bird-lovers when I say that all the successes which I have obtained are due to good old Cage Birds. Long may it flourish.

A Novice's Success.

You may guess my surprise, writes Mr. S. J. Tucker, Dover, at seeing my name as the winner of the "Untidy Bird Room Competition." I only took up Canary breeding last June, and I knew absolutely nothing about birds of any kind before that date. Naturally, as soon as I intended to take up this hobby I looked for reliable information, and soon discovered Cage Birds, and have regularly taken it since. Of course I have studied it most carefully and also your publication "Canary Breeding for Beginners,' which has put me on the right track. I did very well with two pairs last year, and this year I intend going strongly for this fascinating hobby. I tell you this to show what can be done by studying your many useful books.

OBITUARY.

MR. CLAYTON (Halifax).

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, that I have to report the death of "Pliny" Clayton, of Halifax. When he was in the Fancy, his speciality was Yorkshire Greens, and in this variety he scored some wonderful successes. He was the greatest thorn to the Liverpool exhibitors, and we did not always come off top dog. We in Liverpool have lost another link of what was once a strong chain. It is a blow to us, for he was a born fancier, and we wish Yorkshire would raise more like him. The Green Canary Association tender their most heartfelt sympathy to his family.

Mr. R. E. Helliwell, in also sending us an announcement of the demise of Mr. Clayton, writes: "He passed away on April 11, at Morecambe, after a long and painful illness. He was always straight, and a good sportsman: those who knew him will join in heartfelt sympathy to his wife and family in their sad bereavement."

MR. R. LYDEKKER.

By the death of Mr. Richard Lydekker, which occurred at Harpenden Lodge on Friday night, the world of science loses a distinguished and laborious worker. Mr. Lydekker, who was in his sixty-sixth year, was on the staff of the Geological Survey of India from 1874 to 1882. His writings on geology and zoology were very numerous, and included works on the geology of Kashmir and South American fossil animals, the great and small game of India, Burma, and Tibet, the game animals of Africa, and the Sportsman's British Birds. He was a Fellow of the Royal, Geological, and Zoological Societies, and was on the Commission of the Peace for Hertfordshire. "Morning Post."

MR. HARRY DADY (Gorleston).

One who was at the same time a soldier, an athlete, and a bird-lover gives his life for his country.

We learn that Private Harry Dady of the 1st Coldstream Guards, who was reported missing on Jan. 25, is now officially announced to have been killed in the fighting at Cuinchy, near La Bassee, on that date. He was the only son of Mr. Isaac Dady, of No. 45, Lowestoft Road, and was 29. He had been married only 2½ years. He joined the Army in September, and went to the front early in January. He will be well remembered in football circles, as he had played full back for both Yarmouth and Gorleston Clubs, and was one of the Gorleston team which won the Junior Cup in 1907, when they sensationally defeated Norwich St. James, who a week after won the Senior Cup. He was a good oarsman, a fine swimmer, and had played polo for Gorleston and the Otter S.C.

In sending the above account from the Eastern Daily Press of Mr. Dady's death, Mr. E. A. L. Crow, hon. sec. Lowestoft F.S., writes: "I knew Mr. Dady personally, and he was as good a fancier as an athlete; he was particularly interested in Norwich Plainheads. He is the first cage-bird man, I believe, who has given his life for his country.

LIEUT. SIR R. J. CORBET, Bart.

Following upon the news of Mr. Dady's death comes the announcement that another soldier bird-lover in the person of Lieut. Sir R. J. Corbet, Bart., Coldstream Guards, has been killed in action. Sir Roland was in the prime of young manhood, and his untimely death comes as a personal loss to ourselves as he was an occasional contributor to our columns and a Patron of Cage Birds League. He was a member both of the Avicultural Society and the Foreign Bird Club, and his demise will be mourned by a wide circle of friends. England is the poorer by the loss of such men as Lieut. Sir R. J. Corbet and Private Dady.

Burial of Mr. Easterling.

Friends and brother fanciers will be interested in hearing (after your announcement of his death), writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. sec. City and Sub. A.C.B., that Mr. F. Easterling was carried to his last earthly resting place to-day, April 19, at Streatham Park Cemetery, amidst a sorrowing circle of relatives and friends. The City and Suburban A.C.B. were represented by their chairman and myself; others, I feel sure, would have been there also had they known the day. Beautiful wreaths were sent by the Wimbledon C.B.S. and the City and Suburban A.C.B.

Mr. H. Smith, hon. sec., Wimbledon C.B.S., writes that in company with Mrs. M. M. Owen and Messrs. P. Rorke and G. J. Warley, attended at Streatham Cemetery for the purpose of representing the society in paying the last respects to the deceased, but discovered too late that the funeral was taking place at Streatham Park Cemetery. In sending this explanation Mr. Smith says: 'We should not like it to appear that we had in any way slighted one who has been to Wimbledon, as to many other societies, a real good friend and a generous supporter. He will be a great loss to the Fancy."

The following specialist judges will officiate at Haltwhistle and District C.B.S. annual open show on Nov. 19, writes Mr. Wm. Tallantyre, hon. sec.:—Borders, Mr. T. Arnot (Hawick); Norwich and Yorks., Mr. T. Dixon (Bedlington), and British, Mules, etc., Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle). Secretaries please note date and avoid clashing.

Ramble for Oldham Fanciers.

Mr. G. Mills, hon. sec. of Oldham C.B.S., writes that at the next meeting, April 27, at the Textile Dining Rooms, at 8, a ramble will be arranged. All interested are invited to attend.

"Nuptial Plumes."

The congratulations of foreign bird exhibitors are due to Mr. R. J. Watts, of Watford, who was married on Primrose Day to Miss Gertrude Sargent, daughter of Mr. F. Sargent, one of the most popular townsmen of Watford, and of L.N.W. Rly. fame. Mr. R. J. Watts, who has for some ten years exhibited at our principal shows, came out as an all-England judge at the Amalgamated show at the Horticultural Hall last November. The happy pair are both well-known to those who attend the principal shows, and among the many beautiful and costly presents received by them was a tribute in the shape of a handsome set of engraved fish carvers, knives and forks, from friends of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League. The congratulatory note accompanying this bore the subscribers' names. Mr. Allen Silver saw him "off the mat."

Where Rarities are Common.

Mr. R. Cottam, a former member of the Oldham Naturalist Society, in a long communication to his fellow-members relating to birds in Khartoum, says, among other things: "Of course the Hoopoe is flushed every few yards, and scares numerous Grey Wagtails. The White Wagtail is the common representative of the family in these parts, being found in most gardens and streets of the city. Almost every day I see many specimens of the Blue-cheeked Bee-eater perching on the telegraph wires. The Crested Lark of Brem and the Calandra Lark are quite at home, the Calandra is superabundant, whereas the other species is most solitary.

A Khaki Bird's Nest.

A Robin has just built its nest in the shelter of a soldier's overcoat, hanging at the head of its owner's bed in the Red Cross Hospital provided by Messrs. Chivers and Sons, Limited, the jam manufacturers, at Histon, near Cambridge. The ward is an open one, and the Robin, after selecting its site, went about its work of building very coolly, showing no fear of the soldiers, who were much interested in their little visitor. The bird comes and goes as it likes, frequently sits on the head of the bed while the soldier is in it, and stays at night in its nest, where it has already laid four eggs.—"Daily Express."

THE STANDARD WORK ON THE SUBJECT.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

The War Affects Bird-cages.

At a meeting of bird-cage manufacturers in Birmingham, it was resolved that "In consequence of the serious continued increases in the cost of raw materials and labour, the net prices of all bird cages be advanced a further 10 per cent., making a total of 20 per cent., and that the discount from list prices be reduced to 40s. per cent., from April 9 until further notice—plus the extra net charge for glasses as advised on Feb. 1."

The Nighringale's Return.

I have just heard and seen a cock Nightingale (a splendid specimen) only a few yards away from me, hopping from bush to bush, and singing well, writes Mr. F. J. Weaire. I also saw the "Snakebird" (the Wryneck) a few yards further away. Both are first arrivals here (Kent) this year (Primrose Day, April 19, and quite like a summer day) and both were on outskirts of small wood, Snodland Brook, their usual haunts, and where they are heard yearly to perfection.

Blackbird Slain: Bomb-dropping Fiasco at Sittingbourne.

The rules of sportsmanship were violated by the occupants of the German Taube aeroplane which visited Sittingbourne, among other Kentish towns, for they killed with a bomb a bird that was "not on the wing." This was their net "bag" for the day—a Blackbird sitting in a pear tree in an orchard owned by a firm named Burley, adjoining Gore Court. The same bomb which slew the bird tore some of the budding branches from the tree, and made a hole in the turf about a foot and a half deep and two feet wide, and that was all it accomplished. It did not even explode.—"Daily News and Leader."

A Tit-bit from "Tit-Bits."

The weekly journal "Tit-Bits" for April 17 had an article entitled "Birds' Killing Anvils," which opened with the following paragraph: "In country districts where shelled snails are abundant a thrilling thing it is to see a Robin, Goldfinch, or Thrush capture a snail and hie them (sic) to a certain smooth-topped stone, there to soar high in the heavens and repeatedly drop the unhappy snail until finally the shell is triumphantly cracked open as you would a nut."

We should think it indeed a "thrilling thing" to see a Goldfinch soaring high in the heavens with a snail in his beak, or a Robin practising bomb-dropping with a charge about as heavy as himself. Our contemporary is careful to say "It is, to be sure, no easy matter to catch the birds in the act." Here we agree; but when it goes on to say that "the crushed and broken houses of shell scattered near such stones tell the tale," then we differ. The tale they tell is of a Thrush which has used the stone to break the shells of snails which he holds in his beak while hammering them, not that of snails dropped from the air a la Zeppelin.

TORPEDO BIRDS.

De Rougemont Outdone.

According to a New York story Mr. Ferdinand Bartels, an explorer who followed Mr. Roosevelt's footsteps in the wilds of South America, has just returned to the United States from Brazil, where he discovered a strange bird of prey which he named the "Whiffle Buff." It has a very sharply pointed tail. It drops underneath its victim and then soars at a tremendous speed with its tail pointing upwards, and pierces the prey from below with its needlelike feathers.

Mr. Bartels, who has secured some live specimens of this extraordinary bird, informed an interviewer that he intended training them, and added, with a smile, that he hoped to make them attack airships. If successful, he would offer them to a foreign power as "torpedo birds" to attack Zeppelins.

Have You Seen It.

A correspondent to the London "Daily Express," with the expressive pen-name of Y. Knott, asks the question: "Can it be possible that this bird is of the same species as the "Hadyer" Bird, so well known in this country and chiefly remarkable for the fact that it flies backwards in order to keep the dust out of its eyes?" Why not, indeed?

Maybe the poor Blackbird that was killed by a Zeppelin bomb at Sittingbourne during the air-raid last week, was mistaken by the baby-killers for a "Whiffle-Buff" and paid the penalty accordingly.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARY: Its Breeding and Management.

A Lecture given before the Members of the Great Horton Good Intent and Kindly communicated by Mr. Frith, the Hon. Sec.

A GOOD muster turned up at the Grange Congregational School, on April 10, to hear Mr. Snead on this important subject, for the lecturer is known to be a fancier who always has been successful in breeding Yorkshires of good quality. Mr. Snead said he was pleased to come amongst us with a purpose which corresponded to the name of our society, "The Good Intent." He said he had come to speak mainly to the novices, but if the older fanciers could gather something to their advantage he would be pleased. Anyway he would give his own method, and he thought that if this were followed success should be achieved by others as it had been reached by himself.

The Room, and Its Aspect.

Firstly the situation of the room itself and its aspect are very important matters. If possible a room should be selected with a S.E. or a S.W. aspect, for in such circumstances more sun is received into the room, and sun is life to the birds. An important point is to avoid all draughts in the room, and a simple method to find out if a room is draughty is to take a lighted candle into it, for if draughts are present the flicker of the flame will at once indicate them. Although fresh air is most important for the well-being of the birds, it is even better to do without this in a degree than to subject them to draughts.

Cages may be of any kind according to the preference or convenience of the individual breeder, but in any case they must be kept scrupulously clean. I myself, said the lecturer, use peat moss for the bottom of the cages, and therefore have no birds with clogged feet. The cages I prefer measure 20 inches in length and 18 inches high. I arrange these in racks so that they are quite easy to take out and clean should the occasion arise.

When cleaning and renovating my cages for the breeding season, I do not put one coat of whitening on top of another year after year. Cages require a yearly disinfecting, and in doing this I wash mine out with boiling water, adding to it ammonia, turpentine, and Jeyes' fluid

Something Indispensable to Success.

To come to the birds themselves. I should advise the novice to start with ordinary birds bought from a breeder with a reputation for breeding good feeders. With these, for a season or two, he will be getting his education and a knowledge of the individual characteristics and properties of his own birds. If he means to go up as an exhibitor it is absolutely essential that he makes a study of his birds and their habits.

When the shows come on he should go to them and look intelligently at the birds exhibited, especially at those at the top, and he should not be afraid to ask older fanciers to explain any points in the birds that he does not himself understand; they will always be willing to help him, and after he has got the benefit of their hints, coupled with his own experience, he should go to a breeder who is known as having strong and healthy stock and show birds. If he places himself in the hands of one who has had more experience than himself he will do much better than by picking up a bird here and there. There are many breeders who would willingly put themselves out a great deal to help a novice who places himself unreservedly in their hands, as in a measure they would feel somewhat responsible for his success.

In making such a start it is better to get a few good birds rather than a large number of more or less inferior ones, a cock and a hen, a cock and two hens, or two cocks and two hens, according as the money will allow, will be sufficient for a beginning.

Once Good, Always Good.

If the novice has bred a good feeder or two from the ordinary stock with which he started, he should keep these, for they will come in useful later. Among the better quality birds which he has bought after his first experience he may have a hen which is excellent in herself, but yet may not be a good feeder, and in such case he will be able to make use of the feeding hens he has been wise enough to keep. I believe a hen which has once proved a good feeder will be a good feeder to the end of her days if she is only properly looked after.

When breeding operations are in progress the ambitious fancier should not be too inquisitive, but should leave the birds alone as much as possible, and in the matter of feeding he should get the best obtainable of everything; no matter the price, the best always pays in the long run.

In giving his own system of feeding, Mr. Snead said that in the winter he gave the birds the best canary seed as a staple food, and once a week, say Wednesday, he added a spoonful of summer rape. At least once a week he gave a piece of sweet apple between the wires of the cages. About the beginning of February he gave the cock birds egg-food twice a week, and more frequently by degrees until the time came for pairing up, then he gave it every day along with a teaspoonful of mixed seed.

More Haste, Less Speed.

In the making of the egg-food he crushed three arrowroot biscuits and one hard-boiled egg together, and added a pinch of maw seed. In the early part of the season, said the lecturer, I do not feed up the hens at all. I think it is best to let nature do its own work; they will come into condition in the season with the cocks singing to them. Do not pair up too soon, but wait until the hens are quite ready, then there will not be any clear eggs. The cocks may begin to feed the perch end, the wires, or their own feet, yet they may not really be in breeding condition. Wait until they begin hopping from perch to perch and flapping their wings constantly, then will be the time to pair up.

I take the eggs away as laid, but I do not put any dummy eggs in until the hen has laid her third egg. When I find that in the morning I put in two dummy eggs, then at night I return her eggs to her for sitting.

I make the nest as nearly as possible like a Finch's nest. First I put in the woollen linings, then some hay which I have rubbed in my hands until it is somewhat crushed and pliable; on top of this I place some brown cow-hair, and work the whole into shape with something hard; a hard-boiled egg will answer the purpose very nicely, but my own favourite weapon is the dumb-bell, for this makes what I think an ideal nest. Once I have started the hen sitting I do not disturb her until the time of incubation is completed, for even if the eggs are clear the hen requires the rest of the full time to become in fit and proper form for a second trial.

I do not remember ever once having found a dead chick in any of my eggs, a fact which I attribute to making the nest hard. (Here Mr. Snead handed round a nest made in the manner he had described.)

Correspondence.

New Club for Manchester.

SIR,—As the Manchester Fanciers' Central Social Club seems now to be an established fact, I would just like to point out to fanciers that in order to meet those who cannot find it convenient to come down to a Saturday night meeting, the next was fixed for Wednesday, April 28. Our sec., Mr. R. J. Metcalfe, The How, Sedgley Park, Prestwich, Manchester, will be very pleased to forward further particulars to any fanciers on application. Even teetotalers need have no hesitation about joining, as our rules are so fixed that they could have no objection to becoming members. The Editor of CAGE BIRDS was thanked at our last meeting for publishing the correspondence relating to this club.

A MEMBER.

Kettering F.A. Making a Big Move.

SIR,—As an outcome of the steady progress of the Kettering F.A. during the past four years, it has been decided to make the annual show an event worthy of the town and district, and to this end, the Victoria Hotel, a spacious building, and one admirably adapted for the purpose, has been secured. In addition to the open classes, many of which are already guaranteed, the Committee are desirous of entertaining one or more of the specialist clubs in all sections. Kettering is centrally situated on the main line of the Midland Railway, and accessible to all parts. The Association includes many well-known fanciers, has a substantial balance in the bank, and I shall be pleased to hear from club secretaries or fanciers who are willing to support us with guarantees at this, our first open show, to be held on Dec. 11th.

Classes for Cinnamon Borders.

SIR,—Although it is rather early in the season to talk about classification, yet there is nothing like being in time, therefore I would like to say a few words on behalf of Cinnamon Borders. That they do not get due consideration from most societies cannot be denied; in some cases they have a class to themselves, in others they are classed along with Greens. What is the reason for this I don't know, for it is only necessary to note the entries at shows where classes are provided for them to see that they pay their way all right. Cinnamons have come to stay, and are comparing favourably with the other varieties for type, proof of which can be had from the fact that at the three shows where they had a club medal for best Green or Cinnamon, with eight classes, Cinnamons won the medal twice. Societies who cannot see their way to go the full distance might at least keep Cinnamons separate from the Greens, and thereby earn the support and thanks of lovers of Cinnamons. Now that we have no show reports, etc., to take up our attention, I think it is opportune to bring forward discussions on the various topics of the Fancy; hence my reason for penning these few lines, which I have no doubt will meet the eyes of Border fanciers. For myself, I don't think I would rest content on a Friday night if I did not have a look over good old CAGE BIRDS.

ROBERT HOUSTON.

The Fertilization of Eggs.

SIR,—I notice that in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, correspondence is going on regarding the fertilisation of eggs. The first year I bred Canaries (four seasons ago), a hen which had not been with a cock before made a nest, and before I was aware laid her first egg. On the morning I discovered it I slipped a cock with her for a few minutes, and so on each succeeding day. She laid an egg the following day, completed a clutch of five, and hatched four young. This seems to prove that it is not too late if the shell is not completed. Being a new beginner then, I was surprised, but I did not think it might surprise the Fancy.

ARTHUR SIMONS.

The Late Mr. Easterling.

SIR,—I notice under "Obituary" in your last issue of CAGE BIRDS that our friend Easterling has passed away. I had known him for some years very intimately, and should like to say a few words on the passing of our friend.

He had a long and painful illness extending over some months, which he bore with great fortitude, and was all along hoping for a turn for the better, so that he could be amongst his friends and birds again. He will always be remembered as a successful breeder and exhibitor of Yorkshire Canaries, and will be missed by the members of the various societies that he was interested in, especially by the novices to whom he was always ready to give his advice. He has left a widow unprovided for, and the fund that was started for his benefit will be handed to her, with any further contributions from those who may wish to help in so good a cause in memory of our long respected friend.

THE MYSTERY OF "BIRD FEVER."

(Concluded from p. 219.)

Author of "The Science of Living," Manuals of Canary, Poultry, etc., Diseases, "How to Feed Canaries," etc.

SEPTIC fever is the result of putrefactive matter entering into, or being formed in the blood and poisoning it. The symptoms vary very much, the variation mainly depending upon the bodily condition of the subject when attacked, and especially upon the condition of its kidneys, and their eliminating power—that is, their power to keep the blood in a normal condition, and it may be pointed out that in a bird the subject of septic fever the kidneys are not ever in a healthy condition.

Symptoms Not Always Obvious.

The severity of the symptoms and the length of time before death takes place depend on the extent of the impurity of the blood. In some cases a bird is found dead in its cage, and its owner may not have noticed any symptoms of ill-health previous to its death, death in such case having been the result of effusion of blood on to or into the brain from a ruptured blood-vessel. The rupture would be owing to a soft condition of the coats of the blood-vessel, due to fatty degeneration, and the engorgement of blood thickened through a ferment having been set up in it by the germs of septic fever.

In some cases death is the result of embolism—that is, the plugging of a large blood-vessel by a firm clot of blood, and this also is the result of a ferment. In these cases not any symptoms of ailing may have been obvious, for they may be such as bird-keepers generally would not be likely to notice. It is a fact, but an astounding one, that cage birds may have kidneys, liver, and spleen very much enlarged, and liver and spleen full of cheesy masses of tuberculous matter, so as to have been in an incurable condition for certainly more than a month, and yet be in full song the day previous to death.

How to Detect Danger.

Symptoms which mostly escape notice are to be detected in the excrement from the ailing birds. The most serious is an excess of urea; more especially when it is discoloured. The excrement should be fairly white, but not a tainted white, and it should be rather solid; a fluid condition is evidence of seriously diseased kidneys. In some cases the excrement is of a greenish colour, the result of an excess of bilious matter, and this is generally through the kidneys failing to rid the blood of waste matter which has acted as an irritant in the liver and has caused an excess of bilious matter to be discharged into the bowel. In some cases this may be due to some irritant in the diet, for it may be pointed out that all substances swallowed by a bird, including mineral matter, such as shell, etc., may, when in minute fragments, enter the blood in great excess, so as to be very prejudicial to the health. In some cases slimy mucus may be detected in the excrement, and this is the result of irritant action on the mucous membrane lining the bowel, which in most cases may be irritant bilious matter discharged into the bowel from the liver, due to the kidneys being in an unhealthy condition. In all cases when there is greenish-coloured excrement passed the birds are predisposed to become the subjects of septic fever.

When suffering from septic fever the plumage is usually standing more or less away from the body, a condition known amongst fanciers as "heapy." The eyes are dull, and the subject has a sleepy appearance, but will, as it were, occasionally brighten up and go to its seed, and pick it over, eating but little. In some cases a subject of septic fever is entirely "off its feed," but will usually be frequently drinking, and may live on in this condition for a considerable time. In very severe cases there is stupour and laboured breathing, the body heaving considerably with every breath taken in, and more especially when the lungs are inflamed, which is always the case in acute septic poisoning of the blood.

Post Mortem Revelations.

In birds which have died of septic fever the post-mortem appearances vary to a considerable extent, depending upon the severity of the attack, but in all cases the lungs are in a congested, or inflamed condition, usually the latter, and septic inflammation of the lung is in some cases very contagious amongst birds predisposed to be attacked. The liver is usually severely congested in acute cases, and gorged with very dark-coloured and thickened blood, and in some cases there is pericardial dropsy—that is, the pericardium—heartpurse contains serous effusion, the result of inflammation set up by the germs of the disease, or blood poison. In all cases the blood-vessels on the brain are gorged with dark-coloured blood, and in some cases there is effusion of blood on to the brain and under the cranial bones.

When making a post-mortem examination it is advisable to begin with the head, skinning the cranium to ascertain its condition, then taking off the top of the head to ascertain the condition of the brain. In some the thin bone over the brain is discoloured, and of a yellowish tint in parts, and this is evidence of old-standing disease. The kidneys are usually enlarged, and occasionally of a greyish colour; in other cases, very dark coloured. In all cases portions of the mucous membrane lining the bowel will be found to be inflamed, but sometimes the inflammation is masked by bile staining, or the gall bladder gorged with bile.

An Old Friend Seeks Mr. Currah's Address.

Sir,—After having travelled over Canada since leaving Newcastle, I have landed here, at "Tarara," 3, Tierman St., Footscray, Melbourne, Australia, and will be for some two years at least. I should be glad if Mr. Currah, late of Gosforth, Newcastle-on-Tyne, who came to Australia, would let me know his address so that we may renew our old friendship. I still receive and enjoy Cage Birds although I have not a birdy friend to care for.

Future of the Welsh National Cage Bird Society.

Sir,—May I make a special appeal through the columns of your valuable paper to all fanciers in Wales and Monmouthshire to attend a meeting of the Welsh National C.B.S., to be held at the Carlton Hotel, Queen Street, Cardiff, on Monday next, April 26, at 7 sharp? The balance-sheet of the last show will be presented, and plans for the future of the society will also be fully discussed. All cage-bird men are heartily invited to take part in what ought to be a big gathering of Welsh fanciers determined to make the next National show a larger and even greater success than 1915.

Birds in the Firing Line.

Sir,—Being a bird-keeper when in England I thought a line from the front about birds I have seen near the firing line would be of interest to readers of Cage Birds. I have often heard, and I think I have read, that birds won't stop where shooting is going on. Now, Mr. Editor, that is not so, because on the day we were last in the trenches I saw for myself scores of Sparrows, about two dozen Yellowhammers, and about half a dozen Magpies, well within 200 yards of the British trenches; certainly it was in a village, but on the afternoon of which I am writing the Germans dropped no less than a dozen shells at the village. I dare not say what part of the line we were fighting in, but if you knew you would agree with me that it is a hot shop. The following I did not see, personally, but I can stand bail for the word of the friend who told me of it:—Between the English and German trenches (at this point anything from 300 to 400 yards) he saw in the early morning of March 30, a Skylark rise in full song. On April 4, within two miles of the trenches, I myself found and saw a Wren building her nest. If I was asked who were the least concerned about the war I would certainly say "Birds." Wishing you and Cage Birds every success.

Border Fancies at the Horticultural Hall.

Sir,—It was not my intention to write again upon the Border Fancies at the last L.C.B.A. show, but as fanciers appear to be still taking an interest in the matter, may I make an appeal to those gentlemen who conversed with Mr. Jenkins about the colour question to come forward and tell us what the judge did tell them? Mr. J. has denied that any of the winners were under discussion. Surely those fanciers who have privately "stated their case" will, for the good of our hobby, either agree with what the judge now says, or be able to contradict him. The question as to whether it is common to find birds in the cards having been unfairly coloured I will leave to abler pens than mine to discuss. I am obliged to Mr. Madagan for his remarks about my yellow hen at Cardiff. A novice, of course, seldom puts a bird down like a champion, and I accept the friendly observations Mr. M. makes in the spirit I am sure they are made.

When Judges Disagree.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—Yet another Englishman as proud of his own name as he is of the true parentage of "White Rose," I write just to correct an error in Mr. J. W. Saywell's letter. "White Rose" was not 1st at Liverpool; unfortunately he knocked the flight feathers out of one wing travelling from Oxford show, where he stood 1st and sp. under Mr. J. Robson the day before Liverpool. Mr. Chas. Houlton awarded "White Rose" first at Manchester in a very strong class of Any Variety Hybrid, including Canary-Bullfinch. As to the other letter, as I have said before, I absolutely ignore nondescripts.

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve It.

Sir,—One of the hardest points to breed out of the Crest or Lancashire cross in Norwich is the large beak and long head. It may be broad, but if it is long it gives them an ugly appearance. I was much interested in the article, "How Winning Norwich are Bred," but there are more types of Tumbler Pigeons than of Norwich Canaries; if you take the long-faced black, or black mottle, you have the correct type of the modern Plainhead Norwich, that is in my humble opinion.

J. Bastock.

Sir,—We are still waiting to hear how to improve the Norwich Plainhead, as so far we have only heard what one fancier thinks of another fancier, and not what he thinks of his type of bird. If they only said what they thought of his birds they have seen on the show bench, we might learn a bit by reading between the lines. We may say we are not the Cardiff gentlemen who want to put a "fiver" on Mr. Spillman, but we would like to tell Mr. Bastock that Mr. Allsopp need not go out of Cardiff for a bet like this, as we are quite prepared to take him on with the same conditions, either with stock birds or young birds, as we won the Cardiff challenge cup this last season with our Norwich. We may say we spent two days and nights as watchmen at the Welsh National Show, and we wondered what Mr. Allsopp had seen in some of his winners. Now we know; it seems he never got past the beaks of some.

James and Wells.

Sir,—Mr. J. Bastock reminds me of an old song entitled "And his little wife was with him all the time," for wherever I happen to be in correspondence there he may be found also, a peaceful nomad by choice I suppose; whereas I seem to be at the mercy of any bold, bad buccaneer, seeking a victim. In reply to his challenge if he will refer to my letter in reply to Mr. W. Spillman, he will gather that beneath that gentleman's "challenge," there is more than meets the eye, and because of this a special charm for me exists, not to be found in his own challenge. However in the event of my being able to compel my western critic to "toe the line" I promise Mr. Bastock the door shall be left sufficiently ajar for him to squeeze through with "his little lot," or other fanciers "fond of a sporting match." Meanwhile watch the signs in the west.

In reply to Mr. W. Spillman, I agree that "actions speak louder than words." A superficial review of his own, from the moment when he entered into this correspondence will amply confirm the truth of that old proverb. Inasmuch as my critic persistently shirks the points at issue, and intrudes insidious observations, I can only refer him to the opening passages of my letter appearing beneath his own, and trust that we may yet obtain the benefit of his 25 years' experience, or that he will at least in justice to myself grant me permission to divulge the correspondence I received from him during October, 1913, which I still hold, for without such readers will never appreciate his present attitude towards myself. Which alternative will he choose, and what of his "challenge"?

E. W. Allsopp.

More Black Canaries.

Further Success in New Zealand.

Sir,—On behalf of Mrs. Martin, New Zealand, may I inform H. C. Brooks and other fanciers who were interested in Mrs. Martin's account published in Cage Birds of the breeding of the first Black Canary, that arrangements were being made to send this bird to England just as the war started, and were then cancelled, as the risks were too great at that time. It was intended to show this Black Canary at the 1915 Palace show, if it had been held. I have to-day received a letter from Mrs. Martin informing me that she has succeeded in breeding more Black Canaries, and that she is waiting a favourable opportunity to send them over here; they will be exhibited at some of our shows.

Club Reports.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting on April 15. Agree to hold our F.F. show on July 3, and annual show Nov. 27. Sec. was instructed to write to certain gentlemen, get their terms for judging, and lay them before the next meeting. Messrs. Bilcland, Old Kilpatrick, and Sim, Dalmuir, were elected members. Meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chair.—Wm. Kane, Sec.

SOUTH MOOR SOCIAL CLUB.

Meeting, April 11, Mr. Taylor chair, and a good turn up of members. Decided to let Rule 4 stand. Balance-sheet from the four clubs was read and was found very satisfactory. Carried that the same deputation stand for next year; we are making our schedule at next meeting May 11, so let us have a strong meeting.—Geo. Lane, Sec.

CRYSTAL PALACE & PENGE C.B.S

Meeting Alexandra Hotel, Penge, April 14. Chairman, Mr. Foxen, gave a detailed account of how he managed his own Yorks, which was greatly appreciated by all, and many of us were wiser for the information given. Then he undertook the answering of questions, which he did in a most business-like manner. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Last and seconded by Mr. Powell. —W. D. Fryett, Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

Adjourned annual general meeting, Mr. R. L. Crisp chair. Letters read from Mr. Hazell and Mr. Runchman. Messrs. Watcham and Johnson were elected joint secs. and all correspondence should be addressed to 192, Mare-street, Hackney. Mr. Silver was elected on committee in place of Mr. Johnson, and Mr. F. Knight was elected vice-president of the association as a mark of appreciation for past services. Auditors for 1915, Messrs. Sayer and Cook.—A. Wallington

EAST HAM F.S.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting, April 12, Parish Hall, Church Road, Mr. Bartlett chair, and a good attendance. An egg food-making competition was held, and Mr. W. East was the winner, Mr. T. Collinge coming second. Mr. W. F. Taylor judged. After he had given his reasons for placing the awards, he gave a demonstration of his own way of making egg food. A number of questions were asked and answered, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Taylor terminated a pleasant evening.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

SPRINGBURN, POSSIL PK. C.B.S.

Meeting, April 14, Reid Hall, Mr. A. Sloan chair. Mr. Jamieson judged the exhibits. Brit. Goldf.: 1, T. Fraser; 2, 4, J. Fyfe; 3, spl, D. F. Webster. Bullf.: 1, J. Anderson. Greenf.: 1, T. Mr. Pinnock is presenting a rose bowl for best young birds, closed ring, at annual show. Vote of thanks to chairman and judge terminated the meeting.—J. Waugh, Sec. and Treas.

SOUTH WALES R.C.C.

Very successful meeting at headquarters, April 13, with an excellent muster, Mr. W. Evans chair. Unanimously decided to hold our show on Dec. 15 and 16. Secs. please note to avoid clashing. Also decided that Sec. make a special appeal to all Welsh Roller fanciers to give us their support; we think it their duty to support the only Roller society in Wales. The Sec. would be pleased to receive the names of any fanciers wishing to join in with us. Next meeting April 27; business important. John Welch, Hon. Sec., 118, Swansea-rd., Llanelly.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

A general meeting will be held at headquarters, April 26, to consider the club's programme for next show season, and it is hoped that all members who can will make a special effort to be present. I shall also be pleased to hear from the Provincial Committee their views upon specials, patronage, etc. Mr. H. C. Humphries is offering two specials for closed ring birds, details to be decided by committee. Members please note, subs. are now due and also send me their advts. for the new manuals.—Geo. Burton, Hon. Sec.

WALLSEND C.B.A.

General meeting, April 14, Station Hotel, Mr. J. Heslop presiding over a large attendance. New members elected: Messrs. T. Render, J. Hunter, W. Affleck, A. Affleck (Byker), W. Simpson, C. Wake (Walker), White, T. Messenger, J. Muse (Wallsend), M. Potts (Heaton), E. Malia, G. Purvis (Newcastle), G. Brown (Willington Quay), G. Jackson (New York, Northumberland). We have elected three well-known judges for our annual show: Messrs. G. Dobinson (Seaton Delaval), W. Thomson (Newton Grange), Borders; and C. Waters (Sunderland), British. Nominated judges for N.F. show, Mr. Crawhall (Newcastle), Mr. Smith (South Shields). Two of our members have joined the Army; it was decided to retain them as members free of all subs., and it was hoped that they would be back before the show season came around. Members note, next meeting classification for N.F. show, so please turn up and get the classes you want. A vote of thanks to chair ended a very pleasant meeting. New members heartily invited. —G. Greenwell, Sec.

BEAMISH C.B.S.

Meeting Apr. 17, Mr. S. Elliot chair, with a good attendance. Mr. R. S. Bewick was elected judge for annual show, Oct. 23. Mr. Jones and Mr. W. Ward were elected members. We would like to see a good number of members at our next meeting to form a scheme to get a trophy for for best young bird bred 1915, as our young bird cup has been won outright by Mr. Coates at our last annual show.—J. H. Elliot, Sec.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY.

Meeting Apr. 14, at headquarters, Mr. Hillman in chair, with a fair attendance. Chief business, annual F.F. show. Three new members were proposed. After society business Mr. J. S. Jones gave a lecture on Yorkshires, which proved very interesting, and at the end a hearty vote of thanks was given the lecturer. Mr. Greeves promised to give a lecture next meeting, Apr. 26, on Norwich. Members please attend, as we shall learn something. Subs. are overdue.—J. S. Jones, Hon. Sec. (The lecture will appear in an early issue.—Editor C.B.)

LEITH O.S.

Meeting April 19, Liberal Club Hall, President (Mr. James Lumsden) chair. Sec. reported he had secured the same Hall as last year for Annual Show, Nov. 13. Judges: Scotch Fancy, Mr. A. Hamilton, Caldercruix; and Mr. J. Pringle, Selkirk; Nor., Mr. Wm. Grewar, Lochgelly; Borders, Mr. J. Hamilton, Eckbank, and Mr. Wm. Thomson, Newtongrange; Brit., Mr. J. Sykes, Musselburgh. Mr. G. W. Currie, M.P., has kindly consented to become a patron of the Society. Annual ramble fixed for May 15. New members admitted: Bernard Rice, Charles Watt, and James Starmont. Next meeting May 8, when arrangements will be made for ramble.—G. W. Brown, Sec.

BURNHOPE C.B.S.

I would like to appeal to the members for better attendance at our meetings, as it is very disheartening to call meetings and then not enough members turn up to be able to get any business done. It would be a pity to see the society fall through, as it is well supported by donations which enabled us to pay 9s. per class at our last members' show, February 13, and we have a good many new members just starting the Fancy. So if members would attend the meetings we may be able to get something up for their benefit and encouragement. We have left the date of show and judges over till next meeting, when I would like to see a good turn-up.—J. W. Robson, Sec.

GREENOCK, PORT GLASGOW AND GOUROCK O.S.

Meeting, Club Room, Shepherds' Hall, Apr. 7, Mr. D. Molloy, president, chair, with a good attendance. Mr. Roddin gave auditors' report, showing a balance in hand of £4 10s., which was considered satisfactory. Mr. Molloy suggested that we have lectures and hand-washing exhibitions on an early date for the benefit of members, and Messrs. Allison and Campbell, Gourock, intimated their willingness to get an experienced fancier to come to next meeting and give a demonstration on washing, when it is hoped there will be a large attendance. New members proposed. Messrs. H. Webster, J. McAleese, E. Hunt, J. Laird. Next meeting, May 5. —J. Dooley, Sec.

LONDON AND P.O.S.

Meeting at headquarters, Apr. 15, Mr. J. Hodder chair, with a lecture by Mr. J. Robson, on the general management of the birdroom. He spoke of cages, how and when best to pair up, feeding, egg-food preparation, treatment of young, colour feeding, and showing. He gave the fanciers present several fresh ideas and hints, in fact laid before them his whole long experience in breeding and general management. A great many questions were asked, which the lecturer answered to everyone's satisfaction. A vote of thanks to Mr. Robson brought a most interesting evening to a close. We had a splendid muster of members and friends, and I was pleased to notice Mr. Loach, of Wolverhampton, present; if other provincial members happen to be in London on a meeting night, I shall be pleased to welcome them if they will just drop me a line. At next meeting on Thursday, May 20, Mr. Allen Silver is lecturing on Foreign Birds; fanciers and friends welcome.—H. L. Huggins, hon. sec., 129, Myddleton Road., Bowes Park, N.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting, Marlboro' Hotel, Apl. 14, with a splendid gathering, Mr. Willmott in the chair, supported by Vice-Chairman Hughes and full committee. New member elected, making six this season. Decided to ask Mr. Roe to judge the first young bird show and Mr. Russell the July show, also Mr. Jefferies to give his lecture on British birds at the May meeting; members please note we shall commence the meetings at 8 while these important lectures and debates are on. It is encouraging to all to find such good attendances considering the society is in the midst of the armaments and war material factories. A very interesting and instructive lecture was given by Mr. Burke on the breeding and rearing of the Yorkshire Canary, amongst the very many useful items in which was his statement that he had no egg-binding. He believed and proved this to be due to the use of a piece of bacon fat cut into pieces the size of a lump of sugar and fixed in the bars for the hen to peck at. A useful food in place of egg was oatmeal slightly baked in the oven, well ground Indian meal, and some good quality of biscuit mixed with it; soaked rape dried and well strained should be put into this, and the whole kept in a jar; the rape helps to keep same just moist. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Burke closed another very enjoyable evening.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SITTING AND FEEDERS (H. S.).—(1) Yes, Yorkshire hens hatched in one year usually breed and sit the following year, and in the main there is no objection to allowing them to do so, though in certain special cases it may be the wiser course to keep them over a year before allowing them to breed. But the usual thing is to mate them up and breed with them in the year following their birth. (2) "Feeding hens" are of no special breed, or even strain, but are just any kind of hen Canary that can be trusted to feed and bring up a brood of young until they are able to do for themselves. As a rule, common or nondescript hens are the best and most reliable for the purpose, but they cannot all be trusted implicitly any more than the better class breeds.

CASUAL LAYING (Crest).—(1) The hen is not in proper breeding condition, and the dandelion would not necessarily affect the laying, though in the case of weakly hens, which are very susceptible to laying troubles, this green food is certainly better avoided. Leave the birds together, and treat in the usual way, giving a small teaspoonful of egg-food to the pair three times a week, and a similar quantity of mixed seeds on the intervening days, and go on giving a little dandelion daily until the hen has completed a normal clutch, which she probably will do in the course of two or three weeks. You may give every day a small stool of the plant, cut off just below the surface of the ground. You might have put the two eggs under another hen with a small clutch which was about sitting at that time, but I am afraid it is too late for that now. (2) Keeping the hen with the cock will certainly tend to induce attempts at nesting, whether you wish her to do so or not. You can do nothing at all to prevent at least the laying of eggs under such circumstances. To help to avert any ill-effects give the pair a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for three consecutive days, and after this give instead six drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of steel, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week or fortnight afterwards to tone the hen up a bit. You would do well to allow only one brood this season.

LOSING VITALITY (Very Anxious).—The cock is probably rather young—possibly a late-bred one last season—and not yet in very good breeding condition. In this case he will improve a lot in the next week or two, and will doubtless be good for at least one full brood of young. You should give the pair a small teaspoonful of egg-food with about half the quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. Also give a small growing stool of freshly-gathered dandelion each day. Continue this treatment for a month, or until the hen has gone to nest and laid her clutch of eggs. Beyond this you can only exercise patience.

HEN EATING OFF FEET (W. T. J., Wednesbury).—It is not possible to say definitely what is the cause of hens eating off the feet of young in the nest. In some cases it is doubtless due to accident; but in others to a perverted appetite or cannibalistic tendencies in the parent. But that is all speculation and theory, which does not help much. There is no real cure that I know of, though a small piece of rind of fat boiled bacon fastened on the end of a perch for the hen to peck at is said to act as a preventive in some cases. However that may be, the best and most rational preventive, if the young are valuable, is to promptly remove them to a more natural and careful hen to be fed and reared.

A BIG START (T. F.).—I am afraid you made a mistake in starting at the very beginning with 20 pairs. You would have done much better had you begun with three or four pairs for this year and thereby gained a little practical experience which would have done you good service next season, when you might have made a bigger plunge. Anyway, with the next rounds try removing the cock from those hens which would not feed the last broods when the cock was with them, leaving the hens to hatch and rear the young by themselves. Remove him on the evening of the third day when you are returning the eggs for the hen to commence sitting. Do not use apple now as a substitute for green-food. After commencing to sit, leave the hens as much as possible to themselves, and interfere with them and the nests as little as you possibly can. Be rather sparing in the use of hemp whilst the hens are sitting and for the first fortnight after the young are hatched, and avoid dandelion as a green food for those hens which have shown themselves poor feeders with the last broods. Give a little crisp young lettuce, or the tender tips of young groundsel with the flower buds on the third day after the young are hatched, and continue this twice daily thereafter. If the hens show signs of slackness in attending to the young, at once offer a bath in which you have dissolved sufficient common salt to make it to taste faintly saline, and you may also offer a little soaked rape seed in addition to the usual egg food. With these suggestions, and the general routine of management given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," you will, I think, succeed better with the next round of nests. But remember that non-interference will probably be the greatest factor in achieving success.

NOT SITTING (New Beginner).—Sorry, but I cannot explain why it is that a hen will not sit after building a nest and laying seven eggs, except that I should imagine it was sheer cussedness on her part. You cannot reason with such creatures, and can do nothing at all to compel such a hen to sit if she does not want to do so. Did you remove the eggs as laid, and not keep a dummy one in the nest whilst the clutch was being laid? This is sometimes responsible for a hen refusing to sit. Or is it likely that you have two hens paired?

GOING BLIND (W. M.).—I am sorry to have to say that no treatment will be of the slightest avail. The bird is suffering from cataract, for which there is no remedy. If you cage it alone, it will live happily enough in its way for the full average length of time, and, if a cock, will sing freely enough after a time, but it is useless worrying it with treatment which will do it no good at all.

GETTING HER RIGHT (Enquirer).—It would be a far better thing to reject the bird as a stock bird than to try to patch her up for breeding, seeing that she is obviously so weak in stamina. It is folly to breed with birds that require patching up for the purpose. Still, you may give her a small teaspoonful of egg food or any good substitute with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it every third day for two or three weeks, and on the intervening days give first a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame seed, and next half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, millet and linseed. For green food give a small growing stool of dandelion daily, gathered fresh each day, with blossoms and seed heads altogether. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and after this give six drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of steel, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another week.

EGG SUBSTITUTE (Novice, R. C. D.).—Whilst not going so far as to say that the food you mention is quite as good as the usual egg and bread or biscuit food, I may say that it is a good substitute, and useful and wholesome for ordinary use out of the breeding season, and has also been used successfully as a complete substitute for egg food in the rearing of young. In my opinion, when used for rearing young, a rather greater supply of green food is advisable to keep the bowels in regular order.

PERISHED WITH COLD (Sweating).—A hen that behaves in the way yours has done can hardly be termed a "sweating hen." As this is her first nest, I think it is very likely that she will do better and rear her young all right in the future, so that no special treatment is really necessary. Still, if she is a valuable hen, it would be a wise course to provide for any contingency by having a pair of good feeders available to take over the duties of rearing the next brood, or broods, if necessary. You do not say whether you removed the cock when she began to sit last time, but if you did so, try leaving him with her next time; on the other hand, if he was not removed last time, try removing him this time, taking him away on the evening of the third day when you are returning the eggs for the hen to commence sitting. If she appears to neglect her duties when the young are hatched next time, offer in addition to the usual egg food a little soaked rape in a separate vessel and give a small spray of crisp young groundsel or lettuce freshly gathered three or four times a day from the first.

ROLLERS FOR PLEASURE (H. A.).—Personally, I have no doubt the bird you specially refer to is a hen, and I feel equally convinced the person referred to would gladly remedy what is probably only an excusable error had you returned the bird to him for inspection with a polite note drawing his attention to the matter. As regards the selection of a trio of birds, I do not think you could do better than place yourself in the hands of the private breeder you name, explain your aims to him, name the price you are prepared to pay and the quality of song you would like, and leave the selection to him. You might ask for a yellow cock, lightly variegated, or, if you prefer a green, you may have either a self or broken yellow-green, and two buff hens to match. But even this it would perhaps be best to leave to the breeder, who knows the pedigree of the birds and their special bent in the breeding cage. It is certainly late now to expect untried birds, and perhaps it would be best to wait a little, until, at least, the first rounds were out of the nests.

LAYING AND NOT NESTING (King's Lynn).—The birds were clearly not in breeding condition when you put them together, and this is the reason they have not made any real attempts at nesting. Now that the season is more advanced, they should soon begin to show signs of more serious intent. To expedite matters, give to the pair every second day, in addition to the staple diet, a small teaspoonful of egg food with half the quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats. Give a freshly gathered stool of dandelion, with blossoms and seed heads daily; cut off root just below the surface of ground, and give to the birds entire. This will suffice to bring them into condition at this season if they are really fit subjects for breeding stock.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

MULE BREEDING (Would be Breeder). All your arrangements appear to be quite satisfactory. If you value the young Canaries that the hens are rearing, I would advise you to get them well out of hand before starting the hens nesting again, or they may neglect to feed them. (2) No, do not place the cock Canary in the middle compartment of the cage; you will require this to shut the Goldie off from the hens occasionally. For instance, if you are expecting a hen to lay, do not leave him with her overnight, but wait until she has laid and you have removed the egg before running him with her again; some Goldies destroy the eggs on sight, and it is as well to be on the safe side. (3) Your feeding appears to be right, although I rather fancy you are a bit too liberal with egg food for the Goldie; do not overdo it, it is a mistake to force them too much. One of our books on Mule breeding would be useful to you just now.

AN AILING MOOR HEN (A. H., Indge).—It is rather unfortunate that you know so little about the history of your Moorhen. If the bird was caught in the condition you mention, I am very doubtful if you will ever get it right again. In a state of nature it must have had the insects, wild food, etc., that is natural to the species, and artificial food would only increase the malady. If, on the other hand, it was in good condition when caught, it is very likely that the treatment since has been the cause of the trouble. Your feeding now appears to be the best that can be managed for the bird in captivity, and I would suggest that you continue to feed him in the same way for another fortnight or three weeks. If at the end of that period you see no improvement you had better have him painlessly destroyed. The posture when the bird is at rest is very much like that of growing chickens when they suffer from cramp and leg weakness; try rubbing daily with embrocation, and give the bird soft dry material, such as moss or peat litter, to rest on.

THRUSH WITH INJURY (F. and F.).—There cannot be very much the matter with your Thrush, as he is still in song. In all wild creatures injuries are quickly repaired, and I would advise you to leave him alone, feeding upon nutritious but not stimulating food, mix a little extra scraped raw carrot or green stuff with his usual food, but if you find that he does not improve you had better catch him and place him in a cage and dress the wound, as you did before. (2) I do not think he requires any medical treatment; as a rule colds in birds are not of long standing, they either prove fatal or the bird makes a speedy recovery.

THRUSH WITH FIT (J. Y.).—You have omitted to send your name and address with your query, which is contrary to our rules; kindly send it on a postcard. The cause of the fits that your bird is suffering from is improper treatment. Discontinue the Lark food, and procure a pound of good insectile food as used for Nightingales and small Warblers, feed him upon this for a time, mixing with it scraped raw carrot, chopped watercress, or lettuce, and sometimes boiled potatoes. When he has recovered you can occasionally give other food for a change, such as soaked chicken meal, or a good brand of Thrush food. Before making the change in diet, give as much Glauber Salts as will cover a shilling dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of water for one day only, repeating two days later. Let him bathe frequently, giving the bath in the early part of the day and place him in the most roomy cage you have

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

FEATHER EATING (T. Smith.).—It is most probably the milk sop which has occasioned the trouble, which will entail much patience and perseverance to eradicate; in fact, once the vice has been indulged in to any extent it is seldom entirely given up. Stop the milk sop, and in addition to the seed mixture supply ripe fruit (sweet apple, banana, etc.), nuts, plain biscuit and plain cake; also keep cuttlebone, grit and pieces of wood continually in the cage. If it sulks for the sop, then moisten a stale crust, after it has been sprinkled with sugar, with chemical food and water, and dust it with flour of sulphur. Give it one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day for a month, and on the intervening days lightly colour the water with chemical food. Spray it every other day with a tepid quassia solution, keeping the bird strictly out of draught till dry. As soon as the weather becomes really warm put it out of doors for several hours daily in some unexposed position. Keep the bird where it will have plenty of company, give it a piece of a branch, cotton reels, etc., to play with, and keep it occupied. You must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps or any kind of animal food. Report progress a month hence. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you in the general treatment of your bird.

GREY PARROT (L. Clark).—Give the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts—for use take half a teaspoonful to one ounce of water, this mixture to form the drinking water for the time being; you must not use a metal drinker. The bowels must be kept moving quite freely, giving occasional doses of Dinneford's magnesia to secure this, but the voidings should not be allowed to remain watery loose. Give ten drops of cod liver oil emulsion daily on a crust, piece of cake, or anything absorptive the bird will eat. The bird must be kept warm, this will do more than the drugs. Also keep it out of the way of cold winds and all draught. You do not state how you are feeding it; the dietary should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain cake, biscuits and stale dry crusts. Cuttlebone, grit and pieces of wood should continually be in the cage. If there should be anything in the nature of a fit you must write again at once. Once or twice a day you could give it a few sips of the following as a stimulant: One dessert spoonful of boiling water, half teaspoonful of condensed milk, and five drops of brandy; stir well together and allow to cool. Report progress in a couple of weeks.

CONGO PARROT ILL (Heard). Warmth will do this bird more good than any other treatment, and you should let him have his bath as usual unless the weather is really cold the water should be tepid. Keep the bowels moving quite freely; give the fluid magnesia sufficiently often to secure this, but the voidings must not be watery-loose. Give a few sips of the following to drink at intervals during the day one dessert spoonful of boiling water, half teaspoonful Nestle's milk and five drops of brandy; stir well together and allow to cool. All the items of diet you name it can have, and give ten drops cod liver oil emulsion daily on a piece of cake or anything similar that the bird will eat. The porridge will not hurt him, and you could give the cod liver oil emulsion in that. You might put a little honey and borax in its mouth, not much at a time, twice daily; you can easily do this from the end of a small stick, but the stick must be well cleansed each time after use. Keep the cage fairly near the fire and where it will be quite out of the way of cold winds or draught. When not giving the magnesia, half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates should be put in the drinking water. You had better report progress after ten days of above treatment.

BUDGERIGARS (Griffiths).—It is not the preparing of the husk that has worn the bird's bill away, there is some other reason for this. It all depends upon the extent and the nature of the injury; if the bird is eating well it is a matter of observation to ascertain this. If the injury affects her adversely to any extent she will not trouble about the nest. If the injury is as extensive as your letter implies it would be better to painlessly destroy it and get another hen. Of course, in time the beak may be renewed, and if you have another cage or enclosure where it will be out of sight of the cock, you may give it a trial. Note, two eggs are but part of the clutch, 5 to 7 are the usual clutch, and if no more are laid by the time you get this reply you can safely assume that the injury has thrown her out of breeding condition, and it will be well either to isolate her or kill her and get another mate for your bird. In the latter case, the eggs, of course, should be removed from the husks. There is plenty of time to make a start yet, as Budgies go on breeding right up to the moult.

BUDGERIGARS (Ruth).—Three pairs should do well in your cage, but as soon as they settle down to nesting all young will have to be promptly removed as soon as they are able to fend for themselves, as your cage only supplies accommodation for the breeding pairs. Give them from now onwards as much flowering and seeding grass as they will eat, also a slice of sweet apple to nibble at, and a leaf of lettuce occasionally after cutting out the fleshy central stem. You will, I am afraid, have to exercise your patience a little; under the conditions of cage-life they do not settle down to nesting as quickly as when enjoying the liberty of an aviary. Nevertheless, they have been bred frequently in roomy cages, and your birds will ultimately settle down and delight you with some young ones. You might also give about a table spoonful of oats twice a week.

INDIAN PARROT (Pollie).—Give this bird one tea-poonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days lightly colour the water with chemical food, but you must not use a metal drinker while supplying the above, which should be continued for some time. If you can induce the bird to take it, slightly moisten with tepid water a piece of plain cake, biscuit, or stale crust (whichever the bird fancies best) and dust it with flowers of sulphur, give this daily for a time. Give a seed mixture as follows: One quart each canary, white millet, and oats, one pint each wheat, hemp, sunflower, and shelled pea-nuts, well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Supply some ripe fruit daily, and keep cuttlebone, grit, and a piece of wood continually in the cage.

WEST AFRICAN GREY (F. C. L. D.).—Your treatment reads quite good, and I take it the bird is only a little out of order. I would change the seed mixture, procure a quart each of the following, and well mix them together: Canary, white millet, hemp, oats, wheat, sunflower and shelled pea or monkey nuts; before mixing add a few chillies; also try and induce it to take some ripe fruit daily—apple, banana, or any kind it fancies. As a corrective give one tea-spoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days lightly colour the water with chemical food—you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Spray the bird twice a week with a tepid quassia solution; this will help to make the plumage distasteful. Treat as above for at least a month, then report progress. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager, would help you in the care of your bird.

AVADAVATS! Avadavats are very charming little birds, but they need care. The "Nutshell" booklet, "Avadavats," contains full information on the management of these birds. You cannot do better than have a copy by you, and we shall be pleased to forward same upon receipt of 2½d. Write, The Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

ONE talking Yellow-crested Cockatoo, one Greater Vasa Parrot, one Praslin Parrot, two male Eclectus, one finger-tame small Java Cockatoo, one pair Rosellas, etc.; also implements of savage warfare, gongs, curious masks, ivory carvings, old china, shells, etc.: Albert Edward Jamrach, 180, St. George-st., East.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published).

GREEN Amazon Parrot, exceptionally handsome, clean bird, speaks distinctly as any Grey, says fully 200 words, many long sentences, whistles "Oh, Dear," "Pop Goes," sings "Boy Blue," "Mary, etc.," perches on finger and talks to you, tame as a kitten, great pet, 4 years old, a really clever, healthy, amusing bird, £3 15/-; exchange jewellery, heard talking, or sent approval before payment: E. Grindley, Houghton-st., Liverpool. (252)

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

ADVERTISEMENT CHARGES.

6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.
Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2. END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION. The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must lie borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

Not Singing

AND IN THE SOFT MOULT. WANTED A TRIAL. We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Special notice to all bird fanciers. If you have any birds you are relying upon for the coming breeding season that are not singing, or have gone into the soft moult, we guarantee you a perfect cure; Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest medicine ever introduced for getting birds in song and into breeding condition. They are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg-binding, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, sold in 7d., 1/1 and 2/- bottles. A trial order will convince you of the wonderful results obtained from this medicine. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds; also in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility and for birds that are run down, or in slack feather, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo, in 7d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is absolutely unequalled for giving new life and vigour to the birds, and for producing that smart tight appearance of the plumage so much desired by all fanciers. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6; the 1/1 bottles are treble the 7d. size. All medicines are post paid, per return at our risk. Also four valuable food recipes, how to feed the Lark, Linnet, Roller, Thrush, and Blackbird for health and song given free to all purchasers of our medicines. TO CREST BREEDERS

Having bought the entire stock of a well-known breeder, I am offering exceptional value in this variety. Every bird is for sale. The stock consists of a large number of Crested cocks. These are large birds, very well feathered, with good heavy crests, reaching in some cases to end of beak. There are also some good Crested hens, also some very massive crestbred cocks and hens. I am offering these birds at following prices, cocks or hens, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- each. Every bird is worth double. I will send on approval to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, and will guarantee absolute satisfaction to everyone: Joe Thomas, Ambler Thorn, Halifax: over 35 years same address.

Airfield House, Andersonstown, Belfast, April 21, 1915.—Birds arrived all right. Just what I wanted.—M. J. Caffrey to Joe Thomas.

3, Cowbridge Rd., Ely, Cambs., April 22, 1915.—Birds arrived safely last night. They are a fine pair, and I am obliged by your prompt attention and dispatch.—W. H. Bowen to Joe Thomas.

Conour, S.O., Inverness.—The Norwich hen arrived safe this evening. I am very well pleased with it, and if it does half as well as the one I got from you last season I shall be satisfied. It was most trustworthy and the best feeder I have ever seen.—J. Weston to Joe Thomas.

The above are not selected examples, they are simply taken at random from hundreds that have been received during the last few weeks. Every post brings me letters from satisfied customers, and only considerations of space prevent me from printing scores weekly... Please remember this, however: I guarantee the same absolute satisfaction to every customer.

ROLLERS, MULES, CRESTS, BORDER FANCIES, &c.

British Rollers, in full rolling song, will please anyone, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Hens same pure strain, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-. Matched Pairs, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- (see my advt. under Rollers).

Mules.—Goldfinch Mule cocks, in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.—Matched breeding pairs, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- per pair. Single birds (Cocks or Hens) at proportionate prices. (See my advt. under Crests.)

MULING HENS.—Large, healthy, Sib.-bred Muling Hens, in perfect condition, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. These I can specially recommend to Mule breeders.

BORDER FANCIES.—Grand, smart, typical birds, real "Wee Gems," full of life and vigour, and bred from well-known winning strains. Cocks, in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/- each. Hens, in perfect health and condition, 3/-, 3/6 4/-, 5/-, 7/6 each. Matched breeding Pairs, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per pair.

SONGSTERS! SONGSTERS!! SONGSTERS!!!—Champion song cocks, in full free song, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6 each. Sure to give satisfaction. Approval anywhere.

EXPORT ORDERS.—I export birds to every point of the compass, and shall be pleased to quote prices of birds delivered to any address in the world.

TERMS.—Cash or deposit with Editor. Easy Payments can be arranged if necessary with genuine fanciers.

Travelling Cages 3d. extra in all cases. All birds put on rail same day as order is received.

Remember This, Please.—I invite you to come on any day but Sunday and inspect my stock, and make your own selection. If unable to come, I am prepared to send any number of birds to any address in the Kingdom on 10 days' approval at my sole risk. I guarantee absolute satisfaction to every customer, or cash returned in full. Send a P.C. for my Free Illustrated Catalogue.

IMPORTANT OFFER TO ROLLER FANCIERS

I have just received a large number of Rollers bred in England by a well-known gentleman whose stock has been built up from the best contesting strains in the country, regardless of expense. The cocks are exceptionally good birds, with good bass notes and a splendid variety of tours. To anyone requiring a reliable stock bird, or a schoolmaster for training young, or a songster that will always be pleasing to the ear, this is a unique opportunity. I don't ask you to take my word for this. Just let me send you one of these birds on approval. Hear him for yourself, and if not perfectly satisfied return him and I will return cash in full. If preferred, cash can be deposited with Editor. Kindly note prices:—Cocks in full rolling song, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each. Hens, guaranteed from same pure strain, 3/6, 4/-, 5/- each. Matched pairs, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair; travelling cages 3d. extra: Joe Thomas, Ambler Thorn, Halifax, Yorks.; over 35 years same address.

COD LIVER OIL

cage bird food, with added egg; keeps birds warm, healthy; dealers, 2d., 4/6; if direct, postage extra: Liverine, Grimsby.

SPLENDID MUSICAL ROLLERS

I have the finest strain of Roller Canaries that was ever offered for sale. Each and every bird has been specially trained, which can be noted by its soft musical changes of song. Beware of imitations, as these are not the common Rollers or rubbish as placed on the market. Prices: Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each, according to quality and variation of song. Hens same strain, warranted untried, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6 each; special Roller box singing cages, 2/- complete, with shutters 3/3 complete. Honest and straightforward dealing guaranteed by E. Power, Bird Specialist, 89 and 91, Selater-st., Shoreditch, London, E.

J. SANDIFORD'S
BRITISH BRED ROLLERS

Sandiford, Canary Breeder and Judge, Preston.

Storey's Rollers

I have only a limited number for disposal. The quality and price are right. Just have one of my Rollers on approval and compare the quality of its song with some of the supposed champions, and keep the bird that gives you the most satisfaction. Cocks with full change of song by day or artificial light, price according to quality of song. Cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; reliable, untried breeding hens, 2/3, 2/6, 2/-, 3/6 each. All birds on seven days' approval; neat travelling cages 3d. each, 2/3 dozen. The old reliable firm and address: E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

Mr. W. L. Page, hon. sec., Southampton C.B.S., has removed from Mordaunt Road to 30, Bedford Place, Southampton.

Mr. Wm. Rutherford has removed from West Roddymoor to Arthur Pit, near Crook, Co. Durham.

Please accept my thanks for your Front Page Illustration of my winning Goldie, which has now changed hands to another Welsh fancier, writes Mr. Sam Jones, junr., Llanelly.

I have been elected secretary of Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S. in place of Mr. E. Lord, resigned, writes Mr. J. Coupe, 29, Oswald Street, Rochdale, and all communications should now be addressed to me.

Mr. H. F. Bowring, hon. sec., Metropolitan C.B.A., writes asking us to express his regret that, through pressure of Government work, he was unfortunately prevented from attending the meeting of April 15, at which Mr. Jeffrey was to give a lecture. Mr. Bowring says this is the first meeting he has missed for two years.

The following show dates have been arranged; secretaries kindly note, to avoid clashing: South Wales R.C.C., Dec. 15, 16; Blaydon-on-Tyne C.B.S., Nov. 12, 13; Cardiff C.B.S., Nov. 17, 18, Larkhall C.B.A., Oct. 30; Clydebank C.B.C., Nov. 27; Kettering, Dec. 11; Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., Nov. 12, 13; Carlisle O.S., Oct. 27, 28.

The Blaenavon C.B.S., writes Mr. G. T. Jones, sec., is going on extra; three new members at last meeting. We intend running an open show this year, and our young bird show is to be held June 26 at the Crown Hotel; about twenty specials have been promised, including a guinea photo enlargement, given by Mr. J. Howells.

The balance-sheet of the Wimbledon C.B.S. shows cash in hand £17 17s. 2d., and assets, cups, etc., valued at £22. The year's working shows a slight loss, but no credit is taken for outstanding subscriptions which, when paid, will place the society in even a better position than last year. New members elected during the year were just in excess of the resignations, so that membership is still increasing.

Mrs. Easterling begs to thank the many friends for their kind sympathy shown to her during her sad bereavement, writes Mr. W. Buckingham. Also the many members who have kindly subscribed for her. She deeply regrets the mistake made as to the burial ground, but as the arrangements were not made till after CAGE BIRDS had gone to press last week, it was impossible to let fanciers know the time and place of burial.

In the April issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, Mr. F. Dawson-Smith concludes his article on British Corvidæ, with notes on the Jay and Chough and a dietary for each of the Corvidæ in captivity, and among the other articles is a most interesting account of the breeding and rearing in captivity of the Little Egret as a business undertaking for the sale of their plumes, and the birds themselves as their number increases by breeding.

The Rule Book and Syllabus of the Halifax O.S. is to hand from the sec., Mr. H. Clegg, 15, Melrose St., Halifax. The syllabus gives the dates of the rambles of the society, the classification for the four members' shows, dates of meeting nights and particulars of lectures, etc. Rules and special prizes for members' shows are included, and also a list of members' names and addresses; among the specials are three gold medals for novices, two Yorks and one Norwich, and the cash specials for novices are the same as for the champion exhibitors.

The National British Bird and Mule Club have decided to hold their annual ramble on Saturday, May 15, writes Mr. J. P. Carr, hon. sec. New ground is to be tried this year in the neighbourhood of Beaconsfield and Denham, and the change in the locality should yield plenty of interesting sights in wild bird life. The committee extend a hearty welcome to all members and friends of all the London societies to join in this outing. Further particulars in respect to trains, etc., will be published later. Will secs. of London societies please accept this intimation, as I have not time to write to them personally as in former years.

Notwithstanding the rise in cost of pepper and canisters, and increased rates for freight, insurance and dock dues, I have decided not to raise the price of Ramsden's Pure Peppers to retail customers while my present stock lasts. Trade prices have been revised, but any bona-fide trader can supply at advertised prices provided he is satisfied with a reasonable commission, and is willing to pay cash with order during the continuance of the war. Owing to the congestion on the railways, customers should place their orders earlier than usual. Prices: Tasteless 2s. lb., 3lbs. 5s., 5lbs. 7s. 6d., 22lbs. 30s.; hot, 3s. lb., carriage paid. I have been fortunate enough to secure a fair quantity of pepper of splendid colour and quality, most of which is landed and safe in my warehouse. I believe I am the only importer who has been able to land a consignment of this season's tasteless pepper. The issue of coupons will be suspended until further notice, but a limited number of special prizes will be offered at the leading shows for the best birds fed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers.—J. W. Ramsden (11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London).—(Advt.)

In the Courts.

A Parrot Taken for a Lark.

At the Marylebone Police Court on Ap. 23, Charles Burnett, aged thirty-eight, a fishmonger, was charged with committing a burglary at Waverley Road, Paddington, and stealing a Parrot, valued at £5 17s. 6d. Burnett admitted stealing the Parrot, and said he took it for lark. Detective Sergeant Mander said that when arrested Burnett said, "I had no intention of taking the Parrot until she said, 'Hullo, Charlie!' and I don't remember any more until the morning, when I found her sitting on the bed-rail." A remand was granted.

OBITUARY.

Fanciers will regret to hear of the sad loss which that popular exhibitor and judge, Mr. Albert Hirst, President of the Accrington and Dist. C.B.S., has had in the death of a son at seventeen years of age, who died on April 19, and was interred in Accrington Cemetery April 24, writes Mr. Herbert Walsh. I am sure fanciers who have the pleasure of knowing Mr. Hirst will join in heartfelt sympathy to him and his family in their sad bereavement.

[We have received also a similarly sympathetic announcement, apparently from a member of the Accrington C.B.S., but as it is unsigned we cannot give the name of the sender.—EDITOR.]

"The three small advts. I had in CAGE BIRDS have been the means of my selling all my surplus stock of eight cocks and nine hens at fair prices, although it is war time. Wishing CAGE BIRDS the success it deserves." J. A. HALHEAD (Purley).

MRS. SCHOLES, Ottery St. Mary, received a telegram on Friday morning ordering all the birds: thanks to the advt. in CAGE BIRDS.

Blackbird's Queer Nesting Place.

A Blackbird near Penllergaer has built her nest on the spring of the back wheel of a motor lorry, which is in daily use, but the bird does not seem to mind the movement, as she has deposited three eggs in the nest.

New Secretaries of Societies.

We are notified of the following changes of secretaryship: Ashington Hirst C.B.S., Mr. C. F. Tapson, 4, Park View, Ashington, in place of Mr. W. Hall; Aberdeen Amalgamated C.B.S., Mr. R. J. Robertson, 4, Hosefield Road, Aberdeen, in place of Mr. Alison.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged, and local fanciers are invited to join: Manchester and N.C.O.S., May 2, to Marple, meet at Fire Station at 2; Openshaw Gorton C.B.S., May 30, to Marple, train to Rose Hill, time not yet arranged.

Kestrel's Duel to Death.

A fierce and fatal fight between two Kestrels has been witnessed by Mr. H. J. Leigh, of Reading. He watched an old male and a young male engaged in deadly combat for 20 minutes and picked them up from the ground when they were locked together and dying. Both birds died in his hands. Mr. Leigh has presented them to the Reading Museum, preserved in the attitude of combat. Probably the older Hawk was driving the young one from his hunting grounds, and found the task too much for him.

The Home of the Starling.

Holes in old trees or in the thatch of a barn are the places usually selected by the Starling. The nest is composed of dry grass and a few feathers. The eggs, which usually number four or five, are pale blue-green in colour and often differ considerably in size. The youngsters are about the noisiest of any young birds. I remember a nest being placed under the roof of a little iron schoolhouse, and the screeching was so intense that they had to be removed. The young are fed on insects and worms chiefly, but young seeds just sprouting are not objected to. They are not spangled like the old ones until the first moult, but are a light slate colour. As soon as they can do for themselves the old ones do a little cleaning and use the hole a second time.

Ireland's Last Eagle.

There is too much reason to fear that Ireland has lost the last of her Eagles, says "The Dublin Express." Until the opening days of the present year at least one wild specimen was known to be still in existence in the western parts of Donegal. As it had apparently no mate, it was doomed in any case to be the last of its species; but there was yet a pleasure—though a subdued one—to be felt in the consciousness that this noble bird might still be occasionally seen sailing over the mountainous regions that have from time immemorial formed his favourite fastness. That pleasure can no longer be felt, for the Eagle is no more. A shot from an unsentimental sportsman a few days ago ended its career somewhere in the vicinity of Ardara; and henceforth the study of the Irish Golden Eagle must be carried on from mounted specimens only—unless happily one more survivor of the doomed race may yet turn up. The Golden Eagle was once as common a sight in the West of Ireland as it still is in Scotland. It has been carefully preserved in Scotland, with the result that there is no danger of any extinction of the breed. In Ireland this noble creature has long been the prey of every "sportsman" who can shoulder a rifle.

Birds Colliding in the Air.

There are a number of recorded cases where birds have collided in flight. The more frequent would appear to be in certain species of game-birds. The impetuous rush of a covey of Partridges as they burst into the air may easily lead to a brace coming into violent contact, and for both to fall more or less disabled. A singular instance was recorded some time ago from Scotland, when, during a drive, a Grouse suddenly frightened by one of the "stops" turned almost at right angles, and cut down a fellow in the air. A correspondent recently sent to the "Field" a Snipe and a Lark which were picked up dead in Leicestershire; the Snipe's bill being still attached to the Lark's wing. It is suggested that the Snipe may have approached too close to the Lark's nest, and the tragedy have arisen from a conflict on the ground; but seeing that neither is a pugnacious bird, and that both were found dead, the chances are that they collided accidentally in mid-air and were killed by the fall, the Snipe's bill still penetrating the wing of its fellow victim. Instances of birds colliding in flight with inanimate objects, especially with telegraph wires, are, of course, common. A somewhat unusual example was recorded from Datchet, when a tame Swan flew with extreme violence against the front of a building and was instantly killed.

JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS

J. C. BARNES, 113, Northfield Road, Walkley, Sheffield. Judge of all varieties of cage birds. Long, practical experience. Terms moderate.

THOS. BENNETT, Judge of Cage Birds; life experience; terms moderate: 14, Cumberland-rd., Lidget Green, Bradford.

J. W. BRUCE, Coldstream. Judge of all varieties of cage birds; Border and British Bird specialist. Terms moderate.

W. A. COWGILL, 115, Washington Street, Girlington Bradford. Judge of all varieties of Cage Birds. Practical experience. Terms moderate.

GEO. GARDNER, 11, Haverstock Road, London, N.W. Judge of all kinds of Cage Birds.

G. HOBBS, 35, Queen's Road, Northampton, having retired from business, can judge Canaries and cage birds. 40 years breeder and exhibitor. Terms moderate.

J. R. HOUGHTON, 21, Hatfield Road, Gloucester; judge of Canaries and Cage Birds; specialist in Norwich; terms moderate.

C. A. HOUSE, Briardene, Idle, Bradford. Judge of Canaries and other Cage Birds.

J. W. METCALFE, Yorkshire Aviaries, 68, Brunswick Road, Liverpool. Judge of Cage Birds, Specialist Yorks. and Norwich; terms moderate.

W. R. MILES, Aviaries, Chichester.—Judge of all varieties Cage Birds. Norwich Plainhead Specialist.

W. MUNDELL, 6, Carlisle Place, Manningham, Bradford. Judge of Canaries and Cage Birds.

H. NORMAN, The Eyrie, Salisbury Road, Carshalton, Surrey. All varieties of Cage Birds. Specialist Hybrids and British Birds.

J. PATTERSON, Chirnside. Judge of Cage Birds; all varieties. Wide, practical experience. Specialist Border Fancy Judge.

J. H. PAYNE, 17, Northgate Street, Gloucester. Judge of Canaries, British and Foreign Cage Birds.

C. E. SILK, The Aviaries, Emsworth, Hants. Judge of all varieties of Cage Birds. Life experience.

JAMES STANGER, 59, Grange Terrace, Pelton Fell, Co. Durham. A.V., Spl., Nor. and Cr.

HENRY TAMS, Orchard Place, Longton, Staffs. Judge of Canaries, British and Foreign Birds. Twenty-five years' Breeder and Exhibitor.

S. TICKELL, 22, Honey Street, Bodmin. Judge of all varieties; specialist Norwich, Cinn. and Liz. Long practical experience. Terms moderate.

W. VARDY, The Aviaries, Hucknall Huthwaite, Notts. Judge of all varieties; specialist in Norwich Plainheads. Life experience. Terms moderate.

J. WILCOCK, The Fountain Inn, Eccleshill, nr. Bradford. Judge of Cage Birds, all varieties.

G. WILSON, 11, Frizington Rd., Frizington, Cumberland. Judge of Mules, Brit., For. Specialist, Brit., Mules. Life experience; terms moderate.

W. YOUNG, 25, Grosvenor Road, New Brighton. Judge of Cage Birds. Life experience. Terms moderate.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, with a very poor attendance considering the business on hand, Mr. Stafford chair. Decided that classes should be same as last year's N.E. shows. Also decided to combine with Sheffield C.B.S. and others in their effort to run a combined show for members. Decided that Mr. J. W. Jones be delegate on combined show business. I should like to see more members present next meeting, as we shall want confirmation of classes.—J. E. Taylor, Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Monthly show, headquarters, judge, Mr. W. Swaysland, Yorks, came up well in splendid condition. Champ, Yorks.: 1, Vine, Dandridge; 2, he, c, Gibb; 3, W. Wall. Nov.: 1, he, Firth; 2, 3, Vine Oakshott; c, Fellows. Crest and C.B.: 1, 2, 3, Penyoun. A.O.V.: 1, Mrs. Gibb (Border). Linnet: 1, James; 2, 3, Miss Mantell. Bramble, etc.: 1, Brown. A.O. Hardbill: 1, Goble (Bullf.); 2, Firth (Gold.); 3, Brown (Greenf.). Mule: 1, 2, Smith. A judging competition was also held, Mr. F. Dandridge handing in the winning slip, with Mr. W. Firth only 1 point behind.—W. H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Old Boar's Head, Withy Grove, Manchester, April 24, Mr. W. Massey chair. Messrs. Sylveston, Walkley, F. Howard, Middleton, Brayton, Ramsbottom, and T. T. Wilkinson, Chester, elected members. The rings of the P.R.C.C., it was pleasing to know, are going splendidly, and a new lot will have to be ordered, this making the third lot sold out. From accounts of the members, there seem to be a good few with young ones out, and all doing well. The prospect of a very good season so far seems very bright.—Tom Routledge.

AYRSHIRE SCOTCH FANCY C.C.

Meeting, Ossington Coffee House, Kilmarnock, April 24. Thirteen members present. Ex-Bailie Robertson in the chair, Mr. Gilbert Deans vice-chair. Letter was received from Mr. James Ferguson, sec. of Kilmarnock C.B.C., stating that a deputation from his club would be present, and the deputation duly attended. Classification for annual open show in November was considered. Decided to adopt a system similar to that of the Glasgow Derby Scotch Fancy Show, with some alterations; the show to be held on Nov. 20, with a selling class at £1; prizes to consist principally of specials given or assured by members of the club. All subs. to be paid by June 30, four classes for cocks and 4 for hens; agreed: yellow cock, clear or foul; ditto piebald or green, buff cock, clear or foul; ditto piebald or green, and the same for hens. Mr. Muir (Kilmarnock C.B.S.) opened the discussion about the show room co-operation between the two clubs, and was supported by Mr. Johnston. The show arrangement arrived at is mutually satisfactory. Two judges are to be chosen, and the names of five were submitted, Messrs. J. R. Millar, Govan, and J. A. Stewart, sen., Cathcart, to be invited. The President, according to the wishes of the club, will present two gold medals instead of a cup for competition, one for cocks and one for hens. In the old bird section classes will be: A.V., yell. ck., yell. hen, buff ck., buff hen. It was considered desirable that a member from the Cage Bird Society of Kilmarnock, should attend our next meeting, and Mr. Ferguson, the sec., promised to be present. The President warmly thanked the members of the deputation for their kind support, and said he would present their society with a gold medal for whatever purpose they considered best. Mr. Johnston replied, returning thanks to the president for his offer. Next meeting, Ossington Coffee House, Kilmarnock, June 26, at 6.—Hugh M. Ferguson, Sec. and Treas.

WILD FOODS FOR SEED-EATING BIRDS.

By CHAS. PRIOR (Ropley).

The useful greenfoods, etc., available during May are herein described. The first of these articles appeared in our issue of April 10, and we have, we are pleased to say, been able to arrange with the Author to contribute a continuation in the first issue of each month.

"MAY has come with beauty smiling!" Laughing, one might almost say. If winter capitulates to April, to May his surrender is unconditional. April's rippling smile is the fugitive glee of the toddling lassie; May's the prodigal laughter of the full-grown damsel. So, also, do the wild foods of April advance to perfection in May. March attends the birth-struggle of the seedling; April coaxes the seedling into a plant; May carries the plant along to fruition and the highest degree of its usefulness—to the bird-keeper. The gardener may hold other views.

Chickweed Now at its Best.

Chickweed, the leading all-round wild food of April, is at the zenith of its feeding value—crowded with plump seed pods—in May. At no season of the year will it be better. Those birds which eat it find it acceptable in almost all its stages; now they are simply ravenous for it. It will therefore be still prominent in the bird-room throughout this month.

Bird-keepers whose opportunities for securing a daily supply are limited can preserve chickweed in fairly fresh condition for three or four days by placing it in a pail or bowl in the coolest place available, and covering it lightly with a wet cloth. A piece of old muslin, always kept damp, does nicely. If warm atmosphere reaches it it will turn yellow, and it is not then advisable to use it for food, nor much use trying to. Its usefulness is not quite ended, however, for it may be spread out to dry, as grass is made into hay, and given to hybridising couples which are playing at nest-building.

Groundsel, like chickweed, hurries forward with the Spring; and although it recurs later on, and does not make its final exit until the end of autumn, its meridian is attained in May. The energies of the plant are then directed mainly towards the production of its finest seed heads, and those are what the bird-keeper wants. Hence, for this month, it will share in the prominence of chickweed.

Groundsel should be gathered by pulling up the whole plant, root included. It may then be transferred to a shallow dish or tin, say two or three inches deep, into which water has been poured to the depth of about one inch. (A vessel with perpendicular sides, like those of a square bathing dish, has an advantage over one with sloping edge—a plate, for instance.) The roots are placed in the water, the leaves and tops being kept clear, and the dish packed full so that the plant stands erect as in growth.

In this way groundsel may be kept in a fresh and still growing condition for quite a considerable time. If required for feeding to birds in large flights or aviaries, there is no better plan that that of introducing the whole vehicle as it is, taking care that it stands clear of all droppings from above. For those in smaller cages, the seeding heads may be picked off as required, together with sufficient stalk to allow of their being fixed in the wires, within convenient reach of the perches.

When to Gather Dandelion.

Dandelion likewise progresses in unison with the season, and arrives at maturity this month. April sees the plant make its first efforts at blooming; the beginning of May finds it flowering in profusion. This period of profuse flowering is brief. So soon as the visits of bees and other winged insects have ensured fertilization, the flowers, by simply closing up, form into seed-heads, and the process of seed formation begins.

As the formation of seed proceeds, the petals of the flowers wither, and the bottom of the seed-head—that part which is attached to the stalk expands. Presently the withered petals fall, exposing a small white tuft of vegetable "down." The time for gathering is then at hand. When the base of the seed-head is firm to the touch, and has swollen to the point of cracking, especially if it is changing in colour from green towards a faded yellow, time and seed head alike are ripe and ready.

This last-described condition is its penultimate stage of development; the ultimate stage carries it out of reach. For the moment arrives when the seed-head opens in the sun, and evolves the familiar "what's o'clock" plaything of the children; a breath disperses the flimsy ball of down, and each tiny plume, bearing its own particular seed, floats away on the breeze.

Dandelion seed-heads, then, must be collected before they burst into spherical bunches of pappus, and yet they should be got, as nearly as is practicable, directly before that happens. Then they are the most favoured of all Spring foods by Goldfinches, and they undoubtedly do these birds a lot of good. They are keenly relished by Greenfinches, Siskins, and Bullfinches; and hardly less eager for them are Linnets, Twites, and Redpolls. They are also invaluable both for bringing backward breeding pairs—either of Canaries, British, or mixed unions—into forward condition, and for inducing the more amorous ones which are hovering on the brink to take the final plunge.

Dandelion has one season of prolific seeding, which generally occurs before May is left behind, and may be carried along for a week or so into June. The time of plenty is never of long duration, extending over perhaps three or four, or even five weeks; but while it lasts the yield is most prodigal, and the value of the seed-heads at that time cannot be over-stated. There will be irregular shows of flowering and seeding afterwards, and possibly a small second crop in the autumn, but the birds are not keen for the out of season article, and the inference is that bounty and virtue come hand in hand.

Good for Goldfinches.

Thus the story of May's wild foods appears to be little more than a recapitulation of those of April, but the reiteration is amply justified by their vastly improved dietary value and increased abundance; and they will hold the field for the whole of this month. Dandelion seed-heads should be served out to Goldfinches with every freedom; but it is useless now to offer the leaves as well, and any surplus after satisfying the Goldfinches may be passed on to Greenfinches and Siskins.

Seeding Chickweed is especially good for Linnets, Redpolls, Twites and Canaries; particularly so for Canaries when they have young to rear. Groundsel tops for all of them, without stint.

Towards the end of May, another important wild food appears above ground. This is shepherd's-purse—a quite common and well-known weed. First is seen a small flat plant about the size of one's hand, which soon sends up little branches that bear the small, heart-shaped seed pouches. Mostly to be found on cultivated, or partly-cultivated land; seldom where grass is established, although, having deeper root-hold, it does not succumb quite so quickly as chickweed. The properties which commend this weed to the bird-keeper are not usually developed before June, and they will be reviewed in the notes for that month; but it is well to have the source of supply located in good time.

Coltsfoot and Mouse-Ear.

There are other weeds incidental to springtime which run to seed in May, two examples being coltsfoot, a composite whose flowers suggest dandelion blooms reduced in size, and mouse-ear, which looks like chickweed grown coarse and faded. Neither of these have qualities comparable, from the bird-keeper's standpoint, with those of their better-known contemporaries, and they are only introduced to be saluted and dismissed, the aim of these notes being not to compile an encyclopædic botanical catalogue, but rather to focus attention upon a discriminating selection of things which are worth the trouble of securing.

Most precious of Nature's boons are the two essentials, priceless as they are costless, sunshine and fresh air. The bird-room window, from May onwards, may be opened to its widest to assist the welcome invasion of the former and the free circulation of the latter; draught, however, must be prevented.

Reproduced, by kind permission, from the "Avicultural Magazine."

POLYTELIS PARRAKEETS.—A genus of Australian Parrakeets bearing a strong resemblance to the Palæornidæ of the northern hemisphere, and having nothing in common with the broad-tails. They are fairly peaceable birds, and can be wintered out of doors in a sunny, sheltered aviary. The food should consist of wheat, oats, canary, millet, a little hemp, fruit and green food.

A Spiteful Beauty.

CRIMSON-WINGED PARRAKEET (Ptistes erythropterus).—A very beautiful bird which has of late been freely imported. Crimson-wings should be fed on hemp, canary, millet, wheat, oats, a little sunflower, fruit and green food, the first-mentioned seed being a necessity for them, as without it they generally fail to keep their condition. They are perfectly hardy when properly acclimatised, but, like most Parrakeets, are very sensitive to cold when newly imported. They are also highly susceptible to septic fever, and take the disease on the smallest provocation, even when in the best of health. In disposition they are spiteful and cowardly, and show but little affection for even their own kind. When tame, however, they may be quite gentle with their owners.

The adult cock Crimson-wing can easily be distinguished from the hen by his black mantle, but I know of no way in which young cocks can be recognised with any certainty. Among the immature birds brought over from Australia the males sometimes outnumber the females by 8 to 1, and as they are said not to assume full plumage for three or four years, one may have to wait a long time before being certain of possessing a true pair. Speaking from very limited experience I should say that Crimson-wings might do well at liberty.

Hens a Disturbing Element.

KING PARRAKEET (Aprosmictus cyanopygius).—The King Parrakeet should be fed and treated like the Crimson wing, which it resembles in disposition, being a great coward and bully in mixed company, although fairly friendly towards its own species, a number of cocks living together in harmony as long as there is no hen near them.

The King Parrakeet is essentially an aviary bird and is very hardy. It is quite unsuited to cage life, and in close confinement falls a victim to fatty degeneration of the liver. Kings are very susceptible to septic fever, and also suffer from eye disease, so that in buying newly imported birds the eyes should always be carefully examined.

Hens have the head and upper breast green, and appear to lack the light green stripe which characterises the adult cock. Young males also have green heads for a considerable time, but light feathers appear on the wings at a fairly early age. King Parrakeets stay moderately well when allowed their freedom, being very dependent on artificial feeding. They should be turned out with cut wings.

COCKATEEL (Cyclopsittacus novæ-hollandiæ).—A very well known bird, and one of the hardiest and most amiable of the Parrot family. Unfortunately they are useless for acclimatization purposes, being strongly migratory, utterly destitute of any homing instinct, and quite unable to fend for themselves when deprived of artificial food during the winter months.

BUDGERIGAR (Melopsittacus undulatus).—What has just been said of the Cockateel applies to a great extent to this charming little bird, as far as its behaviour at liberty is concerned. It is not quite such an inveterate wanderer when first released, but it seldom stays more than a few months, and its small size renders it peculiarly liable to fall a prey to Owls.

Experiences Differ.

LORIKEETS (Trichoglossus).—Most of the old writers condemn the Brush-tongued Parrots as a delicate and unsatisfactory family in confinement, and after a series of unlucky experiences with some of the commoner kinds, I am driven to heartily endorse what they have written. Nevertheless Lories and Lorikeets have been kept with great success by a few aviculturists who, I believe, have fed them on a sweetened mixture of unseasoned marmite (made the colour of brandy) and banana crystals, with or without the addition of Horlick's Malted Milk. I have at different times owned upwards of thirty Lorikeets, but not one of them did I succeed in inducing to partake of this mixture. Consequently I had to feed them on seed, fruit, milk, sponge cake, fig, etc., with the result that all, sooner or later, fell victims to fatty degeneration of the liver and fits. Others, I hope, will have better luck than I!

Lorikeets are not very sensitive to cold, but they like a snug box to roost in. They are peaceable among themselves, but intensely vicious with all other birds, attacking even those which are four or five times their size. Tame Lorikeets stay well at liberty, but wild ones usually give disappointing results. They are just as susceptible to digestive troubles when flying at large as when kept in a cage.

Norwich Plainheads and their Show Deportment.

The Importance of Training.

BY E. W. ALLSOPP, CARDIFF.

INASMUCH as "charity begins at home," so does the training of our breed for the show bench, if we would be successful. Somehow many Plainhead fanciers associate "training" only with the recognised breeds of position, as the Scotch, Belgian, and Yorkshire, fondly believing that training accomplishes their more or less correct pose in the show cage.

That the training to which they are subjected does considerably help in this respect no one will deny, but it is not wholly responsible for their poses. As a matter of fact, each of the varieties mentioned are by careful training taught to display their characteristic poses or behaviour as naturally in the show cage as in their stock cages at home, when nobody happens to be looking. Strictly, therefore, they are no more birds of position than our "Plainhead," for to show the latter to the fullest advantage it is very necessary to ensure that the jaunty, easy, graceful deportment he displays in the stock cage at home is in the same degree submitted to the judge.

More prizes have been lost through lack of training in Plainheads than through any other cause. This, perhaps, is a tall statement to make, but I nevertheless believe it to be true. At the moment any of our experienced judges can select the exhibits of our leading exhibitors in a twink, not necessarily by their superlative good fancy points, but merely by their superior deportment in the show cage.

No apology is needed for my "thumping the table" about training during the breeding season, for if we leave it until we make our entries it will be much too late, even if our bird be the best Plainhead that ever looked through the bars of a show cage.

The Dawning of Knowledge.

I well remember how I fooled about in this matter of training in my earlier days—but inasmuch as my serious operations did not commence until towards the close of the moult, I was never a prominent prize-winner, nor could I say my birds were any the happier or better for my aspirations towards the show bench. However, the real significance of training eventually came home to me in all its glory, and I am sure that, given a reasonably good all-round bird, its correct training is the shortest cut to the first and special we all hanker after.

Some nine or ten years ago the name of Mr. T. H. Veale, of Paignton, as a breeder and exhibitor, loomed boldly upon the Plainhead horizon (much more, I regret to say, than has been the case of late years), and after he had "scooped the pool" during one season by securing six firsts with, I think, six birds at a leading Welsh fixture, and had put down a very heavy hand at many more leading shows, I made up my mind, as new blood was needed, to pay this gentleman a visit, for, being only a beginner, I naturally concluded that behind his grand team of exhibits must be the bluest of blue blood.

Although I had only two hours at my disposal in which to buy the stock needed, and to hear and see all I could, I did very well, for I discovered the secret of this fancier's success; and, though I ought to be ashamed to say so, actually commenced in the following season to beat my tutor at his own game by winning the unflighted yellow cock class (his favourite class, too), and, if my memory serves me correctly, I repeated the performance the next season, just as proof, I suppose, that my methods were quite all right.

When I arrived at Paignton preliminaries were soon over, though I shall always remember the look of surprise which greeted me when I candidly confessed that I had made the journey from Swindon solely to buy about £6 worth of stock birds. Once in the bird-room I was soon to be astounded by the complete harmony that prevailed 'twixt birds and master. Young, vigorous cocks in stock cages, at the command of a short cane, hopped gladly into the show cage, stood boldly to attention, and even sang.

Correspondence.

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve it.

Sir,—Surely Mr. Bastock is a little premature. Where or when have I given the least intimation that I wish to withdraw my challenge? I would prefer to double it; it is only Mr. Allsopp who has insinuated such. Even the "portions" of my letters that you have published are having the desired effect.

W. Spillman.

Sir,—Having followed the correspondence under the above heading, I have come to the conclusion that the younger generation of Norwich fanciers are merely being taught the art of criticism. There are, no doubt, plenty of reliable fanciers who would be pleased to contribute an article on the above, but refrain from doing so for fear of being criticised. I may add that my experience does not run for a great number of years, but I have sufficient intelligence to keep my own counsel respecting articles written by fellow fanciers. Mr. Spillman no doubt has had a very successful career in the Norwich Fancy, and good luck to him for the future, but his letter coupled with Mr. Bastock's is very amusing. Fancy, "The Norwich Plainhead, and how to improve it" developing into a sweepstake! Be wise and save your fivers; they may come in handy for a seed bill later on. Why don't fanciers express their meanings in an amicable manner which leaves no opening for these unfriendly attacks? I am more than surprised to think that our fanciers, with a long standing experience, have given way to such talk, instead of toeing the line on the subject, and trying to help the young fanciers.

J. Nener.

Sir,—The passing of another good fancier again reminds us of our littleness. Perhaps for a hobby of its magnitude there is none to approach bird-keeping for its freedom from commercialism; none in which so much money circulates for the love of the hobby; and again none in which practical help for the needy falls upon so few willing shoulders. I need not now enter into the need or otherwise of the Fancy being organised; but of late I venture to say the need of combined help becomes more and more patent. Instead of Mr. W. Spillman endeavouring to justify the position taken up by him in a moment of pique, allow me to suggest to him that he joins with me for some real good, and with the idea of establishing a fund to be at the service of needy fanciers, and those sometimes left behind, totally unprovided for, I am willing to set aside the best youngster I may breed this season to meet the best of Mr. Spillman's breeding, also of Mr. Bastock's, my local critics and others. The competition to be held at a leading London show, and the birds sold by auction. For my own part I would not confine the competition to birds of the current year, but for the best representative of the breed available by each competitor, and of his own breeding. Such a class, apart from its circle of interest, would be a unique opportunity for buyers to secure birds of outstanding merit, and should easily result in a substantial sum being handed over to trustees, in whose hands would be placed the task of lending a hand in a practical manner, and free from the publicity with which our help is unfortunately usually associated. Regarding the show, entry fees, prizes offered, etc., these are details of little importance compared with the main issue, and should be easily surmountable.

E. W. Allsopp.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—What a glorious picture was painted by Mr. J. W. Saywell, wherein he shows the extraordinary virtues of all who have voted in favour of "White Rose" being a Canary-Bullfinch. The beauty of the picture lies in the fact that most of them are such very disinterested and unprejudiced parties. (I don't think.) Away in the background, hanging their heads in shame, are the creatures who have dared to question the parentage of the mysterious bird. It seems almost like sacrilege to criticise such a picture: but really J. W. Saywell ought to play the game and stick to facts. He quotes Mr. C. Houlton as a great authority, and states that he placed "White Rose" first at Liverpool, which is not correct, as Mr. Houlton left "White Rose" cardless at Liverpool, and according to a letter published in Cage Birds. Mr. C. Houlton judged "White Rose" on a previous occasion, and placed it second in a class of three entries, first prize going to a common variegated Goldfinch Mule. J. W. S. then states that "White Rose" is in the wrong hands. I quite agree with him, for had it been in some hands it would have been put in its proper place long ago. Mr. Saywell suggests that it should have carried all before it. In reality it has got more than it was justly entitled to, and has been the luckiest bird ever staged. Even if it had been an undoubted Canary-Bullfinch it would not have been worth all that it has got. It is simply a badly splashed variegated gird, and even as a Canary-Bullfinch, has been greatly overrated. A similarly splashed Mule from the Goldfinch, Greenfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, would be practically worthless for exhibition purposes. It has a Greenfinch-Bullfinch coloured dark splash on the back, the lower breast and flanks are dark Greenfinch-Bullfinch in colour, the splashed wings are mixed with Greenfinch-Bullfinch coloured dark feathers, the dark side of the tail is Greenfinch-Bullfinch in colour; and the whole bird, except the light feathers, is entirely Greenfinch-Bullfinch in character. In the interests of the Fancy, I hope that our judges henceforth will examine this bird carefully with an open mind, and judge it on its merits, disregarding statements as to its breeding, etc. In my previous letter I answered all Mr. Parlett's questions, and in return I asked him a few simple, though pertinent questions, which he either has not understood or is afraid to answer. Please allow me to repeat a few of them. Will Mr. Parlett say why he, or those who are supporting him, have never attempted to explain how "White Rose" happens to show so much of the Greenfinch? Why is he so afraid to enter it in the light Canary Mule class? Will he let us know what is the natural colour of the light plumage of "White Rose"? Does colour-feeding affect its colour as much as it affects British Birds, such as Linnets, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, etc.? If Mr. Parlett still refuses to reply, I think your readers may safely draw their own conclusions.

Patrick.

Sir,—Having kept many varieties of British Birds, and bred many varieties of Mules and Hybrids during the last thirty-five years. I have naturally taken much interest in the discussion on the latest sensation, the reputed light Canary-Bullfinch Mule. After first seeing a report of it in Cage Birds, I felt quite fidgety till I got a good look at it, which I did at the first possible opportunity. On entering the show I soon made a bee-line for the Mule section, and found the rarity sitting complacently in front of a small crowd of much interested fanciers. Well, my first impression of the bird was—What a fine, noble bird it is! Dark Canary-Bullfinches were in the same class, but they were absolute weeds in comparison. Even the Greenfinch-Bullfinches were not in it for size and substance. Awaiting my opportunity, I took the liberty of lifting the cage, so as to get a better light on the bird, and at once the Canary part seemed to almost vanish, and the Greenfinch became evident. On examining the wings and tail I found clear evidence of the Greenfinch. The formation of the head and beak was more like the Greenfinch-Bullfinches than the Canary-Bullfinches in the same class, and the variegation is quite opposed to the general rule of variegation in Canary Mules, but is more like that of partial Albino British Birds. As a rule the dark feathers in a Mule's wing begin from the inner flights, the light feathers from the outer flights; in the tail the light feathers spread from the centre, the outer ones remaining dark, so long as there are dark feathers in the tail. The wing of "White Rose" is light on the inner flights, and dark on the outer, and it is on the dark flight feathers that the Greenfinch stamp is conspicuous, as they carry a pronounced deep yellow bar. One side of the tail is light, the other side dark; here again the dark feathers show an undeniable stamp of the Greenfinch. To casual observers the light plumage may suggest a Canary extraction, but we have seen clear yellow Yellowhammers, white, cream-coloured and cinnamon Greenfinches, white and other abnormally coloured Bullfinches, etc., etc.

One very notable point in the correspondence is that they who have made most noise in proclaiming this bird to be a Canary-Bullfinch have never yet attempted to explain how it happens to show such unmistakable evidences of the Greenfinch. Some correspondents have suggested the possibility of two fathers. If I remember rightly, it was stated in Cage Birds that a cock Greenfinch and a cock Canary were with the hen Bullfinch. That "White Rose" is a freak is incontrovertible, because if bred from a Canary, the presence of the Greenfinch characteristics makes it a freak, and if bred from the Greenfinch the light feathers make it a freak. These are facts which no arguing can dispose of.

Mr. J. W. Saywell claims to know the owner personally, and says he is a good sport, which of course may be true, but I wonder if he ever heard of a place they call Edinburgh, or a place they call Bathgate. He may ask what this has got to do with the parentage of "White Rose"; well, just as much as the merits, or demerits, of certain judges and exhibitors of whom he so kindly gives his opinion. J. W. S. then states he fails to see any Greenfinch in the bird, but none is more blind than they who will not see. I maintain that it is better to believe the evidence of the bird itself rather than the statements of self-interested or prejudiced persons. I have little time for paper controversy, being rather fully employed on Government work. Although not a betting man, I am prepared to send to you, Mr. Editor, the sum of £5 (five pounds) to back my opinion against the opinion of any of the Canary-Bullfinch theorists who care to deposit a similar sum to back their opinion; the bird to be sent to a competent authority, who is not an exhibitor nor practising as a judge.

A Soldier's Impression of Some Indian Birds.

Sir,—It may interest some of your readers if I describe some of the birds in this part of India (Poona). The first I noticed on landing at Bombay was the familiar House Sparrow, which I did not expect to see. As you go for a walk you find plenty of Wagtails, also there are any amount of Mynahs around our barracks. I don't know the names of these birds, but I thought if I described them your foreign bird experts would be able to put the names to them. One is about like our Magpie in colouring, but smaller than a Mynah. Another is a small green bird, with a bright red head, the size of our Yellowhammer. Others include a little bird, size and shape of a Robin, black with white bars on the wings; a green bird by the river-sides has a continuation of the tail like two pieces of wire. There are Kingfishers, exactly like our own at home, and one about as big as our Jay, always by a river, grand in plumage, bright blue—a lovely bird, I should think some kind of Kingfisher. Then there is a large yellow bird, coloured like a yellow Canary with black shoulders. I have also seen the Bulbul, a dark bird with red rump. A man in the Dorsets has one of these that will whistle all the bugle calls. They are about 6 annas each, or 6d., English money. I have seen several blue birds, very handsome, about the size of a Pigeon, nearly always on the ground. There are plenty of Jackdaws here, and a black bird the size and shape of our own Blackbird, but with a kind of wire tail turned outwards at the ends. There are the Hawks, too. You may be going along with your dinner in a basin, and one of these birds will swoop down; the next minute you see your dinner going up in the air in its claws. You can get plenty of Green Parrots. I have one myself. It can talk a bit. I gave one rupee for it, or 1s. 4d. It is a Rock Parrot, and they cost about eight rupees in the bazaars.

A Signaller Reports the Cuckoo.

Sir,—While out signalling on April 19th a friend and myself heard a Cuckoo in the direction of Broadwater Forest. Is this the first this year? Although I have joined the Army I take Cage Birds just the same and it is interesting to read others' latest doings; but still there is the feeling to be back amongst my birds again. I was the youngest member in North Manchester before enlisting. When I hear the wild birds singing and see them beginning to nest, it makes me inclined to wish I was back home again, now that the exciting time has come.

F. Jackson.

[The arrival of the Cuckoo has been noted by many observers during April, commencing about the middle of the month, the traditional date for its yearly return to us. This year there has been a remarkable absence of the abnormally early records which have been formerly so persistent each year. Among those who were misled by out of season imitations of the Cuckoo's call was the late Mr. R. Lydekker, the naturalist whose death we announced last week, and who in February last mistook the notes of a labourer for those of the Cuckoo. Either those responsible for the hoaxes which were at one time so prevalent have ceased their practical joking, or people have become more chary of accepting their efforts as the genuine calls of the bird.—Ed.]

The First Cage-bird Keeper on the Roll of Honour.

Sir,—I see by the Obituary notes in Cage Birds that we have lost another bird-lover in Mr. H. Dady, and that Mr. Crow thinks he was the first to lose his life in the great war. I am sorry to say that one of our members of the Macclesfield C.B.S., Mr. Ralph Hunt, of the 1st Cheshire Regt., was killed by a sniper when going into the trenches at Ypres on March 15. He has left a widow and one child, and I think he was the first fancier to go under.

A. Dale.

The Blackbird's Bodyguard.

Sir,—One of our fanciers has watched with interest these last few weeks the building of a Blackbird's nest in an old pail on a refuse heap. Mother Blackbird now covers a clutch of four eggs, and, as the site is very sheltered, is to be congratulated on her selection from the many other likely places which lie around. The women-folk living in the vicinity, who are in the know, have formed a special constabulary force for its protection, and woe betide the urchin who happens to make that nest his prey. I hope to forward a photograph, should the little feathered visitors arrive and prosper.

R. Muir.

When Hens Will Not Sit.

Sir,—Having seen in the Queries Columns the reply to "New Beginner's" enquiry re hen that would not sit, I write to say that I have been placed in the same position, but am pleased to say that I have now got her to sit, and the following is what I did. I took the cock away from the hen, and put him with another hen, and I think that that was the cause of her not sitting; anyhow, I covered the whole of the cages with a thin muslin cover, and am pleased to say that everything is going on satisfactorily now. I hope "New Beginner" will give this a trial if his hen is not yet sitting, and trust it will prove successful. I wish Cage Birds the success it so well deserves.

A. W. Kitching.

The Old Haunts Re-visited.

Sir,—I send you a cutting from "The Nation," thinking it would interest my fellow-readers of Cage Birds.

"Every day some new unit from abroad slips into its place for the summer season. The Chiff-chaff has its hedge of last year, the Willow Warbler the very same blackberry spray to sing from. The Butcher-bird will surely come, and about three pairs of Fly-catchers to the square mile. They are the same birds wherever possible, but there are dozens of happenings that might have prevented them from rejoining. Thousands perish at the lighthouses, armies can be drifted leagues out of their reckoning by unusual winds, old-age mortality should be thirty or forty per thousand. Yet the places are filled to the very day as they were last year. The reserves are drawn on without a hitch, and the posts are all filled."

T. Hiscock.

Important to Longton Fanciers.

Sir,—Owing to Mr. C. Barker, our late secretary, having joined the colours, no meeting of the Longton and Dis. C.B.S. has been held this year, and as I and several other old members do not wish the society to fall through, we are holding a general meeting at 8 on Tuesday, May 4, at the Roebuck Hotel, the old meeting place. As we are not over strong in exhibiting members, all novices in the district are invited: the suggested sub. is 2s. 6d. a year. I have also been asked by several Roller fanciers to start a Roller Club for Longton and Dist., and we invite them to this meeting, and if we can get enough together we can run a separate Roller club; so all turn up—old members, new members, novices, and Roller Fanciers. Those who cannot come to the meeting and who wish to join, kindly send their names to me.

CLUB REPORTS.

ABERSYCHAN C.B.S.

Meeting, April 24. Agreed to hold N.F. show, July 3; the sec. to get terms re judging for next meeting, May 8. Will members do their best to be there. Mr. E. Parry was elected chairman.—W. T. Couch, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Well attended meeting, April 24, Prince of Wales Hotel, Mr. Probert presiding. Chairman stated he was pleased to see such a large number present. Decided to hold our F.F. Show June 19, at Prince of Wales Hotel. Mr. J. Parratt, Blackpool, who is in our midst for a few months, will judge; entry fee 1s. for as many entries as members wish to exhibit, a member not showing is to pay the 1s. Classes will be decided at next meeting, May 8, at 6.30.—H. H. Mortimer.

NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

Members please note that for our ramble May 2, train leaves Exchange L. and Y. at 10.20, arrives at Aintree, 10.49, then on to Ormskirk. We will be pleased to see members of other societies join us. On May 5, Mr. J. Thornton has kindly consented to give us a lecture on Colour Feeding, and we trust that there will be a good muster present. Subs. for 1915 are due. We have arranged the followings shows: N.F., June 16; ditto, July 17; British, Aug. 4; autumn show, Nov. 6; annual old show, Dec. 27.—E. S. Broadbent, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting, April 24, Mr. Farrer presiding over fair attendance. Decided, after a keen discussion on variegated classes, that members' classification be as last year; with the exception of yell. or buff tkd. or varieg. classes in each variety, which will now read "A.O.V." That rule and contribution cards, separate, with rules as amended at last annual meeting, be printed at once. The definition of a novice member to be printed at foot of rule card; a small charge will be made for rule cards. A question was handed in by each member present, and drawn for, same to be answered at next meeting. Fanciers cordially invited, as we can expect something good being served up in the answers.—John Peacock, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, Headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-st., April 7, Mr. A. Broadhurst chair, and a very good gathering. New members elected: Messrs. Padmore, Lane, Staveley, Ancott, and Sheldon; nominated: Messrs. Branch, Ellison, and Minton. This makes about 25 new members for 1915 (very healthy). Fanciers in the Midlands who wish to join a society cannot do better than join us, we want to cater for every section of the fancy; send your names along to Mr. Jones. Decided to hold N.F. Show first Sat. in July. Birds staged by 2.30; fee 8d. per cage for first three entries, and 6d. each after. Each member to be responsible for one entry at 8d. if he does not show (Roller section exempt). We hope fanciers will fall in with this idea, as it has been done with the hope of making members show so that we can have a record Nest Feather Show. 2d. will be deducted from the first three entries towards the working and balance to be distributed as prize money in each section to which the members belong. Mr. J. H. Roe judge. Will members do their best to be present at 8 prompt next Wednesday, May 5. Washing exhibition by our old and experienced fancier, Mr. J. Bastock; this will be very helpful to all members, and if you don't come you may miss something worth knowing. A. C. Shirley, Assist. Sec.

QUEEN'S PARK C.B.S.

Meeting, Emmanuel Hall, Harrow Road, April 22, Mr. Clark chair, a fair number present. The late Mr. Easterling was down to lecture on the Yorkshire Canary. Mr. Dewhurst, who was in attendance, is interesting himself on behalf of the late Mr. Easterling's widow, who is left unprovided for, and is collecting funds to assist her. Members will be asked to subscribe to same, and it is hoped will not forget one who was always willing to help a fancier, to give a lecture or advice, and always ready to put his hand in his pocket to give a special; he will be missed by a wide circle of fanciers. 8s. 6d. was collected from members present, and it is hoped the fund will be handsomely subscribed to. Mr. Dewhurst was asked, and consented, to judge the next young bird show. Members will be asked to vote for judge for annual show on account of the decease of Mr. Easterling. Mr. Dewhurst was then asked if he would answer any questions on birdy subjects, and kindly consented to do so, and he ably answered questions on seeds and their uses, breeding for quality of feather in Yorkshires, getting British birds in condition, and his remarks on bird catching with hand nets, and anecdotes of years of experience in the Fancy were very interesting. Mr. Dewhurst has consented to give the members a lecture and demonstration with hand nets on a future occasion, and it is hoped members will give him a warm reception. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Dewhurst closed the meeting. —W. J. Ratcliffe, Assist. Sec.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Meeting, April 20, Oddfellows' Hall, Morley Street, Mr. French presiding over a large attendance. Decided to have a ramble to Awns and Dendles, May 9. Member and visitors who intend going, please send to Mr. Reed, 2, Victory Street, Keyham, Devonport, by May 3. Luncheon, 1s. 6d. Train leaves Millbay 10.15. Mr. Craven read grand paper on the Yorkshire Canary, which was greatly appreciated by the members, and we hope in the near future to see it in the Press for the benefit to our soldier and sailor members who are away. Mr. Craven said that those who desired to be efficient in anything, must concentrate their spare time in one direction, so as to gain proficiency, and must not have the subject surrounded by material that is foreign to it. Taking the bird in detail, he said the ideal Yorkshire should be approximately 6½ inches in length; from top of head to centre of neck, ½ of an inch; from head to point of shoulders, 1½; from head to thighs, 3 inches; from head to end of flight, 4½; with 1½ of tail showing below the flight. He stated it was always advisable to have green blood in the bird room, as it improves colour. Mr. Craven brought some coloured plates of the Yorkshire, dated back 30 years ago, showing the difference from the present type. After the paper questions were asked and suitably answered, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Craven brought an enjoyable meeting to a close.—W. Luscombe.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATINGS POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES.

Meeting, April 19, with a good attendance of over thirty members. One new member was elected, making the 14th this year. It was decided to engage the Bennett Street Schools for the N.F. show; selection of judge left over till next meeting. Final arrangements were made for the ramble on May 2nd; meeting place, Stockport Fire Station, at 2. The chief item on the agenda was a lecture on "The Diseases of Cage Birds," by Mr. J. W. Cutmore, of Liverpool. Our members always look forward to Mr. Cutmore's lectures, and once again there was a keen interest taken in the useful and interesting information the lecturer imparted. We were shown the internal organs of various birds, illustrating the construction of the bird and the effects of diseases. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Cutmore. Next meeting, May 3; we are to hear Mr. Barker Clegg lecture on "Preparing Birds for Exhibition," so please let us have the usual large attendance.—F. Hayward, Hon. Sec.

BARROW C.B.S.

Meeting, Gardner's Restaurant, April 21, Mr. A. Hudson presiding, with a good turn-out of members. Decided to have an open discussion next meeting night, May 5, on sweating hens and bad feeders. This should prove very instructive and helpful to all. There will also be a big discussion on the advisability of running an open show this year. Mr. W. Willison, jun., gave an interesting lecture, entitled, "Treatment to Novices." Mr. Willison is a life fancier, being the son of the well-known Scotch Fancy breeder, R. Willison. In his lecture he dwelt largely upon his father's injunction always to treat a novice honestly, for the first treatment a novice received often settled his destiny, and decided whether he made a fancier or not. If a novice was looked upon simply as a good market for inferior birds, this in many cases finished him in the Fancy. He told a very interesting story of his father starting a novice. He gave him a Scotch Fancy cock to match with a hen he had already, and this raw novice bred from the pair the winner of the Glasgow cup and Govan cup. Having to attend to his father's birds, he became a firm fancier himself. His father started him on his own as a novice by giving him a pair of Borders, and he bred some good birds from them, one getting 1st and special at Barrow, and 3rd at the Palace. His lecture brought many different views from members present, and caused a very lively discussion. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer brought a very good meeting to a close. Still enrolling new members.—D. McFarlane, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

First meeting of the new Council was held April 24. Mr. Butler, the new president, expressed his appreciation of the position they had elected him to, and he would like the delegates to convey the same to the various societies. He was pleased to meet new faces, and the old delegates. The older ones gave one confidence, and he hoped they would all assist him in carrying out the duties of the Council. He also expressed his pleasure in meeting the new sec. The Sec. thanked the delegates for electing him to this important position, and hoped he would be able to carry on the work to the benefit of the Union, taking his view of all matters not from a society point of view, but to the strengthening and uplifting of the Union as a whole. He hoped that at the end of his term he would have merited the confidence they had placed in him. Discussion took place with regard to the new rule passed on the ballot paper re uniform subscription for all societies within a radius of five miles, and it was eventually carried that the subs. be 4s. The members' fee from various societies was settled at eightpence per member. With regard to novice medals for the coming show season, it was decided to give six for Yorks. and two for Norwich. Balloting for judging for the various societies came out as follows: Skelmanthorpe, Mr. R. Halliday; Shipley, Mr. J. Bailey; City of Bradford, Mr. A. Hirst; Bradford West, Mr. J. C. Barnes; Tong, Mr. H. Sutcliffe; Manningham, Mr. J. Greaves; Queensbury, Mr. W. Mundell; Huddersfield, Mr. E. Clegg; Laisterdyke, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe; Windhill, Mr. J. H. Chittenden; Great Horton, Mr. H. W. Battye; Bradford East, Mr. W. H. Shackleton; Halifax, Mr. P. Mason; Keighley, Mr. H. W. Walsh. Sub-committee elected: Messrs. R. Garnett, F. Hammond, A. Brown, C. R. Rushworth, T. Elsegood, W. Hellas, and W. Chapman. Decided that the various delegates get the feeling of their respective societies with regard to coming shows, and report at next meeting whether same should be on the sliding scale or not. Secs. please note that members' fees, also names and addresses are now due.—S. Midgley, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Meeting April 19, 67 The Broadway, Mr. W. J. Heath, the newly-elected chairman, presiding over a goodly attendance of members and visitors. The Chairman announced that Mr. F. Easterling, one of the members, had succumbed after a long illness, and the funeral had taken place that afternoon. On behalf of the Society the secretary had sent a wreath. A vote of condolence with the widow was passed, and a collection on her behalf realised £1 4s. 6d. Mr. C. W. Huckle was elected a member, and there was one nomination.

Mr. J. Robson gave a lecture on "The value of green blood," a subject the lecturer said which required very careful handling. He should not advise the novice to experiment with green birds, but to buy the ready-made article from a reliable fancier. The Green Canary was used to get that beautiful deep rich colour in the feathers, so much admired on the show bench, but great care had to be taken in selecting the right kind of green bird. What was known as the Liverpool green was no use at all for improving the colour and texture of the feather; the bronze green was what was required. Green could be made useless by double buffing. The reason for pairing yellow to buff was to retain the rich silky texture of the feather, and to keep the web of the feather as narrow as possible. But if any one continued breeding yellow to buff for five or six generations they lost all depth of colour. The careful breeder only did this for two or three seasons and then introduced the green blood. The lecturer instanced the lack of colour in the Lancashire Coppy, caused by the old-time breeders destroying every marked or variegated bird they bred. Present-day fanciers had gained experience and were wiser, since they now knew the great value the Crest breeder placed on the marked Lancashire. The best way to introduce the green blood was on the mule side, a there was then no danger of losing in size. He did not advise breeders to double yellow unless they had abundance of feather in their birds and wanted to reduce it. Double-yellowing narrowed the web of the feather, while double buffing broadened it.

A discussion followed, and Mr. Robson answered question to the satisfaction of the members. He was given a hearty vote of thanks.—G. Griffiths, Hon. Sec.

WEST STANLEY (Empire) F. & F.S.

Meeting, April 18, R. Peart presiding, with a good attendance, but we wish members would turn up at the advertised time. Mr. R. S. Bewicke was elected to judge cage birds at our show, Nov. 20. Proposed to have a trip to the Dairy and Scottish National shows, all arrangements to be in the hands of Chairman (Mr. R. Pear) and Sec.; members to pay what they wish each fortnight. A hearty welcome is given to fanciers in the district to join us, as the more we get the better. Any further information can be had of the Chairman or myself.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting, Maskell's Hotel, Apr. 15, Mr. E. James chair, in absence of Mr. Whetton, reported that we could not obtain the Carlton Banqueting Hall for the open show. Decided to leave the question of hall over until next meeting. Mr. Smith raised the question of counting of cup points, and after some discussion gave notice of motion that points count backwards from commended to 1st. Sec. reported that Mr. A. Phillips wished to resign his membership. Resolved to have two young bird shows, June 17 and July 7, judge for the June show to be elected at next meeting; entry fee 7d.; prizes on sliding scale. Mr. W. H. Bowen was elected a member. Members try and attend next meeting as a very important matter has to be dealt with, also subs. are now due.—E. Thomas, Sec.

BEDFORD & BEDS UNITED C.BS

On April 15, the members met for a social evening with tea and lectures. After a tea which was splendidly served, Mr. George Osborn lectured to the members on Canary Rearing, and Mr. Arthur Simons, the hon. sec., upon Colour Harmony, and its relation to bird staging, setting forth some of the difficulties of staging birds, pointing out how they may be met, if one knows the science of colour, and giving a few principles to be borne in mind with the various colours. Mr. G. Osborn's lecture was splendid, and all the more appreciated, seeing he has stepped into his father's shoes, that gentleman being a Canary breeder many years before the lecturer was born, and he has no doubt given his son many a useful tip. Mr. Osborn is known to have one of the finest aviaries of young in the district, and this is attributed to the way he manages his stock. He was besieged with questions, which were ably answered, and one felt that if they had missed so many useful tips at this time of the year, many a young would he lost that might have been saved, had one but known the way to save them.—A. Simons, Sec.

YORK C.B.S.

Meeting, Apl. 12, All Saints' Schoolroom, Mr. A. Robinson, chair, and a good attendance. Two members were elected. Mr. A. Humphries, the well-known exhibitor and breeder of the Norwich Canary, gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on the breeding of the Norwich Canary. After telling of his experiences in showing, he dealt with the birds in full, pointing out what should be sought for and what avoided; he stated that he was a firm believer in introducing Cinnamon blood to introduce good colour for breeding purposes, and told us to avoid Liverpool Greens. Still, he said, a good bronze Green cock was a very useful bird to have in the breeding room. Mr. Humphries dealt at great length on the shape and carriage, giving full particulars as to what he considered the model Norwich, and told us about his breeding-room, cages, etc. All his cages are double breeders, with wires at the bottom of the partition for the old birds to feed the young after they were separated. Numerous questions were asked, all of which Mr. Humphries satisfactorily answered, and in conclusion said that he should be very pleased to give any young member who cared to consult him any information in his power. We propose holding an open show in November or December, arrangements to be made later. V. G. F. Zimmerman, Hon. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

General meeting, Apl. 10, Market Tavern, Bradford. Prizes for 1914-15 were presented by chairman, W. A. Wilson, and Mr. F. Hammond presented the CAGE BIRDS specials, giving a splendid speech, which was well received by all. He said that it was a grand thing that we had such gentlemen as Messrs. F. Carl, J. W. Ramsden, E. Hattersley, J. Thomas, and others to give us such splendid trophies. Officers elected for 1915-16:—Pres., Mr. E. Hattersley; Vice-Pres., Messrs. J. W. Ramsden, F. Carl, W. A. Cowgill, J. Thomas, A. Humphries, A. Hirst, W. Crawshaw, G. Harland; chair, Mr. W. A. Wilson; vice-chair, Mr. A. Hirst; committee, Messrs. H. Clegg, F. Rhodes, H. J. Chittenden, W. A. Cowgill, A. Haigh, J. Chambers, S. Heap, A. Humphries, B. Airton, W. H. Ball, E. Hattersley, J. W. Kaberry, T. H. Mason, C. Pickup, W. Crawshaw, D. Hunter, J. Ree, J. Mottram, J. Wilcock, jun., H. Lord, Sam Wilcock, 16, Back Manor Street, Ecclesihill, Bradford, was appointed hon. sec. and treas., in place of our old and esteemed friend, Mr. F. Rhodes, who is going under an operation at Bradford Infirmary, and I am sure that all will wish him a very speedy recovery, and hope that he will soon be amongst us again. All communications must now be sent to the above address. All societies wishing to have the O.N.P.C. patronage must let me know as early as possible, and oblige—Sam Wilcock.

NORTHERN BRITISH M. & F.B.C.

Meeting, March 27, Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market. Chairman (Mr. Petterson) presided over a good attendance. A very successful table show was held, Mr. J. Maddison judged. Linnet, 1st, 2nd, Bertram; 3, Petterson, 4, Hyslop. Green: 1, Bertram; 2, Hooper; 3, Petterson. Goldf. or Bullf.: 1, Hooper; 2, 3, Petterson. Siskin, etc.: 1, Bertram; 2, Petterson; 3, 4, Hooper. A.O.V.: 1, 3, Bertram; 2, Hooper; vhc, Petterson; hc, Hyslop. Pair: 1, 2, Hooper; 3, Petterson. For.: 1, 2, vhc, Voutt; 3, Petterson. Mr. Bertram won special most points British, and Mr Voutt Foreign. Cup given by Mr Tindle for most points over the series of table shows, Mr. Hooper, 66 points, silver spoon given by the society, Mr Voutt. Next meeting, May 1, Shield's Cafe, when the balance-sheet, election of officials, etc., and the presentation of cups and spoons won last show season will take place. Members please attend. Fanciers are cordially invited.

The following are winners of cups and spoons at shows where our patronage was granted. British Bird Cup, E. Hooper 38 points, J. Scott 35, Jamieson and Johnson 31, J. Tobling 31, G. Barker 25, J. Curry, Sec.

FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting, April 24, Gothenburg, Coaltown of Wemyss, Mr. T. Campbell, President, in the chair. Decided to hold a club show confined to the League on Dec. 18, in Lochgelly, with a full classification (81 classes), and specialist judge for each section, the sec. being instructed to write to judges asking their terms. Agreed to hold next meeting in Dunfermline, May 29. Meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chair.—Jas. Cordery, Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Meeting, Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, April 20, with a good number present. Mr. Stormont, chairman. A letter from Secretary of Colinton and Currie A.S., inviting the members of the Edinburgh C.B.S. to join in ramble through Dreghorn Estate, on May 29, met with approval, and it was unanimously agreed that we join in with them; arrangements to be given out at next meeting. New members elected: Messrs. B. Shaw, J. Skinner, and N. Grant. Being question night, the Sec. gave the members an opportunity of having some of their "knotty problems" answered. All present took part in the questions, and the answering of them to the best of their ability, the Chairman remarking that he hoped a lot of good had been done in the way of saving young birds this season. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Stormont brought a very enthusiastic meeting to a close.—John C. Charlton, Sec.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

WIGAN.

There will be a singing contest (time and quality) at the Bay Horse Hotel, Whelley, Wigan, on May 8, when the proprietor, Mr. Sam Fishwick, will give prizes according to entrance. Entrance fee 1s. each bird. First birds staged at 2.30 prompt.—A. Leyland, Sec.—(Advt.)

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest, George and Dragon, Bridge Street, April 24, for four prizes. Four minutes' time singing. 1, Nelson, 134; 2, Wainwright, 106; 3, Morley, 103; 4, Watkiss, 88. Open sing, April 25, for 3 prizes. 1, Watkiss, 138; 2, 3, Nelson, 96, 87.—S. Morley, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn Linnet Singing Association first members' singing contest for quality, April 24, Headquarters, Empire Hotel, Bolton Road. 24 birds competed for 6 prizes. 1, Dobson; 2, 6, Topping; 3, Cowburn; 4, Pickering; 5, Bentley.—T. Hayhurst, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

LINNET contest, Woodman Inn, Horsefair. Open sing, April 24. 30 entered for three prizes, four minutes' time singing. 1, Nelson, 150; 2, Beard, 93; 3, Bull, 92. Open sing, April 25, 33 entered for three prizes, three minutes' time singing. 1, Beard, 103; 2, Pugh, 84; 3, Scotson, 65. Biggest breaks this week, Beard 52 and 50.—S. Pugh, Sec.

KIPPAX.

Open Linnet sing, April 24, 27 birds entered for three prizes. We fully expected some visitors, but the weather was not promising, and there was an open sing at Pontefract as well. We had some good singing. 1st and 2nd, shared, Collinson and Plows; 3, Cooper. Time-keepers, O Potter and R. Collinson. Tappers, J. Wallis, J. Cooper.—R. Plows, Sec.

HINDSFORD.

Open contest, Federal Arms, April 24. 22 birds entered for time and quality, 5½ minutes' sing. 1, 3, Fairhurst; 2, Statham. Quality: 1, Dixon; 2, Ashcroft; 3, Tattam. Next open contest for time and quality, May 8, Hindsford Inn, Hindsford.—J. Fairhurst, Sec. (Please see notice above as to forthcoming contests.—Ed.)

BARNSLEY.

Linnet open sing, Commercial Inn, New Street, April 24, for 5 minutes' time singing, when some very good singing was heard. Shepherd, timer; Wareing, chalker. Jones, 4 min. 9 sec., Coe 3.57, Jones 3.49. April 25 was the best contest this season, four birds doing above 4 minutes in 5 minutes' time singing. Only a second divided 1st and 2nd. Coe 4 min. 38 sec., Jones 4.37, Jones 4.24, Coles 4.1.—J. Hardman, Sec.

WEST CORNFORTH.

Linnet singing contest, April 24. Fairless, judge. 1, Henry, Usham Moor; 2, John, Hartlepool; 3, Walker, Broom Park; timekeeper, Hodgson. A. Armstrong, Sec.

Walker will sing any man in County; meet Half Moon, Spennymoor. Singing on May 7, Elliott preferred. Linnet singing will be held at Butcher's Arms, Merrington Lane, Spennymoor, Saturday, May 1. Meet 2 o'clock. Fairless, judge. (Advt.)

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet Club, Plasterer's Arms, Skinner Lane, April 17. 24 birds competed. 1, Parkinson; 2, Whigfield; 3, Hoyd; 4, Lorriman. April 18, 28 birds competed. 1, Smith; 2, Playford; 3, Whigfield; 4, Lorriman. Judges, C. Copper, P. Madden; C. Biss, timekeeper. April 25, 23 competed. 1, Jennings; 2, 3, Whigfield; 4, Playford. Judges, C. Lorriman, H. Hayes; time-keeper, P. Madden. A. Bryan, Sec.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A., Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road. Open contest for quality Linnet singing, April 24. 23 birds sang for three prizes. 1, J. Chadwick; 2, 3, shared by Towers and F. Johnson. Judges, Hayes and Lacy. April 25, 31 sang for 4 prizes. 1, J. Parker; 2, T. Johnson; 3, Towers; 4, shared by C. Ward and Richardson. Judges, C. Grant, Naylor, and Butler.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Quality singing for Linnets, Old Bird House, Skinners' Arms, Bushythorpe, April 25. 19 good birds competed for three prizes, and the singing delighted the crowded room. 1, Blackburn; 2, 3, Sheard, King and Laycock. Judges, Clayton and Selfins. Members please note that all entrance money must be paid up by May 9.—T. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

NOT YET BREEDING (Tom-tit).—I do not think anything is wrong beyond the birds being just a little backward in condition. They will probably very soon show more earnest desire to nest. The fact that a pair of Bullfinches you have are breeding is no criterion that all Canaries should also be nesting. In addition to the staple seed diet, give every second day a small teaspoonful of egg food with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, teazle, and broken groats. Give also a small growing stool of young dandelion daily. This should suffice to quickly bring them into condition.

TESTING EGGS (G.C.).—It is not difficult to distinguish whether eggs are fertile or not when they have been sat upon from about five days onwards, by holding them up in front of a strong light in the tips of the thumb and forefinger. A piece of black, or dark-coloured, card with a hole about the size of the outline of an egg, and held behind the egg to shield the light from the eye will be a great help. If the egg is fertile the contents seen through the shell will appear dark and opaque, more or less according to the time they have been sat upon, whilst one that has not been fertilised will appear clear and transparent, the same as a new-laid egg, which may be looked at for the sake of comparison. At the same time I would advise you not to let such things as anxiety and suspense worry you whilst the eggs are undergoing incubation, or you are not unlikely to upset the hens by fussy interference. Take things more as a matter of course, and do not worry about testing eggs, which is of no material service. You would find the method more fully dealt with in the handbook on "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free.

CANNOT PERCH (A.B.).—It is impossible to give you any helpful advice, as you do not give the slightest clue to found an opinion upon. The bird is clearly in no condition to put up for breeding, so you may as well separate her, and cage her alone, and whilst doing this thoroughly examine into the condition of the eyes and sight, and the claws and feet. See that the perches are of a proper size and well fitting, not loose and wobbly. Then give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut daily for a week, and add to the drinking water every second day during the week ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. If bird is not then considerably better please write again, and give the fullest particulars you can of all symptoms displayed, and also state the condition in which you find the eyes and feet.

TROUBLE WITH HENS (W.P.B.).—It is certainly curious that so many of your hens should have simultaneously fallen ill with egg-binding troubles, and I am inclined to think that the case will be found in your management to which the birds are all alike exposed. It may also be due to some ovarian affection set up by some item in your bill of fare. The only certain way to clear up this was to submit the body of the one that died to a post-mortem, which would have been of the utmost value to you. If another dies in similar circumstances, by all means get a post-mortem on it. The hens, I suspect, are of just that type in which the use of dandelion as a green food is extremely risky, and I would advise you to cut this, and also the linseed completely out of the dietary. In addition to the staple diet, give every second day for a fortnight or so, a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, teazle, niger, broken groats, and a slight sprinkling of mustard seed. Give a spray of watercress, chickweed, or the tender tips of young groundsel daily. In the water add 20 drops of syrup or buckthorn daily for three days, and after this give instead six drops each of tincture of calumba, tincture of steel and dilute sulphuric acid for a few days. I'm afraid these hens will do no good at breeding this season, and in any case you had better separate them for a fortnight or so, whilst undergoing the above treatment.

STOPPED TICKING (R. McL.).—Thanks for your report. Glad to hear that the bird has stopped making the ticking noise. Considering the condition of the bird when you wrote, this is almost all that may be hoped—alleviation, rather than cure. You cannot do better than continue the treatment advised before, giving it for a fortnight, and then omitting it for a week. Continue thus for two or three months, when the bird may make a fair amount of progress. Only too pleased to be of assistance at any time.

TROUBLESOME GREY LICE (Miss Hater).—I hardly agree with you as to the difficulty of eradicating grey lice, as, providing the birds are not up for breeding, it is decidedly easier to deal with this trouble effectually than with red mites. If birds are not mated for breeding, and you are expert at hand washing, or have a friend who can assist you in the matter, wash all the infested birds by hand, and in the two first waters you use in the process mix a little Creolin, in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of water, and whilst the birds are drying well wash out the cages and appliances with a similar solution. Repeat the whole procedure after an interval of a week, to destroy any new stock that may have hatched out from "nits" in the meantime, and you will be free enough from this pest for the time being. If the birds are breeding, the best thing you can do is to give a bath three times a week for a time, and dissolve in the water a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash, in each pint of the water, for the birds to bathe themselves. As a rule it is weakly stock that are infested with this pest, so you would do well to look into the general condition of your stock.

NO PROGRESS (Mosser).—There can be no doubt that you mated the birds in the first instance before they were in breeding condition, which is always a mistake, and very often upsets the birds for some time, and prevents them settling down to business in earnest. As the season is now getting into full swing, it will be safe to leave those pairs together which you have already re-mated, but the Yorkshires may just as well be kept in the same way as now until the hen shows some definite signs of wanting to nest. There is nothing whatever to be gained by putting birds together which have no such desire. Feed as follows for a few weeks, and if the birds are in a normal condition of health they should very soon be making more earnest efforts at nesting. For staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape seed. In addition give separately every second day a small teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts each of hemp, millet and niger; one part each teazel and broken groats; half part linseed, and quarter part mustard to each pair of birds, or half this quantity to each bird caged separately. On the alternate days give to each pair a small teaspoonful of egg food with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and of this also give half the quantity to singly caged birds. Give a freshly gathered stool of young dandelion-leaves, blossoms and seed heads, daily to each bird. You may add twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water of each bird for two days, but no other drug treatment should be necessary.

PLUCKING FEATHERS (C. E. S.).—Your letter rather confirms my previous suspicion that the bird is not really a Canary. You should make a rough coloured sketch of it, no matter how rough, and send it, together with a full description of its size and general appearance, especially the size and shape of its beak and feet and the type of tail, to our Mr. Page for identification. Meantime you might add white millet to its staple diet to the extent of about one-third of the bulk. It is not unlikely the feather-plucking has developed into a habit, in which case no medicinal treatment is of any use at all. You may try the effect of tying a few pieces of short string on the wires of its cage, near the ends of the perches, for it to amuse itself with, and thus divert its attention from its plumage. A piece of cuttlefish bone stuck in the wires for it to peck at would also be useful for this purpose.

GROWTH ON WING (Forth).—(1) The growth is undoubtedly an abnormal feather, often termed a "blood-feather." The best treatment is to tie a ligature of fine silk or thread tightly around the base, close to the skin, and leave the rest to Nature. The growth will shrivel and drop off naturally in a week or two, without any inconvenience to the bird. Should it have burst again, so that a ligature is impracticable, paint the spot with a little extract of Witch Hazel every second day for a week. Your dietary errs rather on the side of generosity. For the next few weeks omit the linseed from the mixture altogether; stop the bread and milk and substitute some kind of green salad for the banana, and give the green food daily. Every second day for a week add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice to the water. (2) There is no certain way of distinguishing the sex of Norwich Plainheads different from other breeds. The differences are all comparative, and often very slight. In a general way the cock is a trifle larger and fuller about the head and neck, the eye is fuller and bolder, the carriage and general demeanour more bold and defiant, and the call-note more incisive and ringing. The under tail coverts are also fuller, giving a more graceful sweep of outline from the lower breast to the tail. The voice itself is more mellow, and the song full, sustained, and unbroken, the throat pulsating very perceptibly as the notes are produced. The song is quite the most reliable guide for the tyro.

WHAT CLASS? (One Interested).—No, the bird you describe is not eligible to compete in a class for "clear or ticked." Having more than two technical marks, it is only eligible for the "Uneven-marked" class. Of course, I am taking it that the dark feathers on the left wing are flight feathers. If I am wrong, and the dark feathers on the wing are among the small feathers on the wing, butt, or bow, "scapulars" or small coverts, in fact, then the bird would be eligible for a class for ticked birds. It does not matter about the marking being very little. So long as it exists on technical points it must count as a mark, irrespective of its size.

EGG-BINDING (Novice, A. M.).—Your query reached the office too late for a reply to appear in last issue (please see Rule 6). I fear the cause of the trouble in this case is a delicate and weakly constitution. I doubt whether you will do any good with her, this season anyway; but you may try what the following treatment will do for her by the time she goes to nest the second time. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and dusted with soft sugar every second day. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, teazle, linseed and broken groats. Give a spray of watercress, chickweed, or the tender tips of groundsel daily, but be careful to avoid giving dandelion to this hen. In the drinking water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for three consecutive days. Afterwards give six drops each of tincture of steel, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid. When she is about nesting again, add ten drops of glycerine and twenty drops of gin to the water about every second day until the clutch is laid, and also smash up a little old mortar and mix it with the sand on the floor of the cage.

OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FEEDING GOLDFINCH AND CANARY (A New Reader).—You have omitted to send your name and address, which is contrary to our rules. In feeding a cock Goldfinch and hen Canary it is the Goldfinch you have to study more than his mate; he is the more delicate of the two, and consequently the more difficult to manage; for this reason it is a good plan to keep them apart while the Canary is sitting and rearing. When they are together give canary as a staple diet, a spoonful of mixed seeds every other day, and on alternate days a dozen sound sunflower seeds, these are capital food for the Goldie, and also the Canary, but as she will only consume a small quantity, the remainder will keep the Goldie going. If you part them when the hen is sitting all she will require until the young are hatched is sound Canary seed. Many Finches are not to be trusted with the Canary continually, as they are destructive to the eggs, and the usual method is to shut them off each night when she is expected to lay. I have had Goldies I have been able to allow with the hen all through, but the majority of breeders do not trust them, and to shut them off is the safer way, if you value the eggs and young ones. If you are anxious to keep them together, just try him for one clutch.

BULLFINCHES BREEDING (Tom-Tit).—(1) I have never had any personal knowledge of Bullfinches breeding in captivity, but from time to time fanciers have stated their successes with them, and these I fear are quite isolated cases, as the cock Bullie is a notoriously bad breeder when in confinement. (2) If you are successful with your birds and they should succeed in hatching young ones, you had better feed them in the following manner. Give seeds as usual, including plenty of sunflower, procure some good quality insectile food as given to Nightingales, etc., and make it just crumbly moist, adding about a fifth of hard-boiled egg broken up with a fork; they should be supplied with this, freshly mixed each morning, in fact twice a day would be better, also supply wild food of all kinds, including plenty of seeding grass, this latter is excellent food for them, and they will use a good quantity of it, if they start to feed the young ones. (3) Leave them together; if you part them they will be so upset, that your chances of success will be considerably reduced.

TAMENESS OF SISKIN-MULE (H.O.T.).—The excessive tameness of your bird is not an exceptional case. I do not know that the Siskin-Mule is more tractable than say the Redpoll-Mule, they are both descendants of birds that are about as easy to get steady as any of our British birds, but tameness in any species is not strictly speaking a general characteristic, individuals differ; some come to hand at once, others remain for ever flightly and unsteady. This applies equally to Canaries and Mules, the latter as a rule are not noted for tameness.

CANARY AND BULLFINCH HEN (A.C.H.P.).—You appear to be feeding your birds correctly, and I am surprised to hear the hen did not lay, especially as they were on such good terms. I think I would try them another season, and if not successful, it will be because the hen is either barren or beyond the breeding age. As a rule the hen Bullie is a prolific egg producer, the difficulty is to get them fertile.

MATE FOR GOLDFINCH HEN (Novice W.E.).—I would advise you to mate your Goldie with a good steady cock Greenfinch, the produce is not one one of the rarest Hybrids, but you will be more likely to be successful with them than by trying other crosses. If you wish to try something more choice, the Linnet or Redpoll would perhaps be the next best, they should be introduced to each other as early as possible.

FEEDING GOLDFINCH MULE (A. Poole).—During the summer months Goldfinch-Canary mules should be kept rather low in condition, as they are likely to get very rank. Let the staple food be four parts canary and one part summer rape, a spoonful of mixed seed twice a week, and a few sunflowers occasionally. Be liberal with all kinds of green food and wild seeds. Keep him in a big cage, and let him bathe frequently. As the moult approaches you can increase the supply of mixed seed, and of course soft food in July if you intend to colour feed.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

BUDGERIGARS (A.M.C.).—I should not introduce the new birds into the cage at present. Wait till any young hatched out are fairly fledged and almost ready to leave the nest. While there is a risk of disturbance if you put in the new birds, there is a possibility that the incubating hen may not desert, and you must decide whether you take what risk there is. On the whole, perhaps better not. You are anxious to have young birds. If the eggs are good they will hatch out about the 24th or 25th inst. If you then see any half-shells about you can conclude that there are young in the nest. The best course will be to secure the one brood if possible, and then turn in the new birds.

PARROT WITH BARE PATCHES (E. Green-away).—There has not yet been time for any permanent improvement; it takes time to undo the effects of a period of improper treatment. You should not indulge it with cocoa, at such times as she has been getting this, have a little chemical food, fairly strong, prepared with hot water and slightly sweetened, and let it have this when it asks for the cocoa. You must continue the treatment already advised and report again in another few weeks. I do not advise starving it to any particular food, and as regards the seed, supply the ordinary mixture, but also keep a tin of canary and millet in the cage as well, or give it a mixture of half canary seed and millet, half the usual large mixture, and then if it picks out the large first do not be in any hurry to replenish the tin till it has partaken also of some of the small seed. The two preparations to which you refer are very similar.

PARAKEETS IN SMALL AVIARY. (A. H.).—You certainly cannot keep many, as these birds require room. I should advise you to have not more than four pairs of the smaller Parrakeets, say two pairs Budgerigars, and one pair each Lovebirds and Parrakeets. Choose your Lovebirds from the following Madagascar, Blue-winged, and Black-cheeked, and the Parrakeets from: All-green, yellow-winged, orange-flanked, or in lieu of these a pair of Cockatiels. Or if you prefer you could people it entirely with Budgerigars, either 3 or 4 pairs, but do not in such case procure all from the same source. If you get each pair from a different source, your young could then pair promiscuously without fear of deteriorating your stock by inbreeding. Our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our manager, would tell you fully how to proceed.

FOOD FOR YOUNG GREY PARROT (Urgent).—A purchaser should always ascertain how a young Parrot has been fed when procuring it, and continue this dietary for a time, if it be wrong, then gradually getting it on to the proper dietary. You had better give it a little boiled maize for a time; this must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour. Boil the maize till soft (but not into a sticky mass), drain off all water, then add ten drops of cod liver oil emulsion, allow this to soak in a little, then give it a stir up and supply to the bird. If properly prepared, the corn should remain whole, yet be quite soft. (2) It all depends whether the bird is used to water or not, if it is then it can be left in, but otherwise you must gradually accustom it to it by merely letting it have a few sips several times during the day, then a little later it should be safe to leave it in altogether. You must also supply seed mixture and ripe fruit, such as banana, apple, etc., and keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage. As time goes on you can gradually bring it in to the diet of the adult bird. You had better get our Nutshell "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our manager—it will give you full information.

SHAMAS NOT FEEDING (A.M.B.).—These birds do not as a rule moult twice in the year, but at first birds in captivity are a bit abnormal in this respect, and at times take a partial moult out of season. They are not great eaters as a rule, and rather dainty, picking out of their mixture what they fancy, and leaving the rest. They are insectivorous birds, and can have mealworms fairly liberally, certainly a dozen per bird, per diem, will not hurt them, and they can also have any other insects you can capture for them, such as beetles, earwigs, smooth caterpillars, grasshoppers, spiders, etc. You do not say whether you are keeping these bird in cage or aviary, and this handicaps me to some extent in replying. I should suggest your getting one pound each of ants' eggs and dried flies, and increasing the bulk of these in the insectivorous mixture you buy. You could also add to the mixture, after it is moistened, a little York cheese. You can easily crumb the latter by pressing it through a piece of wire gauze with a knife—the gauze should be stretched on a light wood frame.

AMAZON WITH NASAL DISCHARGE (D.W.).—Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water, continue the above treatment for a month at least. Bathe or spray the nostrils with a tepid glyco-thymoline solution till the running ceases. In addition to the seed mixture supply ripe fruit daily, it can also have biscuit, dry stale crusts and plain cake. For the present give it a little boiled maize daily, about a dessert spoonful boil till soft, drain off all water, drop over it 15 drops of cod-liver oil emulsion, and when cool supply to the bird. Cuttlebone, grit, and a piece of wood (natural branch is best) should be continually in the cage. Keep the bird warm and out of draught. Examine its mouth, and if furred, or slimy, or there are any white spots showing, put in a little honey and borax from the end of a stick, not much at a time, daily till the mouth is quite clear. Report progress about a month hence.

HARBINGERS . . . OF . . . SPRING

MIGRANTS THAT MAY EASILY BE IDENTIFIED.

The Birds in our picture have been drawn from three specimens that are as familiar on our show benches as are their wild brethren on our countryside. The fine Redstart on the left won for its owner, Mr. Chas. Burrows, of Stratford-on-Avon, six firsts, two seconds and a third during last season. The Blackcap at the top is owned by Messrs. J. and R. Lewis, Workington, and has won five firsts, seven specials, and two seconds, the only times out. The other bird is the well-known Wheatear, shown by Mr. J. Dewhurst, West Kensington, third prize at the Horticultural Hall Show, etc.

ADVERTISEMENT CHARGES.

6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny for each word over eighteen.
Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.
Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

TO CREST BREEDERS

Having bought the entire stock of a well-known breeder, I am offering exceptional value in this variety. Every bird is for sale. The stock consists of a large number of Crested cocks. These are large birds, very well feathered, with good bony crests, reaching in some cases to end of beak. There are also some good Crested hens, also some very massive Crestbred cocks and hens. I am offering these birds at following prices: Cocks or hens, 10/6, 15/6, 15/-, 20/-, 20/-, 40/-, 50/- each. Every bird is worth double. I will send on approval to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, and will guarantee absolute satisfaction to everyone.

Roller Canaries.

VOOGT'S STRAIN.

Seven crates, containing 1,890 Canaries, arrived safely, Tuesday evening, 4th May.

The various orders in hand—500 in number—were all despatched by Wednesday evening. I am sorry for delay, but traffic having been suspended, it was unavoidable.

There will not be many more consignments, consequently I advise all dealers to forward their orders, accompanied by cheque, at once. Canaries are not sent away to any one dealer or amateur without cash.

TO DEALERS ONLY.

7 No. II. for 42/-; 7 No. III. for 35/-.

Cocks No. II., 7/6 each. These are the birds usually advertised having the Nightingale and Woodlark note, with sundry other qualifications.

Cocks, No. III., 6/- each. There is a great demand for this class of bird, all being good, sound, serviceable Rollers.

Hens, No. I. class, to match Cocks I. class, 3/- each. Ordinary Cocks, 2 in wicker cage, 3/-; 14 in 7 cages, 16/-.

TERMS.—Cash with order only. All my customers may rely upon receiving birds answering above descriptions. They are at liberty to lodge any complaint with the Editor of "Cage Birds," by whose decision I shall abide. Telephone: 6341 Avenue.

JOHN HAMLYN,

A Great Consolation to Working Men.

Luton, May, 1915.—Birds arrived safely. I must say, wonderful for money. It's a great consolation to a working man to know there is such a straight and genuine man as you to send to, and receive full value for his money.—C. B. to W. Rudd.

Now, this is but one out of hundreds received almost weekly, for I receive more—many more—than any other advertiser, person or firm, of Canaries in the World, and am at all times prepared to give proof of this.—Signed, W. Rudd.

The birds I send you are sold for what they are worth on the perch, free from "bogus" names and fairy tales. That for great value is the only true test of cheapness. I therefore invite you to test my statements by having on approval, as all at their respective price are undeniable bargains.

NORWICH Cocks, 6/9, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Good Untried Hens, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/-; pairs, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 10/- up.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) is judging at Bootle June 19, Ardwick July 10, Laisterdyke (Bradford) Dec. 18, Kendal Dec. 27.

The Queen's Park (Glasgow) C.B.S. has fixed the annual show for Dec. 4, in Victoria Rooms, Victoria Road, Govan Hill, Glasgow, writes Mr. E. Holliday. Judges, Messrs. Holmes and Dewar, Edinburgh.

The members of the Clapham C.B.S. will ramble to Effingham Common on May 16. The hon. sec., Mr. T. J. Hose, 5, Wells Crescent, Camberwell, would be glad to hear from anyone desirous of joining the party; all are welcome, members or not.

Members of the London and Counties A.C.B. are requested to note next meeting, May 15, "Questions and Answers on Breeding Topics," writes Mr. W. Gilbert, hon. sec., and also to follow "Club Notices" in CAGE BIRDS, as there will be no more cards sent out.

For the ramble of the National British Bird and Mule Club to Beaconsfield and Denham, May 15, writes Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, the morning party leave Paddington by the 9.27 for Beaconsfield, and the afternoon party by the 1.25 train. Will all friends who would like to join us kindly let me know by May 12, so that arrangements can be made for refreshments, etc. Members to take their own tickets.

I am writing to express my thanks for the honour you have conferred upon me in placing my buff cock, 1st at the Cardiff National show, on the front page of CAGE BIRDS, an honour which I think is the highest compliment that can be paid to a fancier; also my very best thanks to the artist for the life-like drawing of him. Shall I, Mr. Editor, pay you a compliment in return by expressing my admiration for dear old CAGE BIRDS, which I have read from its commencement. Thanking you again for the honour.—P. J. Owen.

I have gone in partnership with my brother, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, and in future we shall show as J. and L. Woolhouse; the variety we keep are Norwich.

We have received the balance-sheet of the Sheffield O.S., which shows a very satisfactory result of the year's working, and a balance in hand of £71 7s. 5d., an increase of £6 2s. 11d. over the amount brought forward from 1913, although there was a loss on the members' show of Jan. 17, 1914, and only a small profit on the First Feather show. The two special members' shows produced substantial profits for the charities on behalf of which they were held. £5 was handed to the Lord Mayor's War Relief Fund, as the result of the combined societies members' show, and £5 14s. 5d. realised upon the second of the charity shows went to the Belgian Relief Fund.

OBITUARY.

MR. CHAS. PALMER (Shoreditch).

We regret to say that we have been informed of the death of one of London's best-known bird dealers, Mr. Charles Palmer, of Sclater Street, Shoreditch. Mr. Palmer, ably backed by his sons, built up a splendid business in that great birdy centre known as "Club Row," where the firm has now four fine, well fitted shops. Mr. Palmer, a man of quiet and unassuming disposition, was known to thousands of bird-keepers, and respected by all for his straightforward business methods. His demise will be mourned by a very wide circle of friends. The funeral is to take place on Tuesday next.

before the second and final edition is sold out. The first edition was exhausted in a week or so, and the second is almost gone.

Sixpence will purchase you a copy at any bookstall or newsagent's, or we will send you one post free for 7d. (Postal Order), but you should APPLY QUICKLY OR YOU WILL BE TOO LATE.

Besides being a directory of Cage Bird Clubs and Associations, Judges, Breeders, Dealers, Appliance Makers, etc., it tells you how to save money in many ways on your seed and food bill; how to conduct your operations on a profitable basis; how to regulate your work in the bird-room month by month; how to construct and stock a fascinating aviary; and numberless other things of supreme importance to all bird-keepers.

The work has been truly described by a reader as an Encyclopædia of Birdy Matter.

And there is not any bird-keeper who could fail to be interested and benefited by its perusal. Something for everybody is on every one of its pages.

The Raven's Wooing.

E. M. J., in "The Scotsman," tells of a Raven which a friend of his has had for about twenty-six years. Recently he has been liberated, but his house still remains to which he can retire at pleasure. "Jock" has developed a passion of adoration for a handsome laverock setter. No sooner does the dog show his shapely white body at the door than Jock runs to greet him. With the outstretched wings of an Ostrich, the sidelong gait of a crab, and the rapid phantasy of a Pavlova, Jock projects himself across the lawn, utters a low continuous chuckle, and placing himself before the setter's eye, curtseys and hobs, sidles round and round with half-open beak, the very picture of an unreasoning admiration, and, at last creeping nearer and nearer with that insane chuckle, lays his beak tenderly on the dog's body. Thoroughly disgusted, as always, the latter gets up and resignedly looks for another place.

Where the Nightingale is Missing.

The neighbourhood of Surlingham Broad, Norfolk, once a favourite haunt of Nightingales, was reported last year to be entirely deserted by them. This year again, it is said that not a single Nightingale has been heard in the locality.

Robin's Nest in a Bass Broom.

A Robin has hatched a clutch of four young in a nest which she built in the head of a bass broom resting against the garden fence of a small cottage in St. Albans. The broom-head was within a foot of the kitchen window.

Coming and Departing Guests.

England in spring-time is one vast clearing house for birds. Myriads have arrived, and myriads are going, northward bound. Birds seek the coolest part of their habitat for the rearing of their young. The birds now taking up their quarters with us have come from the torrid South, while those that depart are bound for the still cooler airs of the Arctic summer, to return to us with winter, bringing their olive branches with them.

The Same Old Question.

It is said that the Cuckoo is able to answer questions, and in northern counties maids, when they hear its note, kiss their hands and say, "Cuckoo, when shall I be married," and count the number of Cuckoo-calls to tell the number of years. Perhaps we had better ask the Cuckoo this year how long the war is going to last. It probably knows as much about it as anybody.—The "Bedfordshire Times."

The Unperturbed Canary.

One of the crew of a mine-sweeper recently employed in the Dardanelles, and who is now home on leave, says that "A six-inch shell went through our trawler and cut off the bottom of the skipper's Canary cage as clean as a whistle, leaving the Canary singing on the perch. The skipper told me it was singing. He had brought the bird home to England, as a memento, and it is still alive."

Feathered Refugees.

Ornithologists are more than usually expectant this spring, says the "Yorkshire Observer." It has been suggested that the disturbance created by the war is in some way going to bring unusual birds across the Channel to the quiet refuge of our island. It is probable, however, that the war figures larger in the eyes of the ornithologists than it does of the birds. At the most the birds would only be "warned off" a strip of country very narrow in comparison with the width of Europe. Still, it would be interesting to bird-lovers to study the habits of birds unfamiliar, and to photograph nests rarely seen.

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character. In addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-. 500 7/6, carriage paid.

A Feathered Hun.

"The Sparrow is a Hun," says Colonel Sir James D. Legard, who has issued an appeal on the subject, and exhorts town dwellers during the ensuing two or three months to destroy Sparrows and their nests. What the ladies who make it a daily practice of placing pieces of bread on the garden wall for the "poor little Sparrows" will think of Sir James' appeal, we do not know.

ALL ABOUT THE GREENFINCH.

ALTHOUGH hen Greenfinches are not in so great demand as the cocks for the show bench, still the principal shows nowadays provide a class for them, and if you happen to pick out a good typical yellow hen of good size, she will hold her own even in a mixed British hen hardbill class.

Hen Greenies as a rule make good mothers for muling or hybridizing with, being good feeders, and they may very often be relied upon to sit out their time and successfully rear the offspring.

Assuming now that you have hit upon a likely specimen or two, you would be well advised if you can spare the room to single out the birds in suitable cages. I like a stock cage for Finches to measure sixteen to eighteen inches in length, ten inches back to front, and twelve inches high. Fix your spars at four inches from the sand tray, and for fresh-caught birds, especially those who are inclined to take the wires, I advise papering down four inches at the top for a short time. Cut a piece of stout brown paper four inches deep and run this along the top of the wire front (inside the wires), this will keep the Finch from getting a footing when he makes a dive at the front. Double your paper round a wire at each end, and fasten with a pin. If you care, you could lace it through a couple of wires in the centre, which will help to keep it in position.

In all your cages you should pay strict attention to keeping the perches scrupulously clean.

Face Trouble and its Remedy.

I have never been able to make out why the Greenfinch in particular should be a victim to a face trouble which shows as a bareness around the eye. At times one sees reports in which the reporter draws attention to the fact that such and such a bird is "smeered" in the eye. This is the trouble to which I am referring.

Whenever you notice the slightest bareness of feather round the eye, at once take a small brush and gently anoint the affected part with boracic ointment. If you treat the trouble in time I am confident this will check it, but in the checking of it you may harden the skin and thereby hinder the new feathers from getting through. Should this be the case, make a little unsalted butter into a putty by adding powdered sulphur, and apply this every day until you see signs of the new feathers appearing. You will find it advisable when using either of these preparations to do so the last thing at night, as it will give it a chance of saturating the skin while the bird is at rest. I am a great believer in this treatment for any form of baldness of feather.

As to the feeding of your Finches, you will find no trouble in getting them to partake of any seed mixture; what you will have to avoid is the overdoing them with too liberal and rich dishes. Make a stock mixture of one part canary, half part rape, and quarter part teazle, occasionally a pinch of linseed and hemp, and make it a point when attending to your other duties in the birdroom to crack a sunflower seed and place it on the end of the perch to any fresh-caught Finch, and they will soon gain confidence, will look for your coming, and you will be surprised how soon a bird will be induced to take the dainty from your fingers.

The Useful Dandelion.

For green food this Finch will stick at nothing, but his favourite by far is the seeding heads of the dandelion. A word of caution might be put in here. When the first seeding heads of the "dandie" are to be got, most fanciers are very ardent in collecting the few that are to be picked up, and as their British hens are just beginning to settle down to maternal duties each has to get a share. How greedy they are for these tempting heads; so much so that after the seeds have been ravenously eaten, they nibble away at the husk, the rankness of which seems to be too much for them; stomach and bowel troubles set in, and from this cause many a good hen is lost, the cause of death being laid to the blame of something else.

Until you can secure so many heads that the seeds alone will satisfy the birds, I believe the best method is to free the seeds from the heads and feed the birds with these from a finger-drawer; you will then run no risks. But even when the seeds are plentiful make a point of cleaning out the stalks and empty heads at night. Next to the dandelion as a wild seed I find the Greenies would vote for meadow rue, and the distance these birds will travel to find this seed is wonderful, but, as I said previously, nothing in the wild seed line will come amiss to the Greenfinch.

Whenever you can procure good millscreenings, free from any foulness of rats or mice, you can feed on this ad lib, and if you secure a sample with a good supply of corn in it, it will be all the more relished by the Greenie. In fact, I know of fanciers who regularly buy corn for this particular bird.

We have each our own opinion on colour-feeding British birds. Some we hear preaching of it as the one thing of all; others hold a different opinion and swear (yes, swear!) against it, but given two birds similar in type and size, the one judiciously fed, and the other non-fed, nine judges out of ten would favour the former.

Be Careful with Colour Food.

It is very difficult to strike the happy medium in the colour-feeding of a Greenie, but more birds are spoiled in being overdone than being underdone. When colour-feeding, make a point of starting early with the feed, firstly in a weak form, and never increase the strength to more than half egg meal and half colour-food.

When you see the old feathers casting at the shoulder, you can with safety start reducing the strength of colour. Prepare your egg-food in like manner to that used in rearing young birds, and add your colour-feed to the strength required. When you see the bird casting his coat in earnest, add a half-teaspoonful of cod liver oil to every four spoonfuls of feeding, and a quarter part linseed to the seed mixture, and give every opportunity for bathing; then I am confident you will finish with a bird highly satisfactory in colour and bloom.

The liberal use of linseed, combined with the cod liver oil, may necessitate using a little binder to counteract the looseness arising, and also in the fixing of the colour. Sulphate of iron finds many admirers for this purpose, but I believe in a good, strong infusion of tormentil root. Many may know this plant, and others may have trampled it under foot without being aware of its name and its medicinal value. We find it growing in shady ground, being well adapted to grow under the heavy foliage of the woods. It rises to a height of ten inches, with a dark green feathery leaf; the flower, of four petals about the size of a shilling, is pale yellow in colour, and on an erect stem. To make certain you have the correct plant, dig up the strong, horny root and break a little piece off, when you will find the flesh of the root is a deep red colour.

Better than Iron for the Moult.

Secure about a pound of roots, wash them well, and put them into an old pot, along with a pint and a half of water, boil them until you reduce the liquid to about a pint, and pour out to cool, but while warm add a good teaspoonful of spirits (whisky). When cool strain the liquid and bottle it up; this will keep in good order for twelve months. I think if you use this when finishing the moult you will never again revert to iron in any form. Fill up the drinkers with the liquid, use it two days, miss a day, and continue.

Free use of the bath (rain-water preferred) will play a great part in putting on finishing touches, it puts vim into a bird, and only strong, healthy birds, that carry themselves aright with an air of freshness in them, can hope to run out a heavy exhibition season.

We will take it for granted that the bird has had a successful moult, and you loog to gain that coveted red card. Well, do not grudge a good bird a good cage. Further, a bird should be exhibited in a cage the colour of which will show it off to advantage.

The particular colour that suits a non fed Greenfinch is a greenish-blue just bordering on a grey, while for a colour-fed bird any ordinary mid-green with just a touch of chrome yellow added, is the most suitable. (I purpose writing an article later on the painting of show cages.)

I have written my opinion on the Greenfinch and its treatment in confinement especially for the novice, who may not yet have given this particular bird a trial, for I fancy that, if once he can put down a bird fit to win with in good company (and you can rely in finding competition in this class), he will be drawn to admit that the Greenfinch makes an ideal cage pet.

A Lecture given before the Members of the Great Horton Good Intent and kindly communicated by Mr. Frith, the Hon. Sec.

WHEN the young birds hatch out I do away with the arrowroot biscuit, and for the first two days I give a little yolk of hard-boiled egg, and on the third day a mixture composed of four spoonfuls of bread, one spoonful of yolk of egg, and two tablespoonfuls of cod liver oil food, soaked with two tablespoonfuls of water, and adding a pinch of salt.

Maw seed and a little dandelion may be given now, and in giving dandelion I am careful to use only that with the white stalk, not red stalks, the former is more tender and not so strong to the taste. Before giving this to the birds I wash it in a colander, and then place a damp cloth on the top; it will keep fresh for some days. On the third day I give crushed hemp seed.

Do not disturb the young ones in the nest, but wait until they all come out, then put them in a show cage and hang this on to the front of the breeding cage, and the old ones will finish them off by feeding them through the wires and the plucking of the young is thereby prevented. When the young can pick up food for themselves, I put them in a cage away from the parents and feed on the same egg food as previously, giving them also crushed hemp seed.

No Water till Five Weeks Old.

At this stage I give no water, there being enough in the egg food for their needs until they get on to the seed. Neither do I give a bath at this period, for they would drink too much of the water; this I believe is to blame for many young bird ailments.

When the birds are five weeks old, put them on to plain canary seed, and fill the water-glass half full with water which has been boiled and allowed to go cold. As they get full on to the eating of the seed, the water-glass may be filled up as with the older birds. When you start giving them the seed, crush some eggshells and throw them into the cage-bottom; this is better than giving them sand on the drawer. A little chemical food added to the drinking-water makes a very useful drink.

When I cage the young ones by themselves, I put peat moss in the cage-bottom, as this absorbs all moisture from the bottom and does not dirty the birds. With this material their feet are kept scrupulously clean. Further, when they are supplied with a bath the peat moss absorbs all the water they carry into the cage with them.

The water-glasses should be washed at least twice a week, and the egg-drawers every day. When bringing up the young, feed as often as possible. I believe a little and often is a good motto.

After the lecture many questions were asked by the members, and clearly answered by the lecturer. In reply to the question of how often he would clean out the cage-bottoms when using peat moss he said in winter every fortnight, but oftener as the summer months come along. In the matter of using milk sop, the lecturer said he believed it was very beneficial to the birds when they happened to be at all down in condition, but he did not make it a practice to give it to the old birds while they were bringing up their young.

Sweating Hens and Bad Feeders

To the question of keeping the cock and the hen together the lecturer said he preferred leaving the cock in with the hen, but the bird-keeper has to be ruled to a certain extent by circumstances. A further question was in reference to sweating hens, and in answer to this Mr. Snead said he was not troubled with these. He thought sweating was mainly caused by fright. When birds are breeding they are very highly strung and are easily frightened. Their temperament at such time is quite different to the normal, and the breeder could not take too great a care not to frighten them. A tendency to sweating might be prevalent with some hens, but if the hens were bought from a breeder who had good stamina in his stock, then this tendency need not be very greatly feared.

Mr. Snead was asked how he treated hens which were bad feeders, and in answer he said "Tempt them with different foods. Try a little rape, a fresh kind of green food, or any other tit-bit you may have about at the time." A further important question was put to Mr. Snead as to whether he believed in showing young birds, and in reply he said that he did not believe in First Feather shows, for the risk was not worth the running. A really good bird may be spoilt by it.

After these and many other questions had been fully answered to the benefit of everyone present, Mr. Snead gave a final word of advice to the novices to stick to their best if they wished to get to the top. They should not part with promising birds until they had landed there, and then they would no doubt have a few to sell. The meeting closed with an expression of the heartiest thanks to Mr. Snead for the most practical address our members had ever heard. Those who did not come to the meeting missed a treat which has only been slightly indicated in the above notes, which have been written from memory.

A BUSHMAN'S STORY.

Wild "Jackasses" said to poison their Young.

A cutting from an Australian paper kindly sent us by Mr. R. L. Crisp.

"DID you ever koow of anyone who reared young Jackasses in captivity, and kept them until they were of mature age?" the writer was asked by a bushman, who submitted the question with the air of one who was well fortified with the first-hand knowledge that nobody did know of young Great Kingfishers which had been so reared.

"No doubt in the centre of a vast metropolis it would be quite possible to raise and keep Jackasses," he said, "but that is because there are no wild Jackasses about; or, if there are, they are so few that they might never discover young ones in a state of captivity.

Does "Everyone Know"?

"Everyone knows, of course," he continued, in reply to a leading question, "that wild Jackasses busily carry food to any young bird of the species which they discover in captivity. It does not make any difference that the young one may not be in any way related to themselves. It is sufficient for them that he is one of their tribe and endaring the humiliation of captivity.

"As I have suggested, the majority of people who take any interest in wild life know that perhaps a dozen wild Jackasses will cheerfully bring supplies of natural food to a young member of the family found in a cage or garden. What very few know is that the motive force which impels them to pursue this policy of seeming disinterested benevolence has its source in a jealous and instinctive desire to secure the freedom of the captive.

The Reasoning Jackass.

"Friendly as the Kookaburra appears to be towards mankind, the whole family resent the spectacle of one of their members in what to them is a state of 'durance vile.' In feeding these captives they have a double object in view—to keep the young alive, and at the same time to create opportunities for getting them back to the bush and the freedom which it represents.

"In endeavouring to achieve their object the wild Jackasses will often display great patience. They will persist in some cases for quite a long while, regularly feeding the captive and trying to get it away. But they are not content with this. Eventually they will become tired of the waiting game—and then the pretty little drama of co-operative food supplies changes suddenly to tragedy for the hapless captive.

Murders When Frustrated.

"If they fail to release it alive, then they adopt the other alternative of releasing it by death—in jealous protest against the continuance of an alien dominion over the life of a member of their tribe. As a general thing they accomplish their purpose by poisoning the captive. They deliberately do this by giving it certain kinds of food which they eschew in their natural state and which they seem to know instinctively will prove fatal."

I did not feel disposed to accept this strange theory, and frankly expressed the opinion that this was but one of the many weird and unconvincing stories which spring up magically in the bush, and do so much towards the manufacture of what one may term unnatural natural history. But the bushman seemed to be so sure of his ground that he did not even think it worth while to get angry. "You can take it from me," he said, with quite impressive earnestness, "that I am speaking from personal experience and observation. In the course of many years I have tried to rear many young Jackasses, but have always failed. I have the evidence of my own senses that at least six young birds were poisoned by visiting wild ones, when they found they could not secure their release in any other way.

What About the Roller Canaries?

Sir,—I have been expecting that the able article in Cage Birds for April 3 on the future of the Roller Canary in the United Kingdom would have resulted in an expression of views from the many of our English breeders who have for years past devoted their energies to producing songsters who were more than the equal of the "Made in Germany" article.

It was truly pointed out in that article that "Hartz Mountain," "St. Andreasberg," and other trade terms were practically meaningless. Any kind of Roller Canary which was not of English origin was labelled with a fancy name with the idea of impressing English buyers with the idea that they were being offered something special, something which English breeders could not equal.

Now that you have given the English breeders a lead, it is astonishing that none of them has anything to say. Are they content to keep to themselves the knowledge that they have a better bird than any alien which was ever imported, and will they be content to see the demand for "living musical boxes" supplied by birds coming from or via Belgium, Holland, and Russia? "Wake up England!" Patriot.

A Cage-bird Society for Pontypool.

Sir,—It is intended by about a dozen fanciers to form a cage-bird society in Pontypool, and a special meeting will be held at the Park Restaurant, Commercial Street, on Saturday, May 15, at 7. Fanciers residing in Monmouthshire will be welcome to attend this meeting, or send their names for membership to

The Cuckoo Near London.

Sir,—It may interest your many readers in this and adjoining districts to know that I heard the Cuckoo this morning, May 3, in the grounds of a gentleman's residence at London Road, Thornton Heath. I mentioned the fact to a gardener working close by, and he said he heard it the previous Tuesday, and each day following. I was rather surprised to hear it so near town, though I know some of these secluded residences have afforded many of our British Birds and songsters a delightful retreat and safe nesting-place. F. The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve It.

Sir,—I am very disappointed at the response to my invitation upon this subject. Those who breed the winning modern Norwich have laid low, but fanciers can take it from me that you cannot get the size and head properties without the birds having Crest Bred in them. The old-fashioned Norwich Plainheads are useless as show specimens now, and this is the reason I have made a challenge to Mr. Allsopp and Mr. Spillman, or both, to show I have confidence in the method I have advocated to improve the modern Norwich Plainhead. But I cannot accept Mr. Allsopp's suggestion in last week's issue; my ambition is to breed something better than "giving away" birds; if I get a few good ones I have no notion of giving them away. At the same time, I do not mind joining in some scheme to help any working-man fancier to find his pets some food in cases where he has fallen sick, or to give a bird to any fancier who has gone to the front to help him to another start. What a benevolent fellow Mr. Allsopp must be! He can go on breeding his best birds to give away—he would have no chance to beat me with giving away specimens.

J. Bastock.

Sir,—Following the proposal to bring about a little "fancy help" in a practical manner I am sure all readers will be very gratified to learn that I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. W. Spillman wherein he not only intimates his ready willingness to reserve a Plainhead worthy of his reputation and that of Plymouth in the manner desired, but also with a "top dog" spirit in the cause subscribes a sovereign to at once open the fund. As with myself, he feels his selection of a candidate should not be confined to current year birds, but that we should be free to select the bird likely to prove most attractive under the hammer; the wisdom of this cannot be gainsaid. Thus, all being well, a unique competition will be held at a leading London show, each competitor striving to beat the others, not with the idea of lifting the most, but of giving the most for a purpose, alas, that is not unique. Much as many readers may have deplored the diversion of late in this correspondence from the main issue, I venture to say none will now express other than the thought, "It's an ill wind that blows no one good."

To ensure complete success of the scheme we need the co-operation of many other breeders. It would occupy much space to name each of our "pillars," but a candidate from Messrs. J. Houghton, W. Vardy, W. Collings, Sam Cook, Tom Irons, W. Hathaway, W. Seed, W. Crawshaw, E. Baker, and many others, would ensure a huge success, and immediately cause many derelict fanciers, their widows and fatherless kiddies, to feel grateful for their association with the Cage Bird Fancy. Meanwhile I sincerely hope our discussion, "How to improve the Plainhead," will proceed with renewed vigour and interest; for both ventures can be unqualified successes if we choose.

E. W. Allsopp.

Northern Yorks. C.C. Specials for Birds Wearing Closed Rings.

Sir,—I shall be obliged if you will notify through Cage Birds that, in addition to the cup which I gave two years ago for most points won by current year birds wearing closed rings, to be won twice before becoming the property of the exhibitor, I intend to present specials this season as follows (to members)—to the winner of cup a special value 15s.; runner up, value 10s.; third, value 5s. Any kind of closed ring may be used so long as they are registered, and it can be conclusively proved that the birds competing are bred by the exhibitor. I shall not myself compete for any of these specials, which are to be won outright this season if we can get shows for patronage.

T. C. Crawhall, President N.Y.C.C.

The Patronage of the Scottish Plainhead Club.

Sir,—The Scottish Plainhead Club desires to intimate to societies intending to hold open shows that if they wish the patronage of the club, application should be made to the sec., E. Barron, 119, Montrose St., Glasgow, not later than first week in August. Clubs holding confined club shows, provided eight of their members are also members of the S.P.C., desirous of obtaining a medal for competition, should also make application by same date, submitting with their application the names of members of the S.P.C. on their roll. Members of the S.P.C. are requested to let the sec. know at the earliest possible moment how many rings they require, so that a sufficient number may be in readiness in view of requirements. Subs. for the present season are now due.

The Feeding of Lories.

Mr. E. J. Brook, of Ecclefechan, Gives Valuable Advice.

Sir,—In Lord Tavistock's article on "Hints on Parrot Keeping" in this week's Cage Birds I note that he has never been able to get his Lories and Lorikeets to take food prepared with Marmite. I think I was probably the first to use this mixture in its present form, and, as I have had unqualified success with it, I think the reason for failure must be in the mixing of the ingredients. I claim success for this food because I have a large collection of Lories, Sun-birds, Sugar-birds, and some Honey-eaters, all on this preparation. The Lories and Lorikeets get nothing else, and are nearly all birds that have been in my possession several years. I have successfully bred several kinds on Marmite mixture, including the tiny Fair Lory. The mixture contains one pint water, one pint barley water, one teaspoonful unseasoned Marmite, two tea spoonsful Horlick's Malted Milk, one and a half teaspoonsful Mellin's Food, four to five table spoonsful refined white cane sugar, and a piece of dry sponge cake about the size of a hen's egg, crumbled fine. The water and barley water are boiling when the other things are mixed in. I have tried to do with less sugar, but the birds seemed to suffer from the want of it; sometimes honey is used as a change. If a bird is getting too fat on this preparation I give less, but do not reduce the quality. I have never yet had a bird refuse this food whatever they have been having previously.

When Hens Will Not Sit.

Sir,—It seems rather singular that I should have already tried the experiment of taking away the cock from the hen, putting him with another hen, and covering them up, when another reader (A. W. Kitching) should write suggesting to me to try the experiment if the hen would not sit. I am able to say the same as A. W. Kitching, that the trouble is over, and the hen is now sitting.

The First Cage-bird Keeper on the Roll of Honour.

Sir,—I am afraid Liverpool was the first to lose a fancier in this terrible war. As long ago as Oct. 22 Tom Howcroft, Scots Guards, gave his life for us. He was a member of the Green Canary Association, and of the Cage Birds League. He leaves a wife and six little children behind; one was born after poor Tom was killed. He was one of our best fanciers, Green Borders were his speciality. We in Liverpool have lost a good worker in our hobby. Up to the present Mrs. Howcroft has been well provided for.

When Judges Disagree.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—The above subject has been very interesting, and recently I note one of your readers has raised the point as to the possibility of light or albino birds being bred from dark parents. I may state that not long since I watched for quite two months a clear Starling flying about with a large group of companions. They frequented one of our depots where railway waggons contained bones, offal, etc., in which they could find a good supply of gentles. At another of our depots, where I am at present working, there appeared about August last a House Sparrow with white markings, resembling those of a good V of an exhibition Yellowhammer. This bird is still in evidence, not mated up yet (a hen). These birds would both have dark parents, and I well remember when a boy in the country we were astonished to see a white bird flying about with a group of Finches, and of course, decided it must be a Canary; this also was about the latter part of the summer, and it was very wild. I have since been convinced this bird was nothing but an Albino (British). We have also the trio which appeared in Cage Birds, namely, Blackbird, Robin, and Bullfinch, and again, what of Messrs. Martin and Archer's noted Yellowhammer? I may also state a friend of mine recently bred a Goldfinch-Canary Mule quite half clear, the Canary being a self-green. In face of these facts, there should be no doubt as to the possibility of light or albino birds being bred from dark parents (both sides). In the case of "White Rose," personally I have not had the pleasure of looking upon it other than in the sketch appearing in Cage Birds, which I still possess. The artist had certainly a Greenfinch in his mind's eye when producing this. Recently I showed the sketch to an old Mule breeder, asking him to have a good look, and not to decide too quickly. His reply was, "A Greenfinch."

J. Locke.

Sir,—It is very kind of the Irishman to criticise my letter. I had no idea I was such an artist at picture painting, and if he thinks he has cut a glorious figure he is altogether wrong. He says he wants facts. That was what my letter contained, plain, unvarnished facts and truth, and he can have plenty more if he wants them. I am neither interested nor prejudiced in "White Rose" or its owner. "Patrick" was not so smart after all in correcting my error, as Mr. Parlett corrected it the week previous. If "Patrick" could put the bird in its proper place he would be very clever; it is more than the whole Fancy can do. I should like to know who told him it was a bad specimen, badly splashed, etc., and that it had got more than it deserved. I suppose it is only his opinion, and that does not count for much. I'd like to gamble "Patrick" couldn't put down such a good specimen, irrespective of colour or markings, either Mule or Hybrid. He goes on to instruct judges to carefully examine the bird. Does he think they are a pack of schoolboys, or does he think they have not the courage of their own convictions? I think he had better come out as a specialist himself. He wants to know why "White Rose" steers clear of the light Canary Mule classes, and makes the statement that the only time the bird was shown in the light Mule class it was disqualified. He is altogether wrong, as the following will show: "White Rose" was exhibited at Nottingham show, Nov., 1912, in the A.O.V. Hybrid between two British Birds, including Canary-Bullie, under Mr. G. E. Weston. He wrong-classed the bird, saying it ought to be in the clear ticked or lightly marked Canary Mule class, evidently contending that it was a Canary-Bullie. It was again exhibited at Notts, the following year, in the clear ticked or lightly marked class this time, and was awarded 2nd prize, under Mr. C. Houlton. Here we have two English judges contending the bird to be a Canary-Bullie, and I still hold Mr. Houlton as a great authority. After carefully scrutinising the bird, as "Patrick" reckons to have done, he wants to know what colour it is. At the next show at which it appears he should ask any schoolboy that happens to be in the show; he will certainly tell him. Fancy an expert wanting to know if colour feeding affects Mules as much as British birds! If he reads Mr. Parlett's letter he will see that he ignores noms-de-plume. If we do hide our faces in shame, we don't hide our names. Well "'nuff said."

J. W. Saywell.

[Mr. Weston states that he wrong-classed this Hybrid at Nottingham in 1912 because, in his view, birds with light plumage could not claim to compete in the class in which it was entered. He did not say that it ought to have been in the class for light Canary Mules.—Editor.]

Sir,—We must respect the views of a veteran Hybrid-breeder like Mr. J. Craig before those of J. W. Saywell, who has never exhibited a Hybrid, and I hear never bred or even possessed one. In fact, it is fairly safe to bet Mr. J. Craig was in the Fancy before J. W. S. was born. There are men in Mansfield to-day who declare "White Rose" before the first moult was a dark bird, and bred from Greenie and Bullie. Compare the bird with a Greenie-Bullie and a Canary-Bullie at any show, and you will soon see which it is like. I defy anyone to produce a Canary-Bullie with the same tone of colour as "White Rose's" lower breast and flank markings. It is unquestionably the tone of a Greenie-Bullie, to say nothing of the Greenfinch showing in the wings. Now, J. W. S., stick to your softbills, and don't butt into a discussion when you know nothing about the subject. In any controversy, let us have the opinions of men whose experience entitles them to respect, whatever their views may be. After the clear and sound arguments of Mr. J. Craig and Patrick, I think there is little more to be said about what is, when all said and done, a doubtful and unsatisfactory Hybrid.

"Mansfield."

Some Observations of a Lover of Birds.

Sir,—It is very gratifying to me to find many wild birds so near to London as Wimbledon. The following are dates and notes on appearances of birds and their commencing song and pairing:—1914, Chaffinch, Feb. 1st; Blackbird, Feb. 5th; Song Thrush, Jan. 29th; Skylark, Jan. 30th; Rooks nesting, Mar. 4th; Carrion Crows nesting, Mar. 18th; Sparrows nesting, Mar. 29th; found young Song Thrush just out of nest (this was at Dulwich), April 5th; Green Plover nesting, April 8th; found Robin's eggs and nest, and saw first Swallow, April 10th; heard first Willow Wren singing, April 11th. 1915, Saw Woodpigeon's nest in St. James's Park Station, London, January, date uncertain, about 1st to 5th; Song Thrushes singing, Jan. 18th; Robins and Song Thrushes singing, Feb. 4th; Blackbird singing, Feb. 7th; Chaffinch singing, Feb. 10th; Skylarks singing, Feb. 15th. 1914, Carrion Crows sitting on eggs, April 1st. 1915, Rooks building, Mar. 3rd; Carrion Crows nesting, Mar. 5th. The above are all wild birds: here are dates of caged-birds:—1914, Pekin Robin in song, in cage indoors, Feb. 1st; Linnets, Siskins, Greenfinches in full song in outdoor aviary, Feb. 22nd; caged Skylark, Redpoll and Linnet in full song, Mar. 18th. 1915, Caged Linnets, Chaffinches and Larks in full song, Jan. 18th. I have also made a list of wild birds seen round here during 1912, from May 1st to Aug. 1st, 39 species; and also a list of winter birds during 1914-1915, Dec., Nov., Jan., result 28 species, of which there are 22 residents, 1 irregular visitor, 3 regular visitors, and two not certain as either. I may say that I have kept most British Hardbills, many of the Softbills and some foreigners of both kinds, as cage birds. I have now a hand-reared Blackbird which sings a pure Thrush song and mimics many other bits of other birds' songs, besides giving its own notes. I have kept a Jackdaw for four years (still alive and well), a Rook for nearly two years, a Pheasant (golden variety) for over seven years, and a Linnet for four years. I have often finger-tamed Siskins, and once bred Redpolls in an outdoor aviary. I saw a Kingfisher at Dulwich this year on Mar. 5; it struck me as an unusual visitor to these parts. I have also seen at various times the following pied birds: Blackbird (hen), nearly white; cock, almost pure white; Sparrow, white; Hedgesparrow, pied; Robin, slightly pied; Rook, white bar on one wing.

Club Reports.

STANLEY (Victoria) F. AND F.S.

Meeting, April 25, J. Armitage presiding, and a good turn up of members. We had a discussion on the partnership question, and it was decided that no member be allowed to show in partnership with a non-member who was not showing last year. Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland, was elected to judge the Cage Bird Section at the Annual Show, Dec. 4.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, April 10, Co-operative Hall, Low Westwood, Mr. Geo. Barkess chair, and only very moderate attendance. Decided to hold a N.F. Show, and to ask Mr. Jas. Lindsay, our late sec., to judge. It would be more satisfactory if all members would try and get to the meetings, and not leave it to a few to keep things going. Membership cards with rules attached can be had on paying their subs. Next meeting June 5, when we should like all members to try and attend, to make arrangements for F.F. Show, and to draw up a schedule.—Jameson and Johnson.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE (East End)

Meeting, April 28, and Hall's Cafe, Heaton Road, Mr. Mac Partling chair, and a good attendance. Notice of motion having been given to rescind rule referring to judges' radius, a discussion ensued, and it was decided to cancel radius altogether. Other nominations for judges now being forthcoming, and put to the meeting, it was decided that Mr. Stanger, Pelton Fell, and Mr. Montgomery, Wallsend, be our judges on Nov. 26 and 27. Also resolved to hold a N.F. show July 10, providing a suitable hall could be got, it being left to sec. to try and get same; final arrangements will be made at next meeting.—J. W. Coutts, Sec.

NORTH-WEST GLASGOW C.B.C.

Meeting, Amalgamated Musicians' Hall, 44, Naipershall Street, April 27, Mr. Gibb presiding over a good attendance. Classification for F.F. show was arranged, and judges nominated for both F.F. and annual shows. Members please note that we have altered date of annual show to November 20, to prevent clashing with Glasgow and District C.B.C. As the 1915 syllabus has been sent to every member, future meetings will not be postcarded. Four new members were admitted. At next meeting, 25th May, in above hall, we are to have a lecture on "British Birds," by a well-known expert; those interested are cordially invited.—John Houston.

PERTH CITY AND COUNTY C.B.S.

Meeting, Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, May 3, Mr. D. Brown chair. New members enrolled: Messrs. D. Miller, D. Halley, D. Mortimer, J. McMillan, M'Guire. F.F. show to be held June 26. Sec. was asked to write for a judge, also to get Garrioch prize cards and tickets printed. Classes: Nor. yell., Nor. buff, Crest, C.B., Scotch Fancy yell., ditto buff, Bord yell. Bord. buff, Yorks. yell., Yorks. buff., Goldf. and Bullf., Linnet and Greenf., Mules and Hyb., A.O.V. small Brit. Mr. G. C. Gordon said he had the pleasure of handing over a handsome silver medal to the society from J. Calder and Co., to be competed for at club show, amongst the Yorkshires. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chair.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

General meeting, Headquarters, April 26, Mr. Norman chair, and a fair number present. Decided to give our patronage as in past years to eight societies holding open shows who are willing to give us the following classification: Champ. cl. or tkd yell. ck., ditto buff cl., or tkd. yell. hen, ditto buff, uneven mkd. gr. or cinn., novice, A.V. yell. ck., A.V. buff, A.V. hen. Will secretaries who desire our patronage kindly write to 526, Leerd., Lee Green, S.E., by May 24, stating date of show, judge or judges, entry fees, and prize money. I hope all who applied last year will do so again, and societies who have not hitherto catered for the Borders should seriously consider the advisability of applying for our patronage, as our section is always the best supported at any show. The question of specials to be offered was left over to the May meeting, and I shall be pleased to hear from any member wishing to give a special or to subscribe to the special fund which is now open. Messrs. Humphries, Madagan, and G. H. Pratt lead the way with specials. Who will follow? Members desiring their advertisements in the Manual please let me know as soon as possible; whole page 5s., half 3s., quarter 1s. 6d. Subs. are now due. It will save time and expense if members will send along and not wait to be notified. Geo. Burton.

PELTON FELL C.B.S.

Meeting held April 24, Colliery Inn, Pelton Fell, with a good turn up of members. Mr. Stanger was re-elected chairman, and the sec., J. Robinson, was re-elected. Schedule for N.F. Show will be the same as last year; there will be a shilling put on to each class, and Mr. Stanger is giving 2s. 6d. special for best bird bred, and 2s. 6d. for best British. The N.F. show is fixed for July 3, and the annual show for Nov. 6. The subs. for this year will be 5s. for all joining now, and next year new members 1s., entrance, and 5s. sub. Agreed that all members willing should pay 6d. each for N.F. show, the total to be given to best bird at show, the same to come on again at annual show for unflighted birds. Decided that all old members serving their country be made honorary members, and have the same privilege as other members. Nominations of judges: J. Hand, Ryton; R. Rowell, Bebside; W. T. Smith, South Shields; T. Dixon, Bedlington, A. Holden, Gateshead; W. Reid, Sunderland; J. Risborough, Sunderland; H. Seely, Choppington. Members enrolled for year at present are: Messrs. J. Stanger, R. S. Bewicke, J. Robinson, R. Coates, J. Redpath, D. York, T. Elliott, G. Bates, J. MacDonald, W. Gowlands, T. Cresswell, A. Dawson, W. Forster, R. Ward, R. W. Boyd. We are expecting more new members by next meeting, June 5. Members and others wishing to join, please rally up and get things put into working order.—J. Robinson.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, April 29, headquarters, Seven Stars, John's Lane, Wolverhampton, Mr. Willows chair. New members elected: Messrs. Wyre and Lawson. Mr. M. Jacquemin gave an interesting paper on the Breeding and Management of the Roller Canary which all present very much enjoyed, and a discussion afterwards took place. Our Chairman thanked Mr. Jacquemin for his paper, and this brought the meeting to a close.—J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The April meeting was one of the greatest successes ever held since the formation of the society. The occasion was a table show of British birds, Mr. Chick, Nottingham, judge. He also gave a few remarks on the birds staged, but on account of the time of closing of licensed houses, which in Sheffield is 9.30, could not avail himself of the opportunity of giving the lecture on British birds which had been arranged; it was, of course, a great disappointment.—J. A. F. Woodall, Press Corresp.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting, with a large turn out of members. Officers elected: Col. F. R. Simpson, J.P., pres.; J. Hands, chair; vice-chair, G. Dobson; treas., R. Harris; hon. sec., Geo. Havver, and a strong committee of sixteen keen fanciers. Decided that consideration of schedule for annual show lie over till July meeting. Mr. J. Rutter was elected a member. It is with great regret that I have to record the sad loss our member, Mr. J. J. Walker, has sustained in the death of his wife, aged 26, who died while being delivered of a still-born child. Our sympathy goes out to Mr. Walker and his two little girls in their great loss.—G. Havver, Sec.

RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Meeting, April 26, St. John's Hall, Richmond, Mr. W. Phipps chair, and about 25 members present. Letter read from Hastings and St. Leonards C.B.S. re formation of a Cage Bird Society League. As Mr. Robson was present to deliver his lecture, it was decided to let the matter remain over until next meeting. Mr. Robson lectured on "Breeding and Management," dealing with everything necessary to make breeding a success. At the close he invited members to question him on any point he had not made clear, or on any subject on which they were in doubt. He was asked numerous questions, and gave satisfactory answers. A hearty vote of thanks was then given Mr. Robson for his useful and instructive remarks. Proposed to bring up at next meeting the matter of cup rules.—G. R. Birch, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (Queen's Park) C.B.S.

Meeting, Marie Stuart Halls, April 28. President (Mr. R. Heggie) chair, and a good attendance. Two applicants for membership were admitted. Decided to hold F.F. Show, July 3, in Marie Stuart Halls, 12 classes: Nor., 4; Bord., 3; Yorks., 2; Crest or C.B.; A.O.V.; Mules or Hyb. Mr. Davidson, Mossend, gave his lecture, "My Travels in India; A Study of the Natives, Birds, Insects and Plants." Everyone was delighted with the paper, which was of great interest. The lecturer told us about the Indian Crow as a bird of which he had made a careful study for 15 years. He also brought two cases of beautiful butterflies with him and over one thousand specimens of wild seeds and plants eaten by our own birds in the Clyde valley. Several questions were asked and ably answered. A vote of thanks to lecturer and chair brought a most enjoyable meeting to a close. Next meeting May 26, at 8.—E. Holliday, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting, Volunteer Inn, Oldham, April 17, a fair number present. Balance sheet was passed as correct, Mr. Hampshire, as auditor, giving his report. Owing to very exceptional circumstances, the balance in hand was a very small one. It was proposed that the following members be entitled to prizes as winners of club trophies: G. Fitton, champ. Lancs.; W. Ridgard, runner-up; F. Hamer, champ. Lizard; J. Rukin, runner-up; C. F. Bosworth, champ. Nov. Lizard; and T. Millington, runner-up; no Lancashire novice members competed. Decided to ask Mr. Alf. Bradley to accept presidentship for coming season. Also that sec. get a stock of enamel for Lizard show cages; members competing for L. and L.F.A. specials must show both gold and silver Lizards in standard cages, only one colour of enamel to be used, this being azure blue, as supplied by the Victory Brand, and to be got through the sec., so that we can depend upon a regular shade being used. It is hoped that our society will be able to get some fresh recruits for coming season, as without a larger membership and more extended competition, we are unable to launch out as we could wish. We have a very loyal list of members, but new blood is badly needed. The sub. is 5 - yearly; no entry fee. Next meeting, Volunteer Inn, George-st., Oldham, April 15, everybody welcome.—J. Rukin, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Annual general meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, May 1; chairman, Mr. W. A. Cowgill. Members elected: Dr. Craig (Sheffield), Messrs. J. Thornton (Allerton), J. Wroe (Bowling Old Lane) and W. H. Dibb (Guiseley). The Sec.'s report showed that members had supported the classes provided very well; the balance sheet, which was adopted, showed the club to be still progressing, the cash balance being £3 15s. 7d., with several subs. still owing for last year, which we hope to receive at an early date. Result of the ballot for the officers: Mr. W. H. Shackleton, Vice-Pres.; Messrs. C. E. Morrison and H. H. Towers; Committee (inside Yorkshire), Messrs. L. Dykes, J. Greaves, P. Mason, E. Clegg, H. J. Chittenden, J. Bailey, T. Ogden, H. Hill, L. C. Casey, S. Bins, J. Chippendale, G. Snead and W. A. Cowgill; (outside Yorkshire), Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle), A. Hirst (Accrington), Mr. Ramsden (London), J. Currie (Barrow) and C. R. Bulkeley (Bromley, Kent). The undersigned was again elected Hon. Sec. and Treas. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring officers, auditors and scrutineers, and to the donors of special prizes for the past year. Decided that next year the Committee, etc., be elected at the annual general meeting and not by ballot. Members serving with H.M. Forces are to be kept on the books as honorary members during the war. Competitions and allocation of patronage left over to the next Committee meeting in mid June, societies desiring same at their forthcoming shows should apply at once. J. Chambers, Hon. Sec.

CAMBUSLANG C.B.A.

Meeting, April 24, Gardners' Hall, Alex. Crawford chair. Sec. reported having engaged Mr. George Smart to judge Canary section and Mr. George Martin British section at Annual Show, Nov. 6. Agreed that classification be made next meeting, also that a date and place for a Saturday afternoon ramble be fixed. Thomas Nelson was proposed for membership. Next meeting May 20, 7.30.—Sam Lindsay, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting, May 1, Mr. H. J. Mennard chair. J. W. Sanderson and J. Simpson were elected members. Mr. C. Hunt gave us his lecture on British birds in a very able manner, taking the Linnet, Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, and Yellowhammer for his subject. Mr. Hunt also judged the table show of British birds to everyone's satisfaction. Linnet, etc. (12): 1, 2, 4, Owen; 3, Chambers; vhc, Pyrah; he, Simpson; c, Waind. Goldf. or Bullf. (6): 1, Pyrah; 2, 4, Owen; 3, Simpson; vhc, he, Waind. A.O. Hardbill (6): 1, 2, 3, vhc, he, Owen; 4, Waind. J. Owen won special most points.—E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting, May 4. Resolved that the question of holding an annual show be adjourned sine die, and that the matter be rediscussed later on. Mr. F. Greenland was nominated for membership. Resolved that the Association's annual outing be held on May 16, to Effinghani Common. Members who intend going should advise the sec., Mr. P. J. Hose, 5, Well's Crescent, Camberwell, at the earliest possible moment in order that he may make arrangements with the caterers. Mr. Hose will also be pleased to welcome any fancier or friend who may be desirous of joining the party.—A. R. Coe.

SACRISTON P.P.R. AND C.B.S.

Meeting April 24, present, in the chair, Mr. R. Scorer, Jas. Maddison, J. W. Thurkettle, Wm. Collins, R. Wilfred, R. Dunston, Wm. Wright, jun., J. Liddle, T. Liddle, A. Sutherland, Wm. Wright, sen., S. Wright, R. Forster, Jas. Maddison, E. Hunter, and others. Mr. Berwick was elected judge of cage bird section for Nov. 6. show. Mr. J. Lumsdon was elected a member. Prizes, 8s., 4s.; 2s.; entrance fee, 1s. per exhibit. Decided that cups in each section should be won two years in succession, or three times in all. Sec. was instructed to get 150 rules and contribution cards printed, and each member be charged 2d. for each. Next meeting, May 8th, at 7, Mrs. H. Abbot's Tea Rooms, Front Street. Members and intending members please attend. Business: An egg show for the National Egg Collection for the Wounded; classes, brown eggs, white eggs; entrance fee 2d. for each entry of 3 eggs; members please fetch one entry for this worthy cause.—Dodd and Wilfred, Hon. Secs.

GLASGOW & WEST COUNTIES.

Meeting and show of British, Good Templars' Hall, Ingram Street, May 1. Mr. Jas. McGowan presided. Agreed to ramble to Bridge of Weir, on May 29, train leaving St. Enochs at 2.40. Members and friends to meet at corner of Dunlop Street and Argyle Street, at 2.30. New members were admitted: Messrs. J. Reid, A. Whitelaw. Annual show fixed for Saturday, Jan. 22. Specials for show were generously given by Messrs. W. Cassels, J. Findlay, J. Livingstone, P. Pettigrew, and J. H. Adam. The following classification completes the series of monthly shows: Bramblef., Chaffinch, Bullf. ck, Buntings, British, any kind not previously catered for at monthly shows, Mule or Hybrid, and Messrs. J. Downie and J. McGowan judged show. Greenf.: 1, Pettigrew; 2, Cassels; 3, Mallon; 4, sp., Pettigrew; 5, Dick; 6, Trotter; 7, Findlay. Siskin: 1, Pettigrew; 2, Telfer; 3, sp., Jamieson; 4, Fitzpatrick; 5, Cochrane; 6, Adam; 7, Livingstone. Lesser Redpoll: 1, Trotter; 2, Livingstone; 3, Dick; 4, Adam; 5, sp., Findlay; 6, Dick; 7, Pettigrew. Twite: 1, sp., Dick; 2, Trotter; 3, Liddell; 4, Trotter; 5, Livingstone; 6, Pettigrew; 7, Adam. Mealy Redpoll: 1, Adam; 2, sp., Pettigrew; 3, Hamilton; 4, Adam; 5, Trotter; 6, Dick; 7, Adam.—J. H. Adam.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting, Church Institute, Paddington-st., April 26, Mr. A. W. Curtis chair and 30 members present. Letters read from Mr. F. Thynne, F. Knight and M. S. Runchman. Mr. H. Bailey was elected a member, and Mrs. A. M. Cook nominated for membership; this talented artist, whose beautiful pictures were hung at the Royal Academy in 1913 and 1914, is the thirtieth lady member of the Association. Medals won at the recent Egg-Food Competition were presented to: 1, G. Butterfield (gold); 2, W. Sanders (silver); 3, E. C. Offord (bronze). For inspection by the members were a handsome silver-plated cup presented by Miss Jolliffe for the best young Canary bred by a lady member at the Young Bird Show, July 3; and a silver-plated Queen Anu pattern teapot, presented by Mr. Runchman for most points gained by a novice in the Canary section at the Young Bird and Annual Shows. These generous gifts were the subject of a vote of thanks to both donors. A Judging Competition in British Finches in six classes took place; 24 members took part, and Mr. C. Prior was final judge. A lecture was to have been given by Mr. Prior, but instead of this Mr. Prior gave some masterly advice upon the specimens before him. After reviewing each awarded bird, pointing out its shortcomings, and giving advice on possible improvements in various directions, he was asked innumerable questions, which he answered with consummate skill. A vote of thanks to Mr. Prior was carried by acclamation. Mr. Prior suitably replied, and a vote of thanks to the chair closed the meeting.—V. Wynn, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B

Meeting, May 1, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street. Mr. F. Harrison presided. The collecting sheet, on behalf of the widow of our late friend, F. Easterling, was handed round, and 15s. 6d. was collected. Mr. A. J. Marley gave his lecture on British birds, touching the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, Twite, Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, and Hawfinch; how to keep them in cages or flights, their feeding and showing. Members asked several questions, and the lecturer suitably answered. Vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Marley, and to the chairman.—W. Gilbert, Hon. Sec.

WELSH NATIONAL C.B.S.

A rather sparsely attended general meeting, Carlton Hotel, April 26, Mr. E. J. Banks chair. The Chairman reviewed the short but already brilliant history of the youngest society in Wales, which, founded upon nothing more than the enthusiasm and determination of an exceedingly small band of fanciers to succeed, had resulted in quite a substantial profit which would shortly be handed over to the Prince of Wales's Fund. However, although the initial effort had been so gratifying, it was not a right and proper policy to embark upon a show of such magnitude without more substantial foundations than enthusiasm and determination, and he hoped that if the fanciers present decided to continue the Welsh National Society that some scheme would be adopted whereby any undue risks of failure would be amply counteracted. He acknowledged that his original idea of the whole of the Welsh societies becoming affiliated to the Welsh National Society was not likely to materialize, but he did not relinquish his views of the real object of the society, which was to foster the fancy, particularly throughout Wales, in many practical ways, and he looked forward to the day when the shows and general welfare of the fancy in Wales would be carried out under the wings of a parent or dominant society, as he hoped the Welsh National would become. Mr. W. Sampson submitted the balance-sheet of the recent Welsh National show, which, though not actually complete, yet revealed the fact that quite a substantial sum would be handed over for the good work as originally arranged. A discussion ensued and eventually it was carried that the Welsh National Society should continue, and that the idea of affiliated societies be abandoned in favour of individual membership of 5s. per annum, membership being open to the United Kingdom; partners to be accepted as two individual members of 5s. each. Officers for ensuing year elected: Messrs. E. J. Banks chair, W. Sampson hon. show manager, E. W. Allsopp corresponding show sec., in the place of Mr. E. J. Thomas, who, by reason of heavy demands on his time, was not willing to again undertake this office. Efforts are being made at once to enrol a number of members at the earliest possible opportunity, so that a working committee may be formed, and immediately this has been accomplished a general appeal to the fancy to become members will then follow, when, it is confidently expected, the worthy objects of the society will be fully appreciated and a goodly number of fanciers enrolled as members. Other matters of a routine character were then dealt with, the general meting disbanding so that the committee could deal with the further business.—E. W. Allsopp, Hon. Show Sec.

HAND-REARING AND AILING HEN (F. H., Hodgson).—(1) You can rear the young by hand quite easily after they are a few days old by reducing the ordinary egg-food to a rather moist paste by the addition of a few drops of water, and feeding them with this about every hour from dawn to dusk. When they get a fortnight or so old, every two hours will suffice to feed them. Give as much each time as they will "gape" for readily. Add a little finely minced green food to the egg-food, but be careful to see that neither this nor any other item in the food becomes sour. A tiny piece of wood trimmed to a spatula shape at the end, a fountain-pen filler, or a "fill-up" feeder are useful articles to give the food with. Keep a light fold of flannel or woollen over the nest until the birds are fairly well covered with feathers. (2) This hen is obviously unfit for breeding, and should not have been mated. The chances are greatly in favour of the eggs being unfertile, and that will be, in reality, the best thing in such a case. When she has finished sitting, or when you take away the young, if any are hatched, cage her separately, and in addition to the usual seed diet give every third day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the intervening days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills, tincture of lobelia, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre. Continue this treatment for two or three weeks, and if bird is not quite well then, stop it for a week, and then resume it for the same length of time as before. Give a little green food daily.

YOUNG DYING (Govanite).—I cannot tell whether you neglected anything in the management of your birds, as you omit to say anything at all about your management of them. But there is little doubt that they died because the parents did not feed them. Did you leave the cock with the hen whilst sitting last time? If so, try taking him away when you are putting her to sit next time, and leave her to hatch out and rear the young by herself, which she will do quite as well, and perhaps much better, without his presence. On the other hand, if he was taken away last time, leave him with her next time, and see if she feeds better then. You might also try a mixture of equal parts crushed sponge cake, yolk of egg and bread crumbs for soft food, and if the hen seems slack at her duties sprinkle it with maw seed, and begin to give a little fresh green food every morning and afternoon from the third day, and offer a bath in which you have dissolved a little common salt—just enough to make it taste faintly saline. You should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free, to see if there is anything wrong with your general management.

A SLOW BUILDER (Ilen Building).—The hen is not in prime breeding condition, which is the cause of her carrying material in and out of the nest-box without finishing the nest. As the season is now getting in full swing, she may set to work in earnest any day, so it is useless separating her now. Treat her and her mate the same as advised to "Messer" in our last issue, and beyond this let things take their own course, and try to exercise the blessed virtue of patience.

NON-FEEDING HENS (A Beginner but a Sticker).—The cause of the young dying is sufficiently obvious—the parent not feeding them. Unfortunately this is apt to occur in spite of every attention given to the parent; sometimes, indeed, it may occur through too much attention being given them, especially in the case of nervous hens. Next time she is beginning to sit, do not remove the cock—try the effect of leaving him to assist in the upbringing of the young; do not interfere with them more than is absolutely necessary, and otherwise treat them the same as advised to "Govanite" in this issue. Do not overstock the birds with large quantities of soft food at once. Give small quantities, especially whilst the brood are very young, and give fresh twice or three times a day. You may also add a teaspoonful of soaked summer rape to the dietary daily if the birds show signs of slacking in their duties when treated as advised in the reply referred to. But be very careful that the latter item does not become sour, which it does in an almost incredibly short time in close warm weather.

SEEMS IN PAIN (M.B., Cardiff). Glad to hear the bird is better of the cough, etc. The symptoms you name are wholly due to constipation. Give a spray of watercress or a freshly-gathered spray of succulent young groundsel daily, and for three consecutive days add to the water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. After this give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of calumba for a day or two. If the gasping has not quite disappeared when you have finished the above treatment resume the treatment advised in previous reply and give it for another three or four weeks.

SITTING AND NOT LAYING (J.C., Moston).—The reason the hen did not lay was owing to an abnormal condition of the ovary. After hatching the eggs you gave her, and rearing the young, it is not at all unlikely that she will in due course go to nest again and produce a clutch of eggs herself. To increase the chances of this, treat as far as possible, whilst the young are being reared, the same as advised to "Messer" in last issue, and as soon as the young are taken away from her add six drops of tincture of gentian and four each of tincture of calumba and tincture of steel to the water for a week or so. It might be helpful to keep her within sound of a vigorous singing cock.

KEEN BUT SLOW (Apprehensive).—(1) This pair of birds only require a little patience, and all will, I think, come right. You may, with advantage, be a little more generous in the dietary. Give the egg-food every second day—a teaspoonful, with about half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame mixed in it—and on the alternate days give a teaspoonful of the mixed seed, and a young growing stool of dandelion daily. (2) The only reason that the hen stopped laying at the second egg is that Nature had not provided any more for that clutch. She may produce a full average size clutch next time. It is not likely that her next clutch will be ready to commence sitting in less than three weeks, and it may be a month, and by that time the egg will be quite useless for sitting. You might put it under any other pair that were just beginning to sit, but if no other pair is available you may as well throw the egg away at once.

MISS V. SHEPPEARD.—Replied to by post.

NO EGGS (J.A.W.).—The failure to produce eggs is due to an abnormal condition of the ovary bringing about an interrupted or broken cycle of reproduction. The best treatment in such a case is to provide the hen with a clutch of fertile eggs from a robust pair of birds when she has settled down to sitting, and leave her to hatch out and rear the young. This she will frequently do in very good style, and then she will often go to nest in due course and produce the next clutch of eggs herself in the normal manner—the ability to complete this cycle having the effect of rousing the now dormant organs to activity. There is nothing wrong with your feeding, but you might, when expecting her to go to nest again, provide a young growing stool of dandelion daily, and it would perhaps help matters to keep her where she can hear a lusty singing cock, or young being reared.

MATING AND SITTING (F.H.).—(1) If the cocks were in quite robust health and active, you might try mating in spite of the fact that they were not singing, but very few cocks that are in good health are not singing more or less now. The fact that yours have not sang all winter is significant of something wrong with the health, and therefore I see no chance of any good result from mating them. (2) In addition to the staple seed diet, give, every second day for a week or two, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. Also give a young growing stool of dandelion, gathered fresh, daily—the whole plant, cut off just below the surface of the ground, with leaves, blooms, seed heads and all. In the drinking water you may add every second day for a week ten drops of lemon-juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. (3) Sorry, but I know of no way of making a hen sit against her will. Some hens will refuse to sit when the cock is taken away, and if this is what you did, the only remedy is to leave the cocks with them in future and let things take their chance in other respects.

HATCHING DIFFICULTIES (E.M.T.). Yes, I rather think you are a little over-anxious about the hatching period, and this is very apt to lead to meddlesomeness. The fourteenth evening, not morning, is early enough to make attempts at assisting eggs to hatch. If you had "Canary Breeding for Beginners," you would find this subject fully dealt with. My opinion is that had you immersed the eggs in warm water for a few moments on the mornings and evenings of the thirteenth and fourteenth days nothing at all would have been required further. The young bird with yolk attached had certainly lived, but if it was dead when you opened the shell further incubation would not have resuscitated it. The yolk of the egg is only absorbed a few hours before hatching is due. As the hens feed well, my advice is to leave them as much as possible to their own designs, and avoid all interference beyond putting the eggs in warm water as suggested above on the thirteenth and fourteenth days.

DIFFICULTY IN PERCHING (A.M.F., Novice).—See that the perches are made of a nice soft wood, and are of a proper size and shape, nearly round in shape, and just large enough for the tips of the hind and middle front claws to nearly, but not quite, meet when the birds grasp them. If two or three perches, have one rather thinner and another rather thicker than this, which should be the average size. Do not quite withdraw the egg-food yet. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed, and in addition give separately a heaped teaspoonful of egg-food each morning for another month at least, or the equivalent in bread and milk with a little sugar sprinkled over it. In the afternoon give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp (see that it is sound in the kernel), niger, teazle, millet and broken groats one day, and a similar quantity of soaked or scalded summer rape instead. Give a small leaf of dandelion or a spray of chickweed per bird daily, and should they get constipated give a good-sized spray of watercress or the tender tips of young groundsel until the droppings become normal. Glad to hear the Yorkshire cock is much improved.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

SKYLARKS NOT SINGING (W., Wallington).—From time to time we have published helpful articles on the Skylark, which I am afraid you must have missed. If you have back numbers why not look them up? Your method of feeding does not appear to me to be quite the correct thing, that is, if you want to get as much out of your birds as possible. A Lark fancier known to me is very successful with his birds, and they are practically continuous singers. He uses a good brand of insectile mixture as a staple food, mixing with it a little hard-boiled egg three times a week, making the whole crumbly moist with scraped carrot, cold boiled potato or chopped green food. In addition to this they are supplied with all kinds of insects, including mealworms and a little mixed seed. If you are not quite satisfied with your birds why not give them an entire change of food, hanging them outside for a few hours daily. Have you our Nutshell booklet on the Skylark? It is well worth the cost.

MORE NON-SITTING LARKS (Frederick Shore).—The only explanation I can offer of your birds not singing is this, either they are hens, or, if cocks, they are too nervous to open when within hearing of the others. Of course, I am presuming that you keep your birds pretty well together. I would advise you to move them away from the singers and hang one lot, if possible, at the front of the house and the other lot at the back. I have no doubt, if they are of the right sex, they will soon make a start. The Skylark, as a rule, is an incessant songster, but occasionally one will have a bird that refuses to open. A friend of mine had such a bird and tried him for two seasons, and when I visited him one morning he determined to keep it no longer and gave it its liberty. The bird rose in the air and sent out the most glorious notes imaginable. Such is a proof that all birds will not sing when caged; this applies to some other species.

FEATHER-PLUCKING REDPOLL (Great Din).—I gather from your letter that your bird is not troubled with insects, consequently the feather-plucking must be put down to an acquired habit. Possibly your feeding is a little bit heating, and I would advise you to use the following mixture: Canary and teazle, in equal quantities, and half quantity of summer rape. Give him this as a staple food, and supply greenfood and wild seeds liberally, such as sprays of shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, seeding grass, and others as they come in season. These will be good food for him and also amuse him. Tie a piece of string or a chicken's feather on to the wires of his cage. Give him a change by hanging in another room or outdoors for an hour or two. Before making the change in diet give a teaspoonful of effervescing citrate of magnesia in 3 tablespoonsful of water, repeat two days later.

COVERING FOR CAGE FLOOR (Bunyip).—If you slightly damped the moss litter you would find it an improvement. Do not make it wet; sift a quantity of it, lay it in a corner of an outhouse, sprinkle with a watering can, mix it up, and cover with a sack, you will then find it just damp enough two or three days later. Another method is to use sheets of absorbent paper; cut half-a-dozen the size required, and remove one of them daily. The objection to sawdust is that it gets scattered about more than any other covering. In our series of "Illustrated Ideas" which ran for some time in this paper, sketches were given of easily made arrangements to prevent litter. If you have back numbers you could possibly look them up.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (Ritep).—If you kept your small aviary thoroughly clean, and allowed the birds to bathe freely, you could keep all those you mention in it. Of course, they would be all cock birds. (2) I do not think you could improve on your selection.

TREATMENT OF WAXWING (John Wright).—I suspect from the tone of your letter that your treatment of your Waxwing has not been correct, consequently, it has gone out of condition, and the loss of feathere is due to the same cause. This bird is not a difficult one to keep—that is, to any one used to keeping insectivorous birds. Procure a good make of insectile food, and for a time feed him upon this, having mixed with it a little grated raw carrot. He can be fed upon a cheaper diet, such as crushed puppy biscuit, or game meal, soaked in hot water, and about two parts of ants' eggs, and dried flies, mixed with six parts of the meal, but I think you will do better for a time to feed him on the insectile food, mixing half a hard-boiled egg with it occasionally, or a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake. Fruit should be given pretty freely, such as banana, sweet orange, apple, grocers' currants, raisins, chopped figs, dates, etc; all these can be given separately or mixed with the stock food. Waxwings are enormous eaters, and consequently get very fat; to counteract this give a mild dose of sulphate of soda occasionally. Before commencing this treatment give the above medicine in a fairly strong dose for one day, by dissolving in three tablespoonfuls of water as much as will cover a shilling, and repeat a couple of days later. Smear the bare places with vaseline, with just a few drops of paraffin mixed with it; do it every other day for ten days.

TROUBLE WITH BRAMBLEFINCH (S. W. F.).—The best cure for your Bramble is to place him in a cage of a different size; what he does is purely a habit, and if he had, for instance a larger cage, the distance to jump would be altered; you should also be careful to see that the perches are either wider apart or closer together. (2) The birds you mention could all be put together in the aviary, let them fly there all the summer, and if they are very steady you could leave them until they are three parts through the moult, and then catch them up, but this would not do with wild specimens, they would injure their plumage before you could get them steady enough for exhibition.

REARING THRUSHES (Nemo).—I am inclined to think the cause of the death of your young Thrushes was that you fed them over night with food that was not perfectly sweet. This is very important. Fanciers are inclined to get a little bit careless in this matter when the birds are getting a fair size, but one should be quite certain of the sweetness of the food, until the birds are old enough to feed themselves, when they will of course refuse to eat anything that is not fresh. (2) You can keep them either in an unheated room or in an outdoor aviary that is fairly well sheltered from wind and wet. (3) I have seen Jackdaws together in a large outside aviary, also Magpies, and Jackdaws with Jay. Hand-rear them, and keep them together from the first. If three are kept together they should be all of the same sex.

MULING TROUBLES (Geo. Chaffie).—Your trouble arises through the hen not being quite fit when put up for breeding, and the chances are that the eggs she is sitting on will not be fertile. Let her remain on them the full fortnight and, if unfertile, give her a clear week before mating her again. As soon as you know about the fertility of the eggs, commence to feed her, if they are no good, so as to get her into prime condition before running her again with her partner. In addition to a little egg food, give mixed seeds, and for green food use young dandelion leaves. Tie a piece of string to the bars of the cage, you will then see by her actions when she is fit. She should romp about the cage, calling and tugging at the string. It is waste of time to mate birds unless they are quite ripe. The want of precaution is the cause of many hens refusing to incubate and rear.

REARING UNKNOWN BIRDS (E. M. T.).—I think you would do right to treat your nestlings when obtained as though they were delicate soft-bills, then you will be certain to be on the safe side. Mix hard-boiled eggs with stale home-made sponge cake, and a pinch of insectile food containing plenty of ants' eggs. Moisten with new milk, mixing it fresh two or three times a day, so that it is perfectly sweet. As the birds grow, increase the quantity of insectile food. If they turn out to be Softbills you can continue this way of feeding, but should they prove to be Finches, you could then mix a little soaked rape with the food. From time to time add a pinch of fine grit to the mixture. Do not use raw meat; this was the cause of your failure last time. Meat is very useful in the hands of experienced fanciers, but is not to be recommended as a general food. You could give the babies a few live ants' eggs, small mealworms, and green fly. On this treatment you should be able to rear almost anything. Be very careful to keep the youngsters warm. This is very important. I have used a hot-water bottle on cold nights and found it answer admirably. (2) If the food has been kept in a dry place and is free from maggots, it should be good, but you had better procure a fresh supply while the birds are very young. Our Nutshells Nos. 25 and 26 would give you much useful information on hand-rearing British birds.

OBSTRUCTED OIL GLAND (Mrs. Simmonds).—If you are able to handle the bird the gland should be pierced with a needle, and anointed with a little vaseline, but before doing this be sure the gland is really out of order, swollen and ripe. Give the bird a fairly strong dose of Glauber salts, as much as will cover two czs. of water, and feed him on a liberal allowance of fruit. Give him the bath on all suitable days, but not when you are dosing him with medicine.

THRUSH OUT OF SORTS (F. Shuttle).—You should procure our Nutshell Booklet on the Thrush; this would give you full particulars as to general treatment, in which I am afraid you are making a mistake. The food you mention is good for a change, but hardly nutritious enough for general use. If you can procure some good insectile food give him this for a time, using for a change crushed puppy biscuits soaked in gravy or hot milk. Offer all kinds of insects and fruit in season. Keep in a big cage and let him bathe freely. Before making this change in his diet, give as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence, dissolved in an ounce of water, repeat two days later. Catch the bird and examine him for insects; smear the bare places with a little pure lard or vaseline. His complete recovery rests a good deal upon your treatment and attention. If after a week of the new treatment he still suffers from loss of voice, make the following mixture: Glycerine and honey in equal quantities; give half a teaspoonful in slightly warm drinking water, thoroughly mixing it in a glass vessel.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

BREEDING BUDGERIGARS (T. C.).—I expect the cold snap has been responsible for most of their failures, and that now the warm weather has come you will be having better luck. There is plenty of time yet, and I expect that very soon the 1914 bred birds will commence nesting operations, and also go to nest as soon as the hen is in breeding condition. Give them as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat. Budgerigars use no nesting material, so you had better put up separate nest boxes for the Java Sparrows and Canaries, as it would greatly discomfort the Budgerigars if the husks were filled up with hay and other rubbish. Our Nutshell, Budgerigars, 2½d., post free, from our Manager would assist you in the general treatment of your birds.

PLANTS FOR GARDE : AVIARY (A. J. P.).—The only plant likely to survive the attacks of Budgerigars and other Parrakeets is the common broad-leaved laurel, and I doubt even if this gets a very long life. I should advise turfing part of the space, plant some nettles in patches, and sow cereals in others; all these, except the nettles, will supply food for the birds, and if you put some branches about, with their butts in the ground, so that they resemble trees, it will give the aviary quite a furnished and tasteful appearance. During dry periods the grass should be watered daily, as the Budgerigars take their bath by rolling about among wet grass and herbage.

A FEATHER PULLER (Heard).—Continue to give the magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, the habit of voiding largely early in the morning is not abnormal. Spraying with a tepid quassia solution will tend to make the under feathers, etc., bitter to the taste, and may check to some extent the pulling habit. White millet is quite wholesome; you can supply it in equal bulk to the canary seed. Cease giving the boiled egg at once, but all the other items of diet you name are permissible. The cod-liver oil emulsion should be confinned till the bird is in good condition generally. It will take some little time to properly tone the bird up and undo the mischief of an unwholesome dietary, and to this end you must continue the treatment as given in this and our previous reply. It is quite a good idea placing the body of eage over the rotten stump, it will keep him employed; any means which tends to check ennui, and supplies also natural exercise, is for his benefit. As soon as the weather is really warm, he can be put out of doors daily, but do not place him in a current of air, nor where the sun can shine upon him in its full power. Exercise outside the cage is also very beneficial when your convenience permits.

KITCHEN AVIARY (E. Cowell).—It is not easy to give you a definite reply, but I note from the details you give that soft food (insectile mixture) and insects have apparently no part in your menu, neither do you mention fruit. It would be advisable if you wrote to our British bird expert, Mr. H. Norman, re the British species. The Pekin Nightingale should certainly have had insectile mixture, ripe fruit and a few insects daily, and your failing to supply these undoubtedly caused its death. Get our Nutshell No. 19, 2½d., post free from our Manager, and you will no longer be in doubt. You give me no idea of the size of your aviary, nor yet the total number of birds you have in it. Possibly you are overcrowded, and the cage may be infested with red mite, hut in the absence of details I am unable to help you materially. Do not use metal drinkers—every fourth day for a month put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water; this applies to each drinker you have in the aviary. Also supply green food liberally, such as flowering and seeding grass, chickweed, shepherd's purse, and other garden weeds. Weavers and Whydahs are the better for one or two mealworms per diem, also any stray spider or smooth caterpillar you happen to come across.

GREY PARROT WITH COLD (Anxious One).—Give the Dinneford's Magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely. Bathe the eye with a dilute rosewater and zinc solution (tepid) daily; wipe dry the surrounding plumage with a soft cloth. Spray or bathe the nostrils daily with a dilute glyco-thymoline solution. Get the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts—put half a teaspoonful of this mixture to each couple of tablespoonfuls of the drinking water on such days as you are not giving the magnesia. You can continue the use of the honey and borax. Keep the bird in your warmest room, yet where the temperature is fairly regular. This is very important, as a fluctuating temperature, or a cold one, will greatly retard its recovery. Do not give any more tea sop; moisten a little bread with tepid and well sweetened water, then put on it 5 drops of cod-liver oil emulsion, allow the latter to soak in, then supply it to the bird; it can be given once or twice a day. The other items of its dietary can all be given. Report progress a month hence. I repeat keeping the bird in a really warm room, where the temperature does not fluctuate materially is the most important part of the treatment.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird, for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS"

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

It Pays to Breed Hybrids

IT PAYS TO BUY TABULATED BOOK KNOWLEDGE, WRITTEN BY THE EXPERTS ON YOUR OWN SUBJECT—if you have the practical knowledge too. Cage Bird Breeders are too apt to think that they know more than any book can teach them.

This is a mistake. An experienced man may know more than any one expert, but he cannot know more than all of them together.

The WAVERLEY Standard Publication on "CANARIES, HYBRIDS and BRITISH BIRDS" is a veritable encyclopædia of Cage Bird knowledge. One of its strongest points is that it deals most thoroughly with HYBRIDS, a branch of Cage Bird activity that is too much neglected by the breeders, but which is very full of possibilities for the man who is willing to learn.

This grand edition of an experts' book that covers the whole subject is now almost exhausted. But we beg to invite all Cage Bird readers to take immediate advantage of our Special Offer to send a copy, carriage paid, without any obligation to order, for one week's approval, for FREE Examination at home. Send off the FREE Approval Form NOW. There will soon be no more left.

Hundreds of Enthusiastic Letters from Satisfied Buyers.

Mr. McLinden, Dublin:—
"It commends itself to the past master in bird keeping, and is invaluable to the amateur, for it is written in such simple language. The chapters on Rearing and Pairing are very explicit, and the coloured plates are, to my mind, simply superb."

Mrs. Bertram, Christchurch, Hants:—
"I have found it of the greatest use, while the illustrations are of value to the novice and the expert alike. The section dealing with Hybrids is especially commendable, and should prove of service to fanciers."

Mr. Bryant, Acton, London:—

Mr. Ralph Harrison, Whitley Bay:—

Mr. H. Hancock, Burslem:—
"I think the book a great help and well worth the money."

Mr. Lenyon, Clydach, Rhondda Valley:
"I have no hesitation in recommending it to young breeders as essential. Without doubt the most complete work of its kind."

Only a limited number of Copies left of this Grand Book on Successful Cage Bird Breeding

This Book encourages you to act on your own Canary Breeding Ideas.

If you know the specialised scientific information this book can teach you, you may safely act on your own ideas founded on your own intelligent experience with your Birds. And if you have not tried for success with Hybrids, perhaps this suggestive book may encourage you to do so. In addition to every department of CANARY knowledge, it has valuable sections on Hybrids, Thrushes, Warblers, Woodpeckers, Breeding British Hybrids, Tits, Wrens, Wagtails, Starlings, Crows, Larks. Much of this information has never before been printed. It is all founded on years of patient experiment.

You never require another Bird Book if once you have this one. BUT DO NOT TAKE OUR WORD AS TO ITS VALUE. GET IT FOR YOURSELF, FREE. Send it back to us after a week's use if it is not all we say it is. Now sign

The May isssue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby, High Holborn, one shilling monthly, completes vol. 8, and contains a copious index. Amongst the usual "Notes" is an interesting account of Crossbills breeding in Norfolk, and the part also contains notice of the death of the well-known Staffordshire ornithologist, Lieut. Francis A. Monckton, who was killed in action on Nov. 8 last, the notice being accompanied by an extract from a letter to Mr. Witherby by Lieut. Monckton on birds seen at St. Nazaire, where he was quartered before going to the front. The many who are interested in the nature movements of our British birds should subscribe to the new volume, which commences next month.

We hear that Mr. C. E. Silk, Emsworth, is appointed judge at Camborne, the second time this well-known fancier has had to make a journey nearly 400 miles for this local event.

The "Avicultural Magazine," the journal of the Avicultural Society, for May opens with an article on Patagonian Plovers and Trumpeter Birds, by Mrs. Gregory. The Duchess of Bedford contributes "Spring Notes from Scottish Islands." Dr. Hopkinson continues his "English Names for the Parrots," and among the other articles is a delightful account by Mr. B. Theo. Stewart, telling of the peculiarities of "Peter," his Australian Piping Crow.

A Fact and an Inference.

In recording the nesting of a pair of Goldfinches in an orchard in one of the North Shropshire villages, "W.C." in the "Manchester Dispatch" says:—"It is exactly seven years ago since a pair nested in the village. It is a fact that the ranks of professional bird catchers have been depleted by the calls of the army, and as a result we may hear of some of the rarer birds enjoying a little peace."

Without accepting the suggestion that the re appearance of the Goldfinch in this particular orchard in a county where the Goldfinch is protected throughout the year is due to the depletion of the ranks of professional bird-catchers by the calls of the army, the conclusion is obvious that "professional bird-catchers" have shown by their patriotism that they are not so black as some have painted them.

Twin Canaries Dead in Shell

"Familiarity Breeds Contempt."

In reprinting the letter of "Royal Lancaster," headed "Birds in the Firing Line," which appeared in the April 24th issue of CAGE BIRDS, "The Grimsby News" says:—"This may be perfectly true, but there is no doubt that the woods of France, at least in the war area, were silent last year. The birds had flown to a more peaceful spot. Can it be that they are becoming enured to war?" Letters sent from the front, two of which appear in our Correspondence columns, seem to give an affirmative answer to the question.

The Reed Bunting Hawking.

One little bird that haunts the banks of the lichen both in winter and in summer, says the "Saturday Review," is making himself conspicuous by his diligence in collecting food for his young ones; this is the Reed Bunting. The country people call this Bunting the Reed Sparrow, because he has Sparrow brown wings and back, but his black head and white collar are totally unlike a Sparrow, and his monotonous song of only three or four notes tells every listener to what family he belongs. Few prettier sights are to be seen in the meadows than a Reed Bunting hawking flies over the water; the bird twists and turns in the air with the agility and grace of a Swallow, and as he darts this way and that he shows off to the best advantage the velvet blackness of his cap and the pied feathers in his wide-spread tail.

Off the Beaten Track

A Lecture by Mr. W. H. Mugford before the Members of the Wimbledon C.B.S.

At the meeting May 2, at 6, The Broadway, Mr. J. W. Heath presiding. After letters had been read from sec. of National British Bird and M.C., inviting members to join in a country ramble to Beaconsfield on May 15, and from Mr. J. Dewhurst, acknowledging the sum of £1 4s. 6d., the members had kindly subscribed for Mrs. Easterling, one member elected, and one nominated, Mr. Mugford gave his lecture, "Off the Beaten Track." He said his intention was to get away from the general run, as he considered it a very good thing to bring out new ideas in the cage bird fancy.

First of all he would take the question of ventilation. A bird-room should always have a current of air passing through it, a thing people were very fond of neglecting. If birds were kept in box cages it was almost impossible for them to be in a draught, and this was important because draughts were fatal. The windows in his own bird-room were kept open night and day, and he never knew what it was to have a sick bird.

In feeding he considered the best seed was the cheapest. People were too fond of mixtures; through the whole of the winter plain canary seed and a little rape was quite sufficient. As the breeding season approached, he did not consider it necessary to feed the birds on the rich foods so much in favour with fanciers. A little egg-food would do the cocks no harm, but he did not give it to the hens till they were nesting. He believed in the hens becoming broody in a natural way.

Water should be given fresh every day. He believed in the free use of green food, especially when the birds had young. Here the lecturer displayed a big bunch of chickweed, which, he said, was the amount he allowed one pair of birds per day. After the winter had passed, the first green food the birds should receive was dandelion (root as well as leaf); chickweed should follow, then shepherd's purse, lettuce and watercress in the order named, and lastly flowering grass. He gave his young birds green food from the time they could feed themselves.

He was not a believer in the earthenware nest-pans, and did not consider them sufficiently porous. Mentioning the case of young birds dying in shell, he put this down to over-heating of the nest-pans. Through the heat the skin inside the shell of the egg got tough and hard, and the young were unable to force their way out. He considered that bad feeders were the outcome of wrong treatment by fanciers.

Mr. Mugford touched on the various diseases cage birds were subject to. Liver complaint was a prevalent disease, and the best treatment was an unlimited supply of dandelions. Sneezing was caused by dust, and could be got rid of by green food. When a bird suffered from inflammation the best remedy was to give bread and milk, take away the seed, and paint the stomach of the bird with turpentine. Going light was a very deadly disease, for the simple reason that it was rarely discovered until it was too late to relieve the sufferer, but he found the best remedy in such a case was the cod liver oil cage-bird food.

Egg-binding was another complaint which a good many fanciers had to deal with in their bird-rooms. This he put down to improper feeding during the winter. He had never been troubled with it amongst his own birds. He thought one of the finest things for keeping birds in good health was the free use of the bath. Sitting hens should be given a bath after they had been on the nest a week.

As soon as the moult commenced flowers of sulphur should be given to the birds, as it caused them to drop their feathers rapidly and to get through the moult very quickly. Crests, and other birds in which length of feather was essential, should be moulted in a humid atmosphere, as damp lengthened feather, but dryness was desirable for close-feathered varieties.

At the close many questions were asked, which were ably answered by Mr. Mugford, and the meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks for his very interesting lecture.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

How to achieve success on the Show Bench.

Mr. F. Archer, of Messrs. Martin and Archer, Huddersfield, tells how to reach the top rung.

IN an exhibition bird I must have size, because in nine cases out of ten a good big bird will have preference over the smaller exhibits. In addition to size, one must have type—a model of a good bird. I have seen good birds exhibited, and in my opinion they have been neglected, so I will try and tell you how to commence. First secure a large Mule or Hybrid, a youngster, as such a bird has all the essential points to make a champion. The most important point is the moulting out. When the bird begins to moult, special attention must be given re feeding and management. Colour-feeding always plays a prominent part, for colour-feeding always beautifies the exhibit. Some fanciers may say they cannot get the colour on Mules and Hybrids, but I say just the opposite; persevere with your stock if you care for it, for no effort should be spared to obtain the best results at this period.

Colour Food Essential.

I use the best colour-food it is possible to obtain, and mix it with the seed; I also fill the egg-drawers with it, so that the birds are sure to get it, and in this way I get the colour required. Do not be afraid of using colour-food, but let them have a good supply. Some exhibitors take away the seed hopper, but this has a tendency to make the birds come out blotchy and uneven in colour. The moulting out has a lot to do with success on the show bench, and one cannot pay too much attention to the birds when in moult.

As to condition, I was asked about this important point a little while ago by one of our expert judges. He asked me how I got such a remarkable bloom on the birds, and I explained that this was the result of the frequent use of the bath. Should any bird show signs of making a champion, my first duty is to get him used to his tepid bath. After using this a few times the bird looks forward to it, and gets to know you, and this helps to get the bird steady.

I am a great believer in the use of sulphate of iron in the drinking water, as this hardens the plumage and puts on that tightness of feather which helps to swell the success of the exhibit on the show bench, and once the birds are moulted out by using this in their water it keeps up their condition. I think that owing to its cheapness it is not used as it should be, but I certainly think it is good value for money in any bird-room. It is also to be recommended for soft moult, and I have found out that it is very effective. Whenever I get any birds home from a show, a little of sulphate of iron in tepid water is prepared for them, and this always proves beneficial, and I would advise any young fancier to store a little of this for its recommended purpose.

A Word for Mixed Seed.

In our valuable paper CAGE BIRDS we have greatly read a lot about mixed seed, and I would like a few words here. I have exhibited all over the kingdom now for about five years, and I am a user of mixed seed. I find that mixed seed is beneficial for the birds. Ours have had nothing else, and they have done very well on same, as it is practically what Nature supplies, including dandelion, teazle, charlock, shepherd's purse, thistle, and several more which I could mention which are all good for the stock.

I have had very little trouble with ailing birds during my time of exhibiting but scurf when about two years ago I exhibited our well-known clear Linnet Mule "Perfection." This bird was sent away from home in absolutely the best of condition, but my attention was drawn to the bird whilst at the show, and it was here that I learnt something. To my astonishment I saw the bird constantly putting his head through the wires, and the result was that when I received the bird home I found he had rubbed a lot of feathers off his head and neck, and for a long time could not be exhibited.

If I remember rightly the reporter said that the bird was in a bad way and would probably never be benched again. After a while it got worse, and, in addition to scurf, a skin disease set in. This all came about through the front wires being too wide apart, and we tried all sorts of things to effect a cure. One of our leading judges recommended to me "Resinol," which, I am pleased to say, was a perfect success, and I am firmly convinced that it was through persevering with this treatment that the bird got all right again. He began to moult shortly afterwards, and he really looked better than ever. The lesson to be learnt from this is clear; cage fronts should be so arranged as to prevent the bird from putting its head through the wires.

Putting birds down for exhibition is also another item worthy of attention. What looks worse than a good bird badly staged? When will fanciers learn these important points? If a bird is worth exhibiting, surely it is worth a good clean cage, if not a new one. These are small matters, we know, yet, if they were rectified, it would add to the beauty and surroundings of the bird.

Beware of Over-Showing

I do not like birds being transferred from one exhibition to another: this is often done, but I would sooner have my birds at home after an exhibition, so that they may have a rest, and then the cages may be thoroughly cleaned before going to another exhibition. I think when sent to one show the birds have done enough, for nothing does a bird in sooner than long, tedious railway journeys. If the birds are returned home after doing battle at one exhibition, then they are worthy of a rest before proceeding to another. I used to think they could stand it, but experience tells me that over-showing will very soon knock them out of condition, and in time will ruin the best of birds.

I am not a great believer in heated rooms, and if the room is free from draughts, then I am satisfied. A little heat is certainly all right in severe weather, but if an average of 45-50 degress is reached all will go well with the stock. I have always made use of sawdust in my cage bottoms, because this acts as a disinfectant, and also serves to cleanse the birds' feet. Cleanliness is one of the main items towards success, and the more comfortable you make them the better your stock will look. Too much attention cannot be paid to the comfort of your stock. From a visitor's point of view, nothing looks better than a clean and tidy bird-room, and, if success is to be achieved, some labour and pains will have to be taken.

See to the Claws.

When greens are obtainable, certainly tempt the birds with young dandelion leaves, young lettuce, groundsel, etc. This is good for the stock and provides a nice change. Another matter I might mention is the attention to the claws. Do not let a bird overgrow them. They require cutting now and again, and this can be easily done without harming the bird. Hold the bird in your hand, and to the light. Just cut above the vein, and all will be well.

A visit to a show is, to my mind, a lesson that will teach much to a beginner or any exhibitor. We all think our birds are the best, but when one visits a show and compares the winners, where do we stand? I well remember my first visit, and how I thought I had one of those which would take some stopping, but when I got to the show I felt quite out of the running. With regard to the exhibition points, I do not know what is more interesting than to scan over the winners. You receive information from our reporters and judges that you cannot forget, and I am sure all along the line I have found them most obliging. Nothing is more pleasing than to hear the different criticisms on the exhibits, and much is to be learnt by the conversation of the different fanciers that one meets at exhibitions.

With the exception of about two cases, I can speak well of the management of our shows throughout the kingdom, and I have little fault to find. I take it like this, that we are out to go ahead with our hobby. I have exhibited in Scotland, and I give the highest possible praise for the management and welfare of the exhibits. In Wales I have to apply the same remarks. I can only pay the highest tribute to the high-class management under which our exhibitions are held, and I firmly believe that long-distance birds do get preference in being dispatched home. My fellow fanciers, you need have no fear; support the shows where possible, and let our section be better supported. We would like them to grow in numbers, seeing that such a section is the chief attraction of any exhibition.

When Fanciers Meet.

I have been a member of specialist clubs for a number of years, and find that a beginner is encouraged by joining such a club. For instance, in our section, and from a point of view of gaining knowledge in connection with Mules and Hybrids, the National B.B. and M. Club, London, is open for anyone who is interested in this section. Speaking from experience, I can safely say that the beginner is at once encouraged. We must have opinions thrashed out in society. What does this all mean? It is here that fanciers meet not simply for what we can get out of it, but to put something into it as well. Our aim in any section is success, and the only way to achieve this is by one fancier helping another. The exhibitor of birds has something to do; but persevere, my friend, follow the advice of someone who has had experience, and if at first you don't succeed, try again.

I have been told that it is cruel to keep feathered pets in cages, but I would like to ask the faddists if they have ever visited any of our exhibitions. I venture to say no. What we have done time after time for charitable and other causes makes us feel encouraged in our work. If people have been benefited by our holding such exhibitions, we have entered into something which is far more important than imagined, and if sometimes we can help on those who cannot help themselves, our time and trouble will not have been in vain.

PLATYCERINÆ.—A large family of AUSTRALIAN PARRAKEETS which includes among its representatives many of the most graceful and beautiful of living birds.

Platycerci (TRUE BROADTAIL PARRAKEETS).—Food: Canary, millet, wheat, oats, a little hemp or sunflower, fruit (especially apple) and green food. All the true Broadtails can be wintered out of doors when properly hardened off, but all are sensitive to cold when newly imported, and few can stand, in winter, a damp or draughty aviary which gets little sun. They will live in cages, but are not really suited to cage life, as their beautiful plumage is very apt to lose its brilliance after a year or two of close confinement.

Relations Better Apart.

As pets, too, they are a failure, having no talent for talking, and being difficult to tame, and when tamed excitable and treacherous and usually destitute of any affection for their owner. During the breeding season and often at other times, paired birds fight savagely with all members of their own and allied species, although they may tolerate the presence of Parrakeets of other orders. Unmated cocks, however, agree fairly well together, and it is sometimes possible to pair two hens to one cock and breed from both at the same time, provided the hens are on reasonably friendly terms, as is often the case with a mother and daughter who have never been separated. During incubation, and for some time after the young are hatched, the hen seldom or never leaves the nest. Hen Broadtails have smaller heads and narrower beaks than cocks. The young often breed when a year old, but do not obtain full plumage for eighteen months.

ROSELLA PARRAKEET (Platycercus eximius).—The commonest and one of the most beautiful of the family. The adult hen has the red area on the head and neck smaller than in the cock, and with much more ragged edges, and behind the eye the red has a greyish, washed out, tint. The presence or absence of a green spot on the nape is not a very useful guide to sex, for while it is probably true to say that it is never found on an adult cock, it is certainly absent in the case of many adult hens. Young birds have a narrow green bar running from the back of the neck to the centre of the crown and show very little blue on the closed wing. For turning out, it is absolutely necessary to get tame, or half tame adult cocks the tameness of the hens does not matter so much. Newly imported or young birds are inveterate wanderers when given their liberty.

YELLOW MANTLED PARRAKEET (Platycercus splendidus).—A local race of the Common Rosella with a yellower neck and wings and brighter coloration generally. It is very rarely imported.

MEALY ROSELLA (Platycercus pallidiceps).—Requires careful treatment until it has completed its first moult in this country, after which it is as indifferent to cold as any other Platycercus. It is a satisfactory bird at liberty, wandering less than many of its allies, and nesting readily either in barrels or in natural holes in trees. It is very spiteful in disposition, showing a special aversion to its cousin the Red Rosella, and also to the Blue bonnet Parrakeet. The hen is rather smaller than the cock, and has a narrower head.

An Uncommon Rosella.

BLUE-CHEEKED PARRAKEET (Platycercus amathusiæ).—A local variety of the Common or "Moreton Bay" Mealy Rosella, differing from the southern form in the bluer colouring of the cheeks. Blue-Cheeks often show a few red feathers on the crown of the head, a peculiarity which sometimes occurs in the ordinary form.

BROWN'S PARRAKEET (Platycercus browni).—Requires warmth and care until well through the first moult following importation, but is afterwards perfectly hardy. Brown's Parrakeet is unfortunately a less good stayer at liberty than the Mealy Rosella, but it is by no means a hopeless bird to try. Like P. palliditeps it has an intense aversion to Bluebonnets, and it would be most unwise to attempt to keep the two species in the same aviary. The cock Brown's has a decidedly larger head and heavier beak than the hen. Among imported birds the proportion of cocks is usually very small and the number of large, brightcoloured hens, sold as cocks, is correspondingly great.

The Smallest of the Family.

STANLEY PARRAKEET (Platycercus icterotis).—The smallest of the Platycerci, and a free breeder in captivity. The hen is readily distingnishable by her dull and patchy tints, the Stanley being the only typical Broadtail in which the sexes differ markedly in colour. Stanley's are not to be recommended for turning out, as they are bad stayers, and are too small to defend themselves against the attack of Owls.

YELLOW-RUMPED PARRAKEET (Platycercus flaveolus). Formerly quite common, but now rarely imported. The sexes are much alike, and are often very difficult to distinguish. It appears to stay well at liberty, but I may say that my experience of Yellow-rumps has been very limited.

YELLOW-BELLIED PARRAKEET (Platycercus flaviventris).—Easily distinguishable from the last-mentioned species by its dark green back. The Yellow-belly is a savage and aggressive bird, the hens being quite as quarrelsome as the cocks and a great nuisance in mixed company. They are readily distinguishable by the small size of their heads and beaks. Yellow-bellies are not very good stayers when allowed their freedom.

PENNANT'S PARRAKEET (Platycercus elegans).—Sexes are alike in colour, but adult hens are very readily distinguishable by the small size of the head. Young birds on leaving the nest are a dark leaf green, with a little red on the throat and forehead, blue cheek patches, and some blue in the wings and tail. In securing a pair of Pennants for turning out make sure that the cock is a steady old show bird well used to cage life and the ways of the world generally. Newly-imported, immature, or outdoor aviary birds are a vexation of the spirit, as they stay well for many months and then depart on the approach of the breeding season. When in poor condition, Pennants are very susceptible to septic fever.

ADELAIDE PARRAKEET (Platycercus adelaidæ).—Sexes much alike, but very red birds are nearly always hens. The young are decidedly smaller than young Pennants of the same age, and of a more golden olive colour. Adelaides do fairly well at liberty.

BARNARDIUS PARRAKEETS.—Closely allied to the typical Platycerci their food and treatment should be the same.

BARNARD'S PARRAKEET (Barnardius barnardi). A very beautiful bird, and not particularly dangerous in mixed company. Beak of the hen much smaller than that of the cock, and her colours, usually, though not invariably, duller and showing less blue. Barnard's do well at liberty, but the young are apt to stray to great distances from their birth place and eventually fail to return.

Quarrelsome with Neighbour.

BAUER'S PARRAKEET (Barnardius [illegible]).—Typical specimens have the lower breast almost entirely yellow, and have no red on the forehead. The hens are easily distinguishable by the small size of their head and beak. Bauer's are most dangerous neighbours for other quarrelsome Parrakeets likely to fight with them, and even at liberty will often inflict fatal injuries by biting deeply into the upper mandible of an adversary and sometimes tearing it completely off. Half-tame birds are best for turning out

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Correspondence.

The Fertilisation of Eggs.

Sir,—I have read several letters in your valued paper, Cage Birds, in reference to the fertilisation of a clutch of eggs taking place all at once. I have had two hens with a clutch of four eggs each. Result in each case—1 chick, 3 clear. I saw the cocks tread the hens before the eggs were laid, so that as in each case one egg was fertile and three clear, I cannot see how fertilisation can take place all at once. I should be pleased to hear more about this subject.

W. D. Fryett.

The Value of White of Egg.

Sir,—In the report of the second half of my lecture to the members of the Great Horton Good Intent C.B.S., as given in the last issue of Cage Birds, you have only mentioned the yolk of an egg in the mixture of egg food I give for rearing. I give not only the yolk but the white also, as to my thinking the white of the egg is very beneficial, and adds to the moisture, and I also add a teaspoonful of sugar. It is for the good of the Fancy I write you, for I should not like anyone to make a mistake if I could help it. Not forgetting to wish Cage Birds every success. G. Snead.

The Norwich Plainhead and How to Improve It.

Sir,—In noting the reply of Mr. J. Bastock, particularly relating to the invitation for him to join in the class for a little "Fancy help," I assure him I fully appreciate how tame an affair it must appear to him; and how much I regret the "giving away" specimens are in his opinion likely to fall considerably short in merit compared with his perhaps more modern birds. However, I am glad to note he has given a most definite statement "that size and head properties cannot be obtained without the Crestbred." Will he kindly endeavour to prove that important statement?

E. W. Allsopp.

Light Birds from Dark Parents.

Sir,—Noticing that in some of the letters referring to the Hybrid "White Rose" mention has been made of light-plumaged and albino birds being bred from dark parents, it has occurred to me that the accompanying cutting from the "Birmingham Daily Mail" would be of interest: :—

"The causes of variation and of albinism are not exactly known. These phenomena, however, are usually attributed to a deficiency in the pigment cells. This gives us not only white varieties in extreme cases, but nearly every gradation of colour from black to white. For instance, a case of Sparrows sold at the late Mr. F. Coburn's sale last week contained forty-eight birds covering such a range. Often birds abnormally coloured assume the normal plumage after the first moult; in others the young of these birds have plumage similar to their parents. The Hon. Walter Rothschild recorded that in the summer of 1891 four white Swallows were hatched at Aylesbury. In the following year the parents reared one white bird in a brood that was otherwise normal; in 1893 there were two white and three normally coloured young; and in 1894 two white and two normal. In another nest at Aylesbury there were two white and two normal young, and the parents, Mr. Rothschild thought, were probably related to the other pair. Such variations most frequently occur amongst birds of black or very dark plumage, such as Blackbirds, Rooks, and Starlings. In birds of green plumage yellow varieties are not rare.

Variegated.

After Many Days.

Sir,—Having completed my duties as the judge of pigeons at the recent Stratford Show, I spent a quiet hour in looking through the cage bird classes, thus reviving interest in a branch of the Fancy which at one time absorbed all my spare time and energy. Not having exhibited Canaries since 1887, I thought I would buy a copy of Cage Birds, just to see how matters were progressing, and what changes, if any, had taken place. The result was so interesting to myself that I thought it possible that a few impressions would perhaps interest your readers.

In the first place, the fact that all the old varieties seem to hold their own greatly impressed me. In the other branches of the feathered fancy many of the one-time popular varieties have disappeared one by one, their glories having been eclipsed by new comers, either of home manufacture or importations from America and the Continent of Europe. In looking through the account of the Welsh International Show, I only noticed one variety that was unknown to me in 1887—namely, the Cinnamon Border Fancy. I remember seeing Cinnamon-marked Borders, but no selfs, so far as my memory serves me, were shown in the early 80's.

The next marked impression was the fact that so many of the old time judges and exhibitors are still on active service. It brought back memories to read such names as J. Robson, Joe Thomas, Silk (my old Emsworth friend, I imagine), F. W. Barnett, Green (of Lizard fame), Baker, the Barnstaple Belgian man, T. J. King, and others who were my fellow competitors of over 30 years' ago. It says a great deal for the cage bird fancy that these and other old warriors like C. A. House, now our leading all-round judge of pigeons, and George Gardner, equally well-known in the rabbit world, are still keenly interested in the cage birds. I still have prize cards lifted, as they say in Scotland, at shows held as far back as 1877, and the silver medal (with gold centre) won by me at the Palace in 1880 for most points in the British Bird Section, is still a most treasured possession.

I sometimes think I shall take up my old favourites again, and if anything would induce me to do so it would be the prospect of again meeting so many of those who have helped to make the fancy what it is. The healthy look of your advertising columns speaks surely of the success of your journal, and I can assure you that the perusal of your last number was a pleasure indeed, and well worth repetition. W. L. Roe.

When Judges Disagree.

The Case of "White Rose."

Sir,—It is very interesting to read the letters which have appeared in Cage Birds on the notorious "White Rose." Some are to the point, and very instructive to the Fancy; others are of the "comedian" order. Mr. Saywell evidently tries to mix his paint to suit his audience. In his latest picture he puts the colour on Mr. Weston, and again gets the wrong tint. I well remember this bird being unpacked at the Nottingham Show of 1912, my attention being drawn to it by several fanciers, J. W. S. amongst them, and he distinctly stated he thought it was a Greenie-Bullie, remarking that it had a Bullie's eye and a Greenie's wing. I have also heard of him discussing the subject with other fanciers quite recently, when he pointed out to them where the Finch came in. What has caused the change? Now, Mr. J. W. S., take "Mansfield's" advice and stick to Buntings and Foreigners, and don't try to make veterans in the Fancy look small.

Hyson Green.

Sir,—I expected that quite a crowd of the Canary-Bullfinch theorists would have been clamouring for that five-pound note so generously offered by Mr. J. Craig, but not one of them has had the courage to come forward and hold out his hand for it. And they all pretended to be so very cocksure! Mystery piled upon mystery! In my previous letter I asked Mr. J. W. Saywell to play the game, but he still indulges in very unfair misrepresentations. In the first place, I never said that "White Rose" is a bad specimen. I stated that it is a badly splashed, variegated bird, and that a similarly splashed Mule from the Goldfinch, Greenfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite would be practically worthless for exhibition purposes. I feel confident that no experienced Mule breeder or exhibitor will contradict that statement. Correction No. 2: I did not "instruct judges, etc.," as stated by J. W. Saywell. I merely expressed a hope that judges would judge the bird on its merits, after careful examination. Correction No. 3: J. W. S. states that Mr. G. E. Weston said "White Rose" ought to go in the Light Canary Mule class. Mr. Weston denies having said so. Correction No. 4: J. W. S. states that Mr. C. Houlton placed it second at Nottingham, but he carefully omits to add that there were only three entries in the class, and that Mr. Houlton placed a variegated Goldfinch Mule in front of "White Rose." Correction No. 5: I did not ask what colour "White Rose" is now; I asked, what is its natural colour, never having seen it in that interesting state. If Mr. J. W. Saywell had known anything about the subject under discussion he would have known the meaning of the question. His friend knows, and it was to his friend that I put the question, not to J. W. S. Oh, yes, I have seen the bird and have observed its colour, or rather its colours, having seen it more than once during the past show season. Please note the word "colours." But before asking for further particulars, or attempting a reply, J. W. Saywell would be well advised to consult his friend, who, I rather suspect, will have found that J. W. S., by his interference, has done "White Rose" and its owner far more harm than the whole of the correspondents who have written in opposition to the Canary-Bullfinch theory. The unkindest cut of all is where J. W. S. so unfeelingly tells your readers that I am an Irishman—poor Ould Ireland.

But, "say well," or say ill,
Say this, or say that.
Sure, it's no fault of mine,
If they christened me "Pat."

Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid

Reported Successful Breeding in a Darvel Aviary.

Sir,—Some time ago you announced in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, a scheme to encourage the breeding of rare crosses, and offered specials for same. Does this still hold good? If so, I will be pleased to have details of the scheme again, for not having any thought of gaining any success in that direction, I did not take note at the time you intimated it.

On May 3, in my outside aviary, where I have a mixed collection of birds, a Blackbird hen hatched two out of three eggs. I have never had a Blackbird cock, so it must be a Hybrid of some kind. My own idea is that it is a Song Thrush-Blackbird cross, as there are no other large British birds in the aviary except a Corn Bunting. I will be pleased to learn if this is a rare cross, and if it has ever been staged. If the chicks get on all right I will be pleased to let you know how they progress. The Blackbird is feeding the chicks herself. She has moulted twice in the aviary, and has built three nests each season, laying 12 eggs in the first year, and 15 the second. In this, her first nest this year, she only laid three eggs.

Hybrid.

[We believe this (if authenticated) to be a new cross. Specimens purporting to be wild-caught Hybrids between a Song Thrush and a Blackbird have been from time to time exhibited, but these have been generally pronounced to be simply hen Blackbirds with mottled breasts. We have forwarded to our correspondent the original conditions to which he refers, and which appeared in our issue of May 2, 1914, and we shall be very pleased to award a silver medal if the cross be authenticated, the young reared for a period of not less than three weeks from date of hatching, and an account of the breeding and rearing sent to us within twenty-eight days of the young leaving the nest.—Editor, "C.B."]

Birds in the Firing Line.

Sir,—"Country Life" of May 1 has the following interesting letters.

Territorial.

"The following note from a letter received last week from my son, now in Flanders, may be not uninteresting: 'What do you think of a Thrush nesting in one of our field-guns in action? The nest is underneath the barrel of the gun, just in front of the shield, and contains four eggs. I am afraid too many people have been to look at it and the eggs are now, I think, deserted. The gun probably was not fired while the birds were building, but some of the other guns in the battery were firing, certainly. I suppose the birds have got used to noises by this time.' My son speaks also of the numbers of Magpies in the same region, some of which are nesting, apparently little disturbed by the firing and the generally disturbed state of the country. These mischievous birds are very common in French and Belgian Flanders, and account for a good deal of the scarcity of game in that region. Nevertheless, Pheasants were roosting nightly in a copse last winter, close to a house where my son and other officers were billeted, and were shot occasionally with revolvers in order to furnish a welcome change of dietary.—H. A. B."

"In reference to an article of mine on birds in time of war, an officer of the Royal Field Artillery writes an interesting letter from the trenches. 'I read your article,' he says, 'sitting, as I am, in a shell-battered house within 300 yards of the Hun trenches—safely behind a small brick wall, however. As I write, they are plugging at one of our aeroplanes overhead, rifles are firing all along the line, machine-guns pop-pop all night and day, and my own battery has just finished firing a series at them; yet I can at this moment hear Sparrows, Chaffinches, and Larks, singing fit to bust, and I see constantly all sorts of birds going about their rather pleasing spring-time jobs, just as if nothing in the world extraordinary was happening. I have just heard a Yellowhammer join in; Swallows have arrived in fair numbers, Finches and Wagtails come close to the firing line, and Sparrows are building conspicuous rigmaroles of nests in bare poplar trees that I would not shin up myself for a thousand pounds—for reasons that would be obvious, were you here. I noticed directly I came here that such birds as there are took no notice of war at all. I have never seen a Hawk, though, or a Plover, but there are Rooks.' The letter gives a pleasant and vivid picture of a lighter side of war, but its main interest, as I think, lies in its testimony to the brave indifference of many species of birds to all the din of the firing. —Horace G. Hutchinson."

The Awarding of Cups and Medals.

Sir,—I wish to remind Mr. Rawsthorne that all cups, etc., are not awarded in the way he suggests, that is all birds to count points. In my own few years of experience I find that however they are awarded they always tend to a certain amount of soreness amongst the members. For example, a perpetual shield and gold medal were kindly presented to one of the local societies for competition at three shows held during the year, points to count for the four highest birds at each show, somewhat after the manner in which Mr. Rawsthorne suggests. The first two shows went off all right, and about half-a-dozen members were left for the final who had any chance of winning the shield. This was at the British Bird and Pair Show. To show your worthy correspondent that it is not always the man or firm with the most money who can win trophies, I may say that in this particular case a twopenny hen Chaffinch put in a cage with a Norwich cock gained first prize in the Muling class, and also secured for the exhibitors the much coveted shield and gold medal. Whether the judge was right in awarding this pair first prize or not I don't wish to comment on, although to my belief this cross has never yet been obtained, nor is it likely to be. If the pair had been shown by a raw novice, or by a particularly keen Hybrid breeder, there would have been a certain amount of excuse, but they were shown by two of the leading exhibitors (partners) in the district, who have gained premier honours at open shows from the Scottish National to the Crystal Palace with Canaries. The runner-up, also keen on winning the shield, put six hen British seed-eaters in the class provided, and gained 1st 2nd, 3rd, and all other honours, because no other member had any entered, and his points gained were allowed to stand to his credit, although he had no competition; but the rules of the society allow it. This sort of exhibiting exists when only a certain number of birds count for trophies; and after all your trouble in breeding and exhibiting your valuable pairs of Canaries (which might be worth pounds) the birds fade into insignificance when they get alongside a hen Chaffinch with black legs. My own idea of awarding the leading trophy of a society is that it should be for one show only, the old bird show, then everybody would have a fair and square chance. All the entry forms should be sent in and opened in front of the committee and secretary at a stated time, as I have heard of members altering their entries to suit the classes, or adding a few on if they were getting a bit "downhearted." A first feather show is always more or less of a lottery, as some member's birds might be too young, or too old, to show; or he may have had a bad season, and gain no points at the show, and his chance with all his perhaps valuable old birds is absolutely nil. Having gone down heavily at the first show he is driven out of competition for that season. If the members, by a majority, decide all points to count, or only so many birds, I find, Mr. Rawsthorne, it is always the best policy, for the benefit of any society, to work with the majority.

Club Reports.

SOUTH MOOR SOCIAL CLUB.

Meeting, May 9, Mr. Taylor chair, and a poor turn up, through other club meetings on same night clashing. Decided to go into schedule. We have made a good classification of 32 class. Next meeting, June 7. I should like to see as many as possible at this meeting.—Geo. Lane, Sec.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

Meeting, Crown Hotel, May 6. W. Latham and G. Sainsbury were elected members. Unanimously decided to hold an open show in November. An excellent schedule was drawn out and adopted. All members, please, attend a special meeting on May 20th, as some very important business is to come on.—G. J. Jones, Sec.

HARTLEPOOLS C.B.S.

Meeting, May 5, St. George's, a good few turned up. Decided to hold F F. show June 26, birds staged 2.30. Members please turn up by 2 to fix up staging. Fee, 3d. per cage, 1s. limit; Mr. E. Woodhead, judge. Classes, 4 Yorks., 4 Nor., 2 Bord., A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hyb. Decided to apply for patronage of the Border Fancy Club for our annual show, Nov. 6. Fanciers wishing to join should apply to sec., 1s. entry, 2s. 6d. snb. Members note, no June meeting.—J. W. Thornton.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting, Palmer Hall, May 5, before a much improved attendance. Sec. gave a lecture on the internal organs of the Canary. By the means of sketches, he pointed out their various positions, and also the diseases that were likely to occur. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Sec. for the interesting lecture. Decided to hold colour food competition next meeting, when a good book will be given as prize to the member gaining the most points as to methods of making and getting birds to take same. Miss C. Garland was elected a member.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

EAST HAM F.S.

Meeting, May 6. Mr. T. G. Bransford gave a very instructive lecture on "The Fancy in General." During the lecture he read extracts from old works, showing under what adverse conditions the Fancy was originated, and so on to present-day conditions. He also pointed out the necessity of all members to stand by their society, and by so doing helping the Fancy in general. Next meeting, and lecture by G. Gardner, May 20. Visitors welcome. —W. A. Harwood.

CHESTER-LE-STREET C.B.S.

Meeting, May 8, Mr. Stanger chair. Decided that subscription be 3s. 6d. per annum. New members, 1s. entrance after this year, and that N.F. show be held July 17; judges nominated, Messrs. J. Hands, R. Rowell, W. T. Smith, T. Dixon, W. Reid, and J. Risebrough. Schedule to be same as last year, except that class 9 reads, Cinn., Yell. or Buff; class 15, Hense or F.M. Linnet. Decided to leave annual show date and schedule till next meeting. Mr. Ward was re-elected sec. and treas. Chair to be left open till next meeting.—R. Ward, Sec.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

Meeting May 8, Mr. W. Cresswell chair, elected in place of Mr. A. Dawson resigned, with a very moderate attendance. We elected Mr. W. Reed, of Sunderland, to judge Canaries at annual show Oct. 30. Mr. J. Lowerson was elected assist. sec. New member elected, J. Stevenson. To see if we can get a better attendance, we are having a table show at next meeting, June 5, and perhaps I may have a box of chocolates or a perambulator, as some members certainly seem to require to be carried about. Classes for table show: Nor. bred 1915, Yorks. 1915, Bord. 1915, Linnet F. or H.M., Redpoll, Siskin or Twite, A.O. Brit. Hardbill; birds to be staged at 6. Mr. W Forster judge. Members are asked to bring as many birds as possible and give him something to do.—G. F. Eales, Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

General meeting, May 3, with a good attendance. Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) was elected to judge N.F. show. The chief item was a lecture on "The preparation of birds for exhibition," by Mr. Barker Clegg. The lecturer dealt with the subject in a very businesslike way, beginning with the weaning of the youngsters and training them for the Nest Feather Shows, and explained the full management of the various varieties during the moult, their colour feeding, and the washing and grooming for the open shows. The lecture was greatly appreciated by all, and at the close Mr. Clegg was kept busy answering a running fire of questions. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Clegg brought to a close a very interesting and instructive discussion and lecture. Next meeting, May 17th; we are to hear Mr. T. Harrison (Altrincham) lecture on "Greens, and their breeding and management." I ask all members to attend as early as possible, so that we may get through the ordinary business in good time.

The annual ramble took place May 2nd, and proved very enjoyable. The party, consisting of thirty odd members and friends, met at Stockport, and our member, Mr. J. Beswick, conducted, by way of Offerton and Otterspool Bridge, through the Marple Hall Estate, and thence to Marple. After making arrangements for tea, the party made their way to the Lakes. We were rather early in the season for bird nesting, as the trees and bushes are rather backward this year, the scanty foliage not giving much cover for nesting preparations. After tea at Marple Bridge the party proceeded on foot to Stockport, by way of Compstall, Romdey and Bredbury. The return journey was more in the nature of a "route march" than a ramble, but was very much enjoyed by all (except those who returned from Marple by train). The advance party reached Stockport at 8.15 p.m., just in time to have one "small lemon" before the lights went out, and the journey to Manchester was completed by car, except by a few of the "stunts," who had got wound up and kept on walking. F. Hayward, Hon. Sec.

WIGAN ROLLER CLUB.

Meeting May 8, a good muster present. Mr. Ord elected a member. Unanimously decided to have an open contest on Dec. 4 if that date does not clash with other societies fixtures. Will Roller club secs. please reply if the above fixture interferes with their own to P. Greenall, Sec., 2, Short Street, Pemberton, Wigan.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Meeting at Kelvedon Hall, on May 20th, at 8 p.m., when it is hoped that all members, old and new, will turn up. The balance sheet will be read, and the debts of a late official settled and done with for ever. Arrangements for young bird show will be the next item, and there is other important business. Subs. are now due.—H. F. Bowring, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (East End) O.A.

Meeting Ap. 30, Parish School. Mr. A. McMillan presided before a fair turnout. Decided that we have F.F. show, in the Parish School, June 29, entries being left over to next meeting, also selecting of judge. Two new members were added. All members might turn out at next meeting with entries for the show, as it is our desire to make this show a success. Fanciers residing within area wishing to become members will be elected at next meeting, May 25.—D. Burnett, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, June 6, President chair. A record number turned up to hear Mr. H. W. Battye on the Yorkshire and Norwich. He dealt with all the chief points as only one of his standing can, and everyone present should be benefited. Some of his experience he gave in typical Yorkshire style, and caused much amusement. Various questions were asked, which he promptly answered. Mr. Drabble had on view a double egg, and by the size of it, egg-binding might have happened. Mr. Dransfield elected a member. Next meeting, Essay Competition. Essays to be written on one side of foolscap, under nom de plume, and forwarded to Sec. the Monday previous. Prizes, 3s., 2s. 1s.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY.

Meeting, April 28, Headquarters, with a good attendance; Mr. Bevan, chair. The deepest sympathy was tendered to our vice-chairman, Mr. A. H. C. Legg, in his very sad bereavement. Decided that we do not go to the Crystal Palace. Decided to have a ramble, May 19th, to Cowbridge, going by train from Penygraig Station. After business Mr. Greeves gave a lecture on the Norwich Canary, which proved very interesting. Several questions were asked, the lecturer answering in a very able manner. This brought a very pleasant evening to a close. Members please attend next meeting, as we have a lot of work on hand, also some subs. are overdue. Now, members, stick together.—J. S. Jones, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Waterloo Hotel, May 5; Mr. J. B. Hayter, chair. Sec. announced that all arrangements for forest ramble on June 9th were complete, and tickets on sale at 2s.; members please apply as soon as possible. Final arrangements and classification for F F. show, July 7, were settled; Mr. Hayson has kindly consented to judge. A table show of Brit. and Foreign was held; the entry was not large, but a champion lot of birds were staged. Special best bird went to Mr. W. J. Hartnell's grand light Mule, with Mr. Foyle's Goldf. a good second. The judging competition was won by Mr. J. B. Hayter. All arrangements were well carried out by the hard-working hon. secs., Mr W. L. Page, and, as usual, prize-money was paid out at close of show. Goldf.: 1, 3, Foyle; 2, Vale; vhc, Hartnell. Bullf.: 1, Slawson; 2, Vale. Linnet: 1, Mellmish, 2, Foyle; 3, Slawson. Redpoll, Etc.: 1, Vale. Greenf.: 1, Vale. A.O. Hardbill: 1, 2, Vale; 3, Slawson. Softbill: 1, 2, Slawson. Light Mule: 1, sp. 2, Hartnell. For.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, Slade.—G. Slade, Asst. Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER FANCY C.C.

Meeting, May 5, Pillar Cafe, Pink Lane, Newcastle, Mr. A. Allaeck presiding over a fairly good attendance. Mr. T. C. Crawhall gave an address upon Line Breeding. The lecturer said that so far as this system of scientific breeding was concerned, although he had experimented to a certain extent, he was speaking more from theoretical than practical experience. Line breeding had been found necessary, and was practised successfully, by breeders of high-class horses, cattle, dogs, poultry, etc. He did not want to give anyone the impression that by merely mating up a pair of birds and following this system the much-desired 1st and special would inevitably materialise, but given good stock to start with, combined with careful selection, an exhibition strain of Canaries could be built up and maintained with a greater degree of certainty than with many of the haphazard methods at present practised in the cage bird Fancy. He pointed out instances where fanciers had bought the first the show-bench had produced, and yet had not been able to breed a winner, and had either sold off or bought other winners, whereas if a system of scientific breeding had been adopted, the good points (face value) of the birds would in all probability have appeared in the progeny of the later matings. The lecturer here produced a chart which showed from one pair of birds the matings to be adopted over a period of five or six seasons, also the proportion of the parent blood contained in the progeny of each of these matings, the chart also showed the method to be adopted when introducing fresh blood when this became necessary. At the close Mr. Crawhall said that if any of the audience were not quite clear on any of the points he had dealt with, he would be pleased to explain them to the best of his ability, but his experience of lectures was that more information was gained, and the questions were fuller and freer if these took the form of a general discussion. The manner in which this was taken up—practically the whole of the company joining in—proved the interest the subject had aroused. Among the several points discussed were the question of inbreeding, and eccentricity of Cinnamon Ideal. Mr. Crawhall, in replying to the questions, said that line breeding was practically a scientific form of inbreeding, and he was convinced that to fix any desirable point in an exhibition strain it was absolutely necessary to practice this in some form or other. In moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Crawhall for his address, Mr. Potts said he was sure he was voicing the opinion of all in saying that the lecture was one one of the most instructive and interesting delivered under the auspices of the Northern Border Fancy Club. The vote of thanks was carried by the audience very heartily. Although the hour was late, several were loth to leave, so interested were they in the various points raised. It was decided to have a question night at next meeting, June 2nd. —C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting, May 3rd, Parish Hall, Mr. Bartlett chair, and a good muster, to hear a paper by Sec., Mr. King, on "Success and failure in breeding." Many excellent ideas were explained as helping towards success, and a number of theories in regard to failure were propounded by Mr. King. A very animated discussion followed, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to our secretary. Our annual ramble in Epping Forest takes place 15th May. Train from Liverpool Street to Loughton, 2.42. The party will assemble at Loughton Station, and those coming from intermediate stations will wait at Loughton until 3.20. Fanciers and friends are cordially invited to join us. A substantial meat tea at The Owl will be provided at a nominal figure.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Annual meeting, 3rd May, 47, York St., Dublin; Mr. P. Gillen, chair, and a fair attendance. Correspondence read from Messrs. Dowling and Devins. Secretary's statement read and treasurer's statement of accounts met with approval and passed unanimously. The suspension of two members by the outgoing council was dealt with, and it was decided that the council had fairly treated the matter according to rule, but for the interest of the fancy the case of one member was left to be decided by the incoming council, and the other suspension removed. Mr. Lattimore then handed in his resignation. Decided that the annual show be held 24th and 25th Nov. Messrs. Hyland and Keogh were elected scrutineers; Messrs. Shea and Harris elected members. Result of ballot for officers and council:—Patron, Mrs. M. F. O'Keeffe; pres., Mr. W. Keating; vice-pres., Messrs. J. E. Morgan and J. M. Barclay; hon. sec., C. Holley; hon. treas., W. C. Snoledice; council, Messrs. Burtinshaw, Magee, Gillen, Keogh, McKeon, Kelly, Mulcahy, Hyland, Kennedy, Farrell, McNally, and Power; provincial council, Messrs. Wheatley, Fleming, Devins, Lynch, Ryan, Byrne, Woods, and Smyth.—C. Lattimore, ex-Hon. Sec.

REARING YOUNG (Cock and Hen).—No, it is not correct to take a Yorkshire cock away from the hen the day the young are hatched, and this applies equally to any other breed. When he is to be taken away it should be done as soon as the clutch of eggs is complete, or rather, on the evening of the third day when you are putting the hen to sit. If not removed at that time, the hen will in many cases object to his removal afterwards, and her objection will take the form of refusing to sit at all. The only exception to his general rule is when the cock has been left with the hen during incubation and the hen refuses to feed the young after hatching. Then the cock may be taken away out of sight and earshot of the hen, which will compel her to leave the nest oftener for food and water, with the stray chance that she will pass on a bit of the food to the young when she returns. This will sometimes answer the purpose of getting a slack hen to perform her duties, but after all it is only to be looked upon as an experiment. (2) The chief points of rearing the young from the day they are hatched are to supply the parents regularly every day with egg food, or some soft food substitute. Give a little in the evening of the day before the young are expected, and afterwards give a fresh supply, in moderate quantity, fresh twice a day, morning and afternoon. On the third or fourth day give a little freshly gathered green food, and thenceforth give a little fresh every morning and afternoon, gradually increasing the quantity of both this and the soft food as the young grow and demand more food. If a large brood, a teaspoonful of soaked rape may be given separately daily, and when the young get about ten days old a little lightly cracked hemp may also be added daily. To get a more complete knowledge of the details, which cannot be entered into here, you should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free.

GRATING NOISE AND GASPING (Anxious).—The best advice I can give you is to reject both these birds for breeding. They are probably in an advanced stage of bronchial trouble, and in any case are quite unfit for breeding stock. You may ameliorate the condition, but it is by no means certain that you can cure it. (1) Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition, give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of some good seed mixture, and, once a week only, a teaspoonful of soft food. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food in variety. Every second day for a week add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and every second day for a fortnight after this give instead five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirit of nitre, then miss a week, and repeat it for another fortnight. (2) Treat this bird the same as the above, and be careful to see that neither of them is exposed to direct cold draughts, nor heated, unhealthy fumes, or a dusty atmosphere.

CLEAR EGGS AND DEAD EMBRYOS (E.C.).—It is quite easy to understand your case, as it is very typical of progressive weakness of the vital powers of the cock. When first mated the embryos in the first half of the clutches were sufficiently strong to hatch out, the later half of clutches being too weak to develop to this stage; with the second hens the powers had vanished, and clear eggs resulted. It may be that the real cause was that the cocks were late in coming into full vigour this season, and had in consequence not reached full virility when you mated them. In this case they will probably fill the second clutches all right, but it would be judicious to limit them to one hen this year, as it is doubtful whether they will be sufficiently vigorous to run with two hens with any material success.

DOUBTFUL SEX (Batley).—(1) My opinion is that the "cock" which sits so assiduously is in reality a hen, notwithstanding that it sings so much. It is not unusual for a cock to brood young or sit on eggs for a few minutes now and again, but, as a rule, they quickly tire of this tame affair, and it would be very exceptional indeed for one to take over the job in the way you say this bird has done. Unless very unmistakable proof to the contrary was available, I should certainly regard it as a hen. (2) This bird is probably suffering from weakness of the hind toe. Examine the feet to ascertain if this is so, and if you find it suffers from any loss of power to grip the perch, bathe the foot, or feet, as the case may be, in a warm solution of wych hazel a teaspoonful in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing for a few minutes, dry gently, and paint them over with a camel-hair brush dipped in tincture of arnica, and hold the bird a few moments whilst it dries. Also see that the perches are well-fitting, of a fair size to enable bird to grip easily, and a flattened oval on top, and round underneath. You may add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for a few days to cool the blood.

YOUNG DYING (A. M. Harper).—Sorry, but without much more detailed information as to any symptoms that might have been shown by the young prior to death, I cannot tell what might have been the cause of the young birds' deaths at the same age, both last year and this, from no apparent cause. In the absence of this, only a post-mortem of the remains could satisfactorily settle the question. As it occurred only with the first brood each year, it may have been due to a chill, or to some change in the food supplied, or to the hen neglecting the sanitary condition of the young, but, as you say she was feeding well, this does not seem very probable. Mere speculation is useless in such cases, and only the fullest knowledge of all the circumstances would enable me to suggest the probable cause.

DYING YOUNG (Scribbler).—(1) You do not say at what age you begin giving hemp, but if it is just before the young begin to die off, I have no hesitation in saying that, whatever might have been the cause in previous years, the hemp is probably the indirect cause of your losses now. A large proportion of it is rancid and thoroughly bad, and unfit to form any portion of the dietary of Canaries. The rape also has a slight odour of seed mites, and it is really infested with this pest, this, too, would be none too wholesome either for old or young. The hemp should be totally rejected, and the condition of the rape looked into. Then I see no reason why you should not succeed without any further alteration of your methods I do not think anything is to be gained by ringing the changes on the two foods you mention. The sample you send will do all that the two could do in the way of rearing young. Whilst using this food, you need not be afraid of giving a crisp young lettuce leaf daily after the young are about a week old, and if the hens show any laxity in feeding sprinkle the soft food with maw seed, and give a little soaked rape, but see that it is of good quality, and free from infestation by mites, daily. Then I think your difficulty will cease. (2) There is nothing to fear from adding a pinch of Epsom salts, or a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, to the water occasionally when the young are in the nest, provided you do not overdo it.

A HASH (W.B.).—Judging from your description, I should say the eggs were unfertile, so the misfortune with them is of no great moment. Possibly the cock was not in very good condition when mated, though he may be quite vigorous enough to fill the next clutch of eggs, so it is a mere matter of taste which of the two cocks you use for the next brood. If the one you used last is a clear bird, he is the most suitable mate so far as colour is concerned. The other one will give you little, if anything, but more or less heavily variegated young. Still, you would not do amiss to use the one that is in most vigorous song, and best breeding condition. Give the first one a small teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, a little mixed seed on two other days, and a little dandelion daily.

W. McC.—Replied to by post.

SAMPLE OF RAPE (A. F.).—The sample of rape submitted is of good quality, and excellently matured, and is perfectly safe to use this breeding season. It, however, seems to be a trifle dusty, and would, therefore, be all the better for a little "brushing," or polishing, if the bulk appears to be very dusty, though this is not absolutely essential.

TO BRING ON SONG (White Rose).—(1) It would be exceptional for an adult hen to feed another hen when put together, in the same way as a cock would ordinarily feed a hen when mated with her, but it would be going a trifle too far to doubt the possibility of such a thing. Still, if a doubtful cock fed a known hen when mated with her, it would be fairly strong proof that it was a cock, if that is what your question aims at. To speed them up a bit, give the pair every second day for a time a teaspoonful of egg-food with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days give a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle, with a slight sprinkling of mustard seed. Give a young growing stool of dandelion daily, or a liberal supply of the seed heads and blooms of dandelion. (2) At this season the treatment advised for the pair in No. 1 should be quite sufficient to bring any normally healthy cock into full, vigorous song. Try that treatment for a week or two, and you might also add to the drinking water every second day for a week as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon-juice. No other treatment should be necessary if the bird is really a cock and in normal health.

BREEDING ROLLERS (Govanite).—Thanks for particulars. As the cock does not seem to be at all trustworthy during the period of incubation, I think you would do best to take him away as before when the hen has laid her third egg, and, if convenient, keep him out of sight and earshot of the hen until the young are reared. When the young are hatched next time follow the instructions in "Canary Breeding," which you say you have, and use the mixture of equal parts egg yolk, crushed sponge cake and stale bread crumbs as soft food. Begin to give green-food on the third day, and if she shows any signs of slacking at once begin to give her a little crisp young lettuce twice a day. Also offer a little soaked rape daily from a week old, but be careful that it is not allowed to become sour. At ten days old, not earlier, begin to give a little lightly cracked hemp daily, but here again be careful to see that it is quite sound and good in the kernel, otherwise do not use any at all. I certainly have a preference for good home-made egg-food. One can always know the freshness of it, and it is after all very little trouble to prepare. If the hen still seems sluggish add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda to the water for three days.

HEN OVER-FEEDING (Trier).—(1) You can certainly do very little to correct the over-feeding habit of the Yorkshire hen which is mated for breeding, as you cannot in such a case limit the quantity of food supplied. What I would advise is that you cut out the hemp, niger and linseed entirely from the general diet. Give a simple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet, and give the other seeds only as a tit-bit in quite small quantities not more than three times a week. You might also add to the water every second day for a week as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon-juice, then miss a week, and repeat it again for another week, if necessary. (2) No, I do not think it necessary, nor even advisable, to spray a hen that will not bathe during the breeding season. Offer the bath, and let it stay on the cage for an hour or so, every day, and if her mate bathes, or any other bird that she can see or hear, she will probably not be long before she so far mends her ways as to bathe as freely as any other.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

GOLDFINCH LOSING FLIGHTS (Mrs. E. L. Knight).—We frequently have cases of captive birds losing their tail feathers, but the loss of flights at regular periods is rather rare, and points to some want of vigour, which I think you should be able to improve by treatment. I have carefully examined the feathers sent, and beyond a certain dryness of the quills I can detect nothing unusual about them; but, then, this dryness is possibly the cause of them becoming loose in their sockets and eventually falling out. I am sorry you did not send me your mode of feeding; anyway, make up the following mixture: Teazle 4 parts, canary 3 parts, hemp 2 parts, and summer rape ½ part. Give him this as a staple food, then mix niger, thistle, and dandelion 2 ozs. each, lettuce, gold of pleasure and maw, 1 oz. each; and let him have a teaspoonful of this three times a week and a little sunflower on the other days. You should now also be feeding him liberally upon wild food, such as dandelion seed heads, chickweed, groundsel, seeding grass, and others as they come in season. Procure from your chemist some compound syrup of phosphates of the best quality, and mix half a teaspoonful with one ounce of boiled water. Let him have this three times a week, mixing it fresh in the morning and removing at night. Encourage the bird to bathe as frequently as possible.

CHAFFINCH WITH DEFORMED FEET (G.R.D.).—It sometimes happens that if a captive bird is out of condition its feet become affected, but fanciers who have had considerable experience are seldom troubled with feet ailments among their birds. Therefore it is evident that the trouble arises through improper treatment. Now the Chaffinch is one of the easiest birds to mismanage I know of, and the majority of people feed him exclusively on seeds, whereas his diet should consist largely of insects, ants' eggs, and a little soft food in addition to mixed seeds, etc. If you do not happen to have our Nutshell booklet on the Chaffinch, I would advise you to procure it at once, so that you will be able to give him the proper treatment. As regards the trouble in the feet, you had better bathe them in fairly warm water twice a day and anoint them with a little vaseline into which has been mixed a drop or two of paraffin. Hold the bird in such a position that the leg is free, and then, with the finger and thumb of the other hand, gently massage the foot and toes. If this is done daily the bird should recover the use of the foot. Keep him in as good health as you possibly can. No doubt the cause of the toes becoming twisted is that he has for the time being lost the use of them.

BREEDING BIRDS IN AVIARIES (W. Godfrey Pigott).—It is, as you remark, rather late to breed in your aviaries this season, as you have no birds in stock. Having all the summer to get ready, you could utilise it to advantage in procuring young birds of the year suitable for future operations. These you could possibly get as nestlings, and hand-rear them, or as "branchers," that is, young ones that have just left the nest and are consequently easily trained and not difficult to manage. Suitable species for the purpose would be Greenfinches, Linnets, Goldfinches, and hen Bullfinches. These could be used next season for Hybrid breeding, either by crossing among themselves or using with Canaries. All the Hybrids between two British birds are valuable, as they are somewhat difficult to get, and the Canary crosses are marketable stock, good specimens being valuable as show birds. The buying of your Canaries you could leave until the autumn, unless you would like to take a sporting chance and try to breed some now. If you procured a cock Norwich and two or three hens at once there is time for them to rear one or even two broods, and the young hens would be useful, and in addition to this it would be a little experience in the management of breeding birds in aviaries. When you have definitely decided upon your line of operations I shall be pleased to assist you in any little matter concerning British birds, or the production of Hybrids.

NOT SINGING MUCH (G. A. Shaw).—You write to say your Linnet is no better, and yet you say he is singing, but not much. When you wrote last time he was ill, so there certainly must be some improvement. My advice is to continue the same treatment, but discontinue the linseed and give half a spoonful of crushed hemp twice a week. Collect plenty of wild seed, such as chickweed, dandelion head, shepherd's purse, and seeding grass. All these are good for him, and being natural food can scarcely be overdone. Repeat the medicine occasionally, and see that he has boiled water only to drink. Let him bathe every day if he will; it braces the bird up and is as good or better than a tonic.

MULE BREEDING (E. W., Anglesey).—You must cultivate a little more patience if you desire to be a successful Hybrid breeder. Birds do not care about mating with other species, and many of them refuse to do so until compelled by nature. Probably by the time this is in print your hen will have gone to nest. The majority of Finches are rather late breeders, and your bird may not be quite fit, although by all outward appearances he is so. You cannot do better than continue with your present treatment. If the Goldfinch is very destructive, shut him off during the day and let him run with the hen for half-an-hour or so night and morning.

MULING QUESTIONS (Norwich Crest).—A cock Goldfinch or Canary may be in full song and yet, when turned in with a hen leave off singing immediately. If your bird has a clear beak and does what you say about swaggering and spreading his tail, he is in breeding trim. They will go to nest when the hen is ready. The change of room may have thrown her back somewhat. (2) A healthy cock Greenfinch should be quite fit now, although he may not sing to her or feed the hen. If you are not always with them, they may mate without your knowing it. Let her sit on the eggs. You can examine them when she has been on them a week. (3) There is plenty of time for your hen Greenie to nest. Give a little egg food, mixed seed, and dandelion heads and other wild seeds. (4) If your hen Bullie is still wild after she has been caged twelve months, I am doubtful about her nesting and sitting. Your best plan would be to keep plenty of moss or sawdust on the floor of the cage, fix the perches low down, and collect the eggs to place under hen Canaries. She may possibly steady down when she commences to lay, but she would doubtless be too nervous to incubate successfully or rear.

SEXING YOUNG (Cocks or Hens).—In a general way the largest, boldest-looking, and overbearing birds in the nest will prove to be cocks. They are also more dominating and pushful, so that by the time they are about half fledged they more or less eclipse the hens both in size and demeanour, and are the so-called "top birds" in the nest. At feeding times they monopolise the parents' attention more completely until their own wants are satisfied, so that the hens are usually the last to be crying out for food. But these are only general guides, and must not be taken as quite infallible. In adult birds in breeding condition the vent of the cock is more pointed and protuberant, but this difference is not applicable to young birds.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

DOVES (Teddingworth).—Both the species you refer to are Turtle Doves. The "tame, stone-coloured doves with a ring round the neck" are Barbary Turtle Doves. The Turtle or Common Turtle Dove is about the same size, but is of a darker hue, has chequered wings, and a patch of black, spotted with white, on either side of the neck. The latter may often be seen in English woods and pastoral districts. Both species interbreed fairly readily in captivity, and the resulting hybrids are a pleasing combination of both species and are mostly fertile. The Barbary Turtle Dove is not difficult to keep at liberty, similarly to fancy pigeons in rural districts.

CUTTHROATS (F.G.).—When these birds are feeding young supply the usual seeds, also some dried or live ants' eggs, according to season, and a little of some good make of insectile mixture—several good ones are advertised in our pages. Green-food should be supplied fresh twice daily throughout the breeding season to all Foreign Finches—seeding and flowering grass, chickweed, groundsel, and other garden weeds. I have placed these in the order of merit. The young should be removed as soon as they are able to fend for themselves. Do not meddle with the nest or young till the young have flown, unless you see a dead fledgling; then take the opportunity of removing it as unobtrusively as possible.

BISHOP AND SINGING FINCH (H.S.)—It is hard to say; all creatures are more or less social, but Bishops certainly do well and appear content with single blessedness. A bachelor Bishop or Weaver keeps very busy weaving, and does as much rampant chattering as the mated one. Mates are not always easy to procure for some of these, and more especially so in these troubled times. The Grey Singing Finch is an African species, hardy, and most males are very sweet songsters.

BUDGERIGARS (Mrs. Shears).—As regards your Budgerigars, there is not really room for another pair in your cage, but I think you had better put another pair in, so that one pair may stimulate the other; then, as soon as they have settled down to breeding, only retain the steadiest and most prolific pair, and, of course, the young must be given other quarters as soon as they are able to fend for themselves. Your Parrot is a Slender-billed Cockatoo, usually rather a dull species and apt to scream, but I have come across individuals which talked fairly well. The extra length of the upper mandible is natural. If you add maize to the seed mixture given in the reply to "F.C.L.D.," April 24, it will meet the requirements of your bird. Also supply dry crusts, pieces of biscuit, nuts in variety, ripe fruit, such as apple, banana, etc. Keep cuttlebone, grit and wood for it to cut up continually in the cage.

RED-CRESTED CARDINAL (Miss B.).—A seed mixture of canary and white millet seed as staple diet, any kind of ripe fruit it will take, green food, and two or three mealworms or other insects per diem. It is a restless, active species, and should have a roomy cage. They are hardy and usually do well if not subjected to a chill. Of course, it is understood that the essentials—cuttlebone, grit, and water for drinking and bathing—will be regularly supplied.

ZEBRA FINCHES, ETC. (F. B. C.).—(1) Zebra Finches often rear on seed alone, with liberal supplies of green-food. At this time they are partial to a few mealworms, and you should also supply a little of some good make of insectile mixture. (2) Very few on the market now, but an advert. may procure you a pair from private sources—present value about 15s. (3) If you turn up your "B.N." for 1914, pages 314 and 337, and adopt the method given there, you should succeed—impossible to give full details in this column, at about seven days. (4) Internal irritation: give one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water, then lightly colour the water with chemical for four days, after which repeat the magnesia, and so on till the bird is in good order again.

SINGING FOREIGNERS (J. F. Bennett). The following would be about your best: I take it you only require cocks, merely a cageful of attractive pets with some song. Abyssinio Finch 7s. 6d. to 10s.; Green Singingfinch 5s.; Avadavat 3s. 6d.; Grey

Singingfinch, plain in colour, but a sweet songster, 5s.; Black-headed Siskin 30s.; Hooded Siskin, 50s. to 60s.; St. Helena Waxbill 5s. There are other beautiful birds, such as Cordon Bleus, Firefinches, Gold-breasted Waxbills, diamond Finch, Gouldian Finch, Long-tailed and Masked Grassfinches, but these have not much song. Other gorgeous birds are the Weavers, such as Madagascar, Orange, Grenadier, and Napoleon, which wear a gorgeous nuptial garment during the breeding season, but have quite plain plumage during the winter. These chirp rather noisily, and are not very musical, but they weave wonderful nests, even in a cage if supplied with hay and grass, and cost from 5s. to 10s. each. You must supply white and Indian millet and millet sprays, in addition to the Canary mixture, greenfood, such as chickweed, groundsel, seeding, and flowering grass, etc.; foreign finches are very fond of seeding and flowering grass. Please note that queries received after first post Monday cannot possibly be answered in the next issue. (See Rule 6.)

RED AND GREY GALAH (Bostie).—Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo, and hails from Australia. If your bird is a decent talker, you have not paid an excessive price for it, but untrained and newly-imported specimens can usually be procured for a few shillings. Some Roseates make good talkers, others scarcely utter a word; they are mostly, however, very chummy, droll birds, and also very hardy. If the bird offered you is really a talker, it is not dear at the price asked, but you should have it on appro. (deposit system), so as to test it and ascertain if it has any vices such as screaming, etc., before concluding the purchase.

SIZE AND VALUE (F. B.).—It is impossible to give other than very approximate values in this present war-time. The size, total length is given in inches, and covers from tip of beak to end of tail. Below, "T.L."—total length, "t"—tail, and "v"—value per pair. Budgerigar, T.L. 7½, t. 4, v. 5s. 6d. upwards; Cockateel, T.L. 12½, t. 6½, v. 15s.; Red-rump, T.L. 12, t. 6½, v. 60s. The Lovebirds (Agapornis) do not vary much; the Madagascar, Abyssinian, Red-faced or headed, Black-cheeked, and Peach or Rosy-faced all vary from T.L. 5½ to 6½, t. 1½ to 2, v. in order named 5s., 80s., 60s., 50s., 100s. Of the smaller Parrakeets, the Passerine (Blue-winged Lovebird), T.L. 5, t. 1½, v. 25s.; All-Green, T.L. 10, t. 5, v. 30s.; Orange-winged, T.L. 9½, t. 4½, v. 50s.; Yellow-winged, T.L. 8¾, t. 4½, v. 50s.; Tovi, T.L. 7¾, t. 3, v. 42s.; Tui, T.L. 7, t. 2½, v. 45s.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1 1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.) "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Acadavuts," No. 17 "The Grey Porrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

I must again remind you that in present unsettled conditions prices may rule higher than those stated. There are others, but they are hardly likely to be procurable under present condition. The description of the male Red-rump is as follows: General colour bright green, rump crimson, wings variegated with blue and yellow, centre of abdomen yellow, tail green, variegated with blue, greyish-white and brown. The female is much duller, grey and browner than her mate. They have a pugnacious reputation, and there is a risk in keeping them with smaller species, though in roomy aviaries I have known them to be successfully kept in mixed series, but the element of risk is always there.

SMALL GARDEN AVIARY (A.R.P.).—The sum you name does not allow of much, but if you are able to construct it yourself and can spend all your money on material, a useful and practical structure should be possible. It is not possible for me to give you a plan in this column, but if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope and a rough sketch (ground plan) of your garden, indicating where you would like to place it, I shall be pleased to send you a rough sketch and plan to work from. If you have a wall you can build against, that will be an advantage, as the wall will form the back of the aviary; better still, if you have a corner you can use, with two walls at right angles to each other, the materials required will be still further reduced. You should also give me some idea what you desire to keep in it.

BEARDED REEDLING (E.E.B.).—Keep the temperature of your room as even as possible. Put eight drops of cod-liver oil emulsion on the daily supply of soft food mixture and well mix together. If the bowels are not moving freely, moisten the soft food for one day with one-third of a teaspoonful of fluid magnesia, and repeat as necessary to keep the motions easy without undue looseness. Get a mixture of ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts. Stir half a teaspoonful into the drinking water daily till the cold yields, then put the bird on a course of phosphates for a month, so as to tone it up.

BUDGERIGARS (Esperance).—For draughty quarters an all-wire cage is rather undesirable, but one has to make the best use of one's opportunities, and in a wire cage 3ft. x 2ft. you should ultimately have some success. Of course, in a cage a single pair will often take a full year to settle down before commencing nesting. Both the summer and winter arrangements you mention should answer fairly well; in fact, with a cover put round the cage at night, they would take no hurt in the unheated room, except during extremely severe periods. Yes, you would have to sell the young as soon as they could fend for themselves, but, as when they have once started nesting, Budgies rear several broods in the course of the year, you would have a family daily to watch almost continuously. You should get a decent pair of mutated Green Budgerigars at from 5/6 to 7/6. As long as you can get it untainted with frost, supply seeding and flowering grass liberally. The book will fully enlighten you upon all other points.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

GENUINE talking Parrots.—We have a fine lot of Green Amazon and South African Greys, acclimatised, linger tame, perfect talkers and mimics; prices from 50/- to £10 each; kindly state wants; all birds sold subject to approval: Walsh, Bird Specialist, Blackburn. (292)

COKERNUT husk nests for Budgerigars, etc., were originated, imported and sold by me 25 years ago; they remain unequalled and reliable; parks, zoos, and trade supplied, 5/- dozen; smaller quantities, 6d. each: Harper, Husk Importer, 300, Dudley-rd., Tividale, Tipton, Staffs. (267)

"SACCHO", cleverest African Grey talking Parrot for disposal, price reasonable for one "second to none," no dealers wanted, but correspondence from anyone bona-fide and really wanting and willing to pay fair price for "one of the best," desired by owner: William Pool, Gainsborough. (291)

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published).

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 5/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page F.Z.S. Get it at once, 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

ADVERTISEMENT CHARGES.

6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.
Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

SUPERIOR EGG AND COLOUR FOODS

The best the fancier has ever known. "Eggcr-line," which rears Canaries far better than any other preparation known, is made from new laid English eggs, and not useless dried yolk of egg, has also many other valuable ingredients. 1/3 and 2/6 per tin, post free; it can also be all ready mixed and made into a red or yellow feed ready for use without any preparation by the user; same price. My Red Feeds at 1/10 per lb., 1/- ½lb., postage extra, are unsurpassable. Kept in the original air and dust-proof tins, thus insuring all their fullest properties. The "Excelsior Blend" is the finest Red Feed ever put on to the market; it is the reddest colour produced procurable, being a correct mixture of hot pepper and sweet. Samples of this feed free, or samples of any above, with pamphlet on colour-feeding, etc., two stamps: Rudd, Specialist, Norwich. (302)
